WILLIAM STARK STREAK ENDS AFTER 14,876 DAYS By: Mark Washburne

Dr. William S. Stark, 69, a Professor of Biology at Saint Louis University in Missouri, has ended his four decades long running streak. "Today, Friday June 2, 2017 was the last day of my run every day streak that started September 10, 1976," said Dr. Stark in a statement to Streak Runners International (SRI) and the United States Running Streak Association (USRSA). "I was escorted to this finish line through a week of beautiful mornings (except for the pain) running half of my usual distance (about 35 minutes daily). I had surgery for a hernia, and I intend to obey the doctor's orders because I hope to eventually get back to running every day that wonderful distance (about 40 miles per week) that makes me feel so good. For everybody who told me how amazing my record was, I have replied that I certainly was amazed myself. It has been fun to boast to people about my record, but perhaps the best part of that was to serve as an inspiration to others. It will be great, after a hiatus, to enjoy jogging without hurting (hopefully), and so I will bid the streak farewell, grateful that I had the opportunity that I had."

Dr. Stark's running streak lasted 14,876 days (40 years, 266 days) and was the ninth longest active running streak in the world when it ended. It is now listed as the fifth longest retired running streak in the United States and sixth longest retired streak in the world. Dr. Stark had previously notified SRI/USRSA that as of 31 December 2016 he had covered 97,400 streak miles and 107,400 lifetime miles during his illustrious running career. We here at Streak Runners International and the United States Running Streak Association wish Dr. Stark a speedy recovery and much success in the future.

BILL FINKBEINER'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 13,679 DAYS By: Bill Finkbeiner Auburn, California

Unfortunately my streak ended with my run on June 13, 2017. As you probably read, I was hit by a bicycle from behind and driven into the asphalt and gravel edge of the levee on which I was walking with five friends.

Within the first seconds of consciousness, the streak was on my mind. I didn't realize the extent of my injuries at that time. I had extremely great care, first from my friends and first responders and since by the staff at UCD Med Center in Sacramento and my family now that I'm home.

As fellow streakers will understand, I held out some hope until the last minutes of that next day. I was wheeled back into ICU from a thumb surgery at 11:40 pm on the 14th, looked at the clock and finally knew for certain that my streak was retired. A reasonable person (unlike a streaker) would have known many hours sooner.

My injuries include: loss of two front teeth, fracture of left thumb and additional fracture in left hand, fracture of skull, nose and several orbital fractures around my left eye, many facial lacerations and a lot of road rash. But today, two weeks since the accident, I actually feel pretty good. My road rash and facial injuries have mostly healed already. The headaches are almost gone and I'm down to using no medication but some Tylenol. The big thing keeping me down is my hamstring pain. It may be from too long with no use or possibly a result of the impact.

I am so eager to be back out on the trails but know it will still be some time before I'm able. I will be keeping track of the rest of you and celebrating your milestones when they come.

Traversing the Tundra in Cities and Metropolitan Areas By: Steve DeBoer

With well over 1000 documented streak runners in the US, I thought it would be interesting to see which cities contain larger contingents of us. I found 16 cities with at least 7 of us (not all currently active). Of course, these cities vary in size, so the per capita rates of those running daily differs from the order when using the actual numbers. The top 5 number-wise are Rochester (17), Portland (14), and St. Paul, Phoenix & Minneapolis (13). As for percentage-wise, the top 5 (if we include some smaller cities with at least 5 runners that have at least 10,000 population) are Fergus Falls (751 per million), Rochester (151.4 per million), Littleton, CO (7 for 150.9 per million), Huntsville, TX (6 for 146.5 per million), and St. Paul (43.2 per million). If only counting those currently active, Fergus Falls and Rochester have 8, with Portland at 7.

Fergus Falls stands out in many ways, having the coldest weather of the cities mentioned and having the highest percentage of related runners (60%) and highest percentage that know each other (80%, as the Mathiesens know the Thorsons). Though he moved from Fergus to AZ after a few years, it is also the town where the person who has run the most miles during his running streak (Craig Davidson, who had run 202,387 streak miles as of the end of 2016). I also just learned that Scott Tonneson, new streak runner from St. Paul, is the brother-in-law of Mike Thorson, so 7 members of that family can claim to be running daily, most of any family. The Pearsons and Eshelmans each have 5, though not all currently running daily.

There are several communities under 10,000 population that have 3 streak runners, often related. The Wallaces (John, John Jr & Karen) have lived in Ishpheming, MI, so the rate there is 463 per million. The Roemers (John II, John III, and Mary) have lived in Parkton, MD, a rate of 457 per million. The Schultz trio (Susan, Zoe & Caitlin) have lived in Timonium, MD, with their rate being 403 per million. There are 3 runners who reside in Menominee, MI, which gives that town a rate of 349 per million. One other town with 3 that has a rate over 300 is Columbia City, where the Eshlemans (Eliza, Peter and Peter Jr.) have lived. And I cannot neglect to mention that if we put Mendham Township and Mendham Borough (NJ) together, there are 4 streak runners with a population of almost 11,000, so the rate there, led by President Mark Washburne, is 369 per million!

Other cities with at least 7 who have run daily are New York City (9 - 6 active), Dallas (8 - 6 active), Fort Worth (10 - 5 active), Albuquerque (7 - 6 active), Pittsburgh (7 - 6 active), Atlanta (7 - 4 active), Chicago (7 - 4 active), Seattle (7 - 2 active), Las Vegas (7 - 1 active).

But when we look at cities, many of them are part of larger metropolitan areas (MSAs), so it makes sense to look at the numbers that way as well. For most of them, I looked at CSAs (Combined Statistical Areas, which are somewhat larger than the MSAs) and was able to find population data in 2015 or 2016 for the ones I have listed. Here are the top 26 number-wise, followed by the top 25 percentage-wise (for those areas with at least 7 daily runners) with area populations over 500,000.

PS. On June 7th, I reached 46 years of running a minimum of 1 mile daily, doing 8 miles by my home in and around Rochester, MN, before bicycling to work. That also happens to be National Global Running Day, as well as the birthday of two Roger Nelsons, one of whom is a streak runner living in TX, the other, who very sadly died last year, was also known as Prince.

Then, on July 20th, I celebrated 47 years of daily running (many runs under one mile that first year, so not official for USRSA purposes), traversing 10 miles of hot, humid tundra in and around Montezuma, IA (fortunately with no revenge), first time doing an anniversary run in IA. I was there visiting relatives and doing genealogy research (2 sets of my great-great-great grandparents lived there). The 79 degrees F on the downtown thermometer part-way through my run was the warmest I have experienced this year. Though many in more southern states deal with this daily, I find this type of weather really slows me down, going at 10-11 minute mile pace. There is a reason I live in the North!

CLEMSON UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR TO STUDY STREAKERS By: Dr. Danny Weathers, Ph.D.

[Editors note: Dr. Danny Weathers, an Associate Professor of Marketing at Clemson University, recently contacted SRI/USRSA requesting that we participate in a survey about streak runners. We agreed to participate in his study and will be distributing the survey to our members in the near future.]

I'm still putting together a survey for the streak runners [email dated 14 August 2017]. In the meantime, I was curious about the types of people who have running streaks, as well as when they started the streaks. I analyzed the most recent active running streak list. A summary of the results are below. You may already have this, but if not, feel free to include the results below in the next newsletter.

772 active streaks

Gender: 28.5% female, 71.5% male

Most common profession: Educator (17.2%) (I grouped various professions such as high school teacher, college professor, principal, etc. into this category)

Second most common profession: Healthcare provider (9.2%) (Includes doctors, nurses, and others directly involved in providing healthcare)

Most common state: California and Minnesota (both 8.6%), followed by Texas (6.2%)

Average length of streak: 3151 days

Most common month for starting a streak: January (19.2%), followed by December (16.7%)

Most common day of the month for starting a streak:  $1^{st}$  (19.0%) followed by the  $26^{th}$  (5.6%)

Most common day of the week for starting a streak: Thursday (16.3%), but all days had at least 12% (very evenly distributed)

Percentage of streaks starting on January 1: 13.0%

Average age of runners: 48.2 years (youngest was 7, oldest was 84)

DARIO MIRSKI'S SECOND STREAK HITS 1 YEAR

I have completed on May 25th the first year of my second streak. I ran a total of 1289 miles during the last year, and I completed enough races to achieve my third USATF Phidippides Gold award during 2016.

I also had the opportunity to run it in many cities around the world and the USA during this streak (e.g. Buenos Aires, Berlin, Osaka, San Francisco)

Still enjoying running with my friends of the Do Run Running Club in Randolph, NJ on Saturdays and in races.

> Dario Mirski Randolph, New Jersey

[Editor's note: Unfortunately, Dr. Dario Mirsky's second streak ended on 23 June 2017.]

DIANE SHUMWAY'S STREAK HITS 17 YEARS

My streak is safely secure. I haven't done anything really exciting this year, unless you count running on three different cruise ships. One ship had a fantastic track which was measured and marked so runners could keep track of their time. It also ran the entire length of the ship which is not typical. We had a great time running on that cruise! Here is to another wonderful year.

ANGELA SCHINGECK'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I truly cannot believe I've been running at least a mile for the last three years! I really thought the flu would've gotten me, but apparently I'm one tough cookie! As of August 16th, marked 3 years of running at least a mile everyday!!!

RSD# 1,096, I've ran 2,228mi (yes I just ran to make that an even number)!

I could not have done this without the motivation from family and friends! Thank you all!!!

Angela Schingeck Menominee, Michigan

SKYLAR GLANDON'S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

I am still in. Yes my steak is still active.

Skylar Glandon Kearney, Nebraska

TOM WATKINS' STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

Another year flew by! Nothing exceptional to report. I averaged 4 miles per day with 95% of it on state park trails. Zero days sick and the only injury was a lost toenail that was helped by cutting a hole in my shoe. I am trying to run out doors as much as possible and have gotten a full rainsuit to repel rain. I put duct tape on the top of my shoes to keep my feet dry. It looks goofy but it works.

Tom Watkins Virginia Beach, Virginia

DARYL BRUBAKER'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

This past year has been a lot of fun. This spring, I dug into trails for the first time and completed my first ultra (Promised Land 50k). Last fall, I ran a marathon PR in Richmond, but still fell short of my stretch goal. I hope to come back in DC with a strong run at Marine Corp this fall. There were a couple rough patches--running with pneumonia and post-race recovery runs. However, my constant is the steak that keeps steadily rolling along. I hope that 2 years is just the beginning.

Daryl Brubaker Timberville, Virginia

LOIS BASTIEN KEEPS WORLD LONGEST FEMALE STREAK ACTIVE AFTER HUSBAND'S STROKE

Thank you for the article about reaching my thirty-seventh year. Ron, my husband, had a stroke in January when we were on a cruise. When we docked in Fort Lauderdale he was taken to the hospital where he was for three weeks.

Fort Lauderdale is over 300 miles from Pinellas Park. He had to be brought by ambulance to a rehab here, where he has been until April 19th. He is now home and doing well.

My family made sure I didn't miss my run. They thought Ron would really be mad at himself if he was the reason I would miss.

Lois Bastien Pinellas Park, Florida

SARAH MILLER'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I celebrated my 40th birthday last fall by running 4 marathons in 4 months (Sept - Dec 2016).

So far in 2017 I've done 2 more full marathons and 2 half marathons and looking forward to Relay Iowa with team Slithy Toves the weekend of June 9th.

On my 4-year streak anniversary I ran a nice easy 4 miles!! Love this group and the motivation all the great runners provide, looking forward to making it to 5 years!!

DANIEL BRUCE JOINS USRSA

If you were to run a Google search for "runner's runner," my picture would come up immediately with the descriptor "not him." I have been modestly athletic throughout my life (sporadic running, outdoor stuff like hiking, and a 4th degree black belt in Shaolin Kempo karate), but the downfall has always been my schedule as a performer (pianist and community orchestra conductor) and teacher. Every wellmeaning resolution and new challenge would eventually fall prey to my schedule. I would start running consistently and then December would hit. Concerts. Blizzards. "I'll do it tomorrow," which, as we all know, is the beginning of the end.

I spoke with a student of mine who was on the third year of her streak. She is an avid runner, and this seemed to work well for her. The more I asked about it, the more I saw that this might be a way to hold myself accountable. After all, I reasoned, even at my worst I should be able to trudge out a mile. I spoke with another friend (and accomplished runner) who was supportive, saying one has to be a bit obsessive when starting something new.

So I became obsessive. Starting was rough, as I was worried about injury, and my body took awhile to acclimate to the constant pounding.

I have increased my daily minimum from a mile to just under two, and I have stuck with it for a year now — in temperatures from 90 to 20-below; in torrential downpours, fog, ice, mud, and blizzards. I run longer distances (usually 3-5 miles) at least twice weekly, and have been able to maintain this through a rigorous performing season.

My friends want me to compete in more races, but I don't know ... for me, the answer is in the day-to-day regimen with no excuses.

Daniel Bruce East Montpelier, Vermont

KEVIN BRAMAN'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

My streak is alive and well. I ran another marathon this year (up to 6 total, but I'm retired from marathons just joined my wife for her first). I also mostly ran races for Ainsley's Angels this past year which gives the opportunity to those that can't to participate in races. Probably my favorite race was a 200 mile relay road race that I did for the first time. My team was made up of mostly first responders (police, fire, EMT, etc...) and then me as a supporter. No end in sight!

JOHN SCHUERZINGER'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I am happy to announce that today marks my 3-year anniversary of running every day! I've run 9.512 miles in the past 1,097 days. The highlight of 2017 so far was running the 144-hr/6-day option of 3 Days At The Fair in Augusta, NJ. This was the same event in which John Wallace Jr and John Wallace III each hit their 10,000th streak day. It was great to be there in person to see it happen. In addition to the 6-day race, my running streak has included two 72hr races, four 100-milers, and several 24-hr races (fixed-time races have become my favorite over the years). Looking forward to what the next 3 years and beyond have in store for me!

JAY KAMMERZELL'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Thanks for the reminder that I have passed 5 years on this running streak. Although there have been times when I have questioned whether to continue or not, I seem to just keep on going. This streak is very modest with many slow runs, often only a couple miles. I recently turned 60 and have been running daily for the better part of the last 45 years. I am in awe of the people on the top of the streak list who can go for so long without missing a day!

I began running in 7th grade when I joined the track team because I wanted to play a sport and didn't really have the coordination to play basketball or volleyball. I stuck with running and added cross-country when I got to high school. I've been running ever since.

Yes, there were a few gaps (college years, pregnancies, etc.) but I've always come back to it. As I've aged, I've actually gotten more competitive and more serious about it.

I started my streak with the idea of running every day for a month. When the month ended, I realized that I liked the consistency of running daily and decided to keep going until I either couldn't or just didn't want to. Luckily, neither has happened yet! I do all my miles outside since I don't own a treadmill but I do run both road and trail to keep it interesting.

Because I'm competitive and need to set goals, I also race fairly frequently  $(5K - \frac{1}{2})$  marathon). I've run 3 marathons: one in 2003, one in 2013, where I qualified for Boston, and then Boston in 2015.

I prefer the training for ½ marathons but I haven't ruled out tackling another marathon (or even an ultra?) at some point.

Yes, my streak hit 6 years today. I have 1457 miles for the year going for 2000 miles for the year, which would give me at least 2000 miles every year since 1960. I did have one day where I had food poisoning and it was tough to get 1.2 miles in but otherwise it has been a good year.

SUSIE STRACHOTA'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

It's been a busy year for me with lots of changes, but running has been one of the consistent parts of my life. Last year I celebrated my streak in Singapore. Since then I've traveled even more, become engaged, married, and moved two times. This year I celebrate my streak in St. Petersburg, FL--my husband and I moved here the day after our honeymoon.

We've been in Florida for almost a month, and running isn't quite the same because I'm still adjusting to the heat. Also I'm pregnant (woo hoo!), so I've been fighting some nausea and fatigue. Despite that I'm still out there everyday, chugging along.

If there are any streak moms (or moms to be) out there, I'd love to hear tips on running while pregnant: sstrachota@gmail.com

I started jogging when I was a teenager growing up in Georgia. I will never forget completing my first road race. I finished the Peachtree Road Race in Atlanta, Georgia while in High School.

It wasn't until I was in my late 30's that I started to run again, but this time I was logging my time, distance, pace, wind, temperature, precipitation into my running log for training purposes. My long runs topped off at 17 miles.

My running year-around in Alaska taught me how to run in less than ideal running conditions considering the dark and cold winters. Then, I stopped running for about a decade.

Most recently, I completed a 5K in 2015, and I have completed five 5Ks, three 10Ks, and two half marathons in 2016. I have completed six races this year with three being half marathons, and I am registered to run my first marathon later this year in October.

GEORGE SCHROEDER'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 550 DAYS

Hey, this is George Schroeder. I'm currently on your active run streak list. But I ended my streak on June 3, 2017 (the last day I ran was June 2, 2017). ... So I wanted to move the streak to the "retired" streak list.

Do you really want to highlight the fact that I thought I might be coming down with a stress reaction to the right femur? ©

That's the deal. I nursed the right leg for a couple of months, and dramatically cut back mileage in the last few weeks. But it was time. So as I a) got to another nice round number and b) the day I was headed to Guatemala on a mission trip, I realized it was time to take a break.

My hope is to start another streak, without expectations/goals, asap (most likely late July/early August).

I started the streak with the idea of just becoming more fit than my 3-4 day-a-week running was doing. I figured I would just go until I got injured; I figured it would be a tweaked hamstring or something when it happened. Instead, I stayed very healthy, got used to the pounding, got to where running was as much a part of my day as breathing.

My job includes plenty of travel, which has often made it hard to stay fit; it's too easy to decide not to run ... until you're on a streak. Then it was a priority and easy to do. During the streak I ran in 24 states and two foreign countries (Guatemala and Portugal).

In May, I began to recognize that I probably needed a break; my streak included very few of the one-mile days (something I'll rectify the next time); I think I needed to do more of those for recovery/rest days. My right leg began hurting — not really during runs but afterward — and an MRI revealed what might be the beginnings of a stress reaction. I decided to take a break to let it recover.

Right now I'm stir-crazy despite doing other cardio work and running 2-3 times a week on an alterG antigravity treadmill.

The streak was super cool while it lasted. I just want to start another one asap.

I never really got into running when I was in school, but when I hit 330lbs, something had to change. Shortly after losing about 40lbs, I picked up running and I have not looked back. Essentially, I have 90% late night runs and many of them run right on up to midnight. Well, last night it slipped my mind and it wasn't until 12:30 am that I remembered. Summer fun and everything else going on. Regardless, I logged a mile run around 12:45 am.

Of course, this is all my fault. I have been good about dodging all the little things that have come up until now - and I have also had some mishaps along the way that I overcame (flu, sore heel, diarrhea, hurricanes, and blizzards). It is natural to want to blame this on something else but I know ultimately I screwed this one up.

TAMMY ROETHER'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Still going three years later! I started my run out of frustration of not loosing weight. Nothing was working. I even convinced myself that Running was counterproductive in losing weight and then a friend posted that she was doing a run streak and I asked what that was. since I had already ran the last three or four days I figured why not give it a try.

I truly think the run streak has saved my life. For one, I was in a weight-loss group with a bunch of friends and once I started running a mile every day or more I was killing it and won the pot every week! They all ended up stopping the money pot!!! Then in October - just four months into my streak - I was diagnosed with MS and told there was a good possibility I would lose the use of my legs at some point. I am definitely a stubborn person and decided I would run every single day until that day comes. Now I have read many reports that running at least a mile a day helps fight off the symptoms of multiple sclerosis.

I do suffer from extreme fatigue as my number one symptom but I generally do feel better once I get my butt out the door. I do have too many just 1-mile days unfortunately but I got them in. I can't imagine what my life would be like without the streak – if I didn't have to get up every day to get a mile in. I imagine some days I would not even get out of bed but that's not a possibility thanks to this amazing group.

Recently while horsing around by the pool with my husband, I bumped my leg very hard and I am also on blood thinners due to a blood clot in my brain and we thought I might have broken my leg. You're not a true streaker until you run with tears coming out of your eyes from either being sick or in pain! I grabbed a compression sleeve & an ice pack and made him go by my side while I got my mile in. It was a slow mile but he's got such long legs he basically power-walked next to me while I got it in! This is actually how I spent my third run streak anniversary with just a mile with my leg wrapped up. I don't think it's fractured. I think it's just badly bruised but I'm still getting it done!!

When I was a child and played soccer, I actually played goalie so I did not have to run. So it doesn't mess me that while some runs are not fun I still get my minimum mile in!! I hope to keep running with the streak until we find a cure for MS!

I run the California Bay to Bay Bike MS and this year instead of hitting my friends up for donations I decided to put on my own 5K. 'MS is BS 5K' in Long Beach CA was the name of my first 5K. We raised almost $3000 and had about 75 runners. It was amazing! Thank you to this group and thank you to the amazing sport that we all do. Here's to another 25 years!!! If anyone's in California next summer, please come out to the second annual MS is BS 5K!!

DAVE HAMILTON'S NEW STREAK REACHES A YEAR; HIS RETIRED STREAK LASTED 42+ YEARS

Well it's great to be back on the official list as I completed my one year anniversary on May 19th 2017. I have been running more consistently with 33-52 minute runs but cannot with a straight face call them any more than 3-4 plus miles as I'm going so slow.

My bum ankle is still the limiting factor as at 6-1/2 years it continues to require daily icing and wearing a light brace. Some days it's ok and I can go a bit further and faster if you can call it that. I am also doing exercise bike doubles 3-4 days a week and the usual core exercises and getting back into light weights.

Stricter diet as I get older seems to be no longer a choice but a requirement. The main thing is getting clean bills of health from the doc. Breaking my streak PR this time aroung might be a bit tough but heck, I'm going for it! Cheers!

MICHAEL FRIEDL'S STREAK ENDS AT 1,511 DAYS

I've been dreading writing this post but my streak ended Friday night [7 July 2017] at 1,511 days. I'd forgotten we were attending a wedding in Laguna Beach after work so I didn't run in the morning, then work ran long and there wasn't a window between, and the reception lasted until midnight.

As the time approached, I furiously debated ditching my wife and friends but judged it would have been incredibly rude, so the clock struck midnight and just like that 4+ years of running daily was over.

While my streak far surpassed my initial goal and I'm incredibly proud of this accomplishment, the sense of loss yesterday and today is profound. I did run yesterday but I'm not ready to commit to earning my asterisk. At least not yet.

Thanks to everyone in this incredible community for all of your support, encouragement and entertainment over the years. This is a special group. Streak on, friends.

HIROAKI YOSHIDA'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,009 DAYS

On May 31st, I decided NOT to run the next day. My streak running ended at 1009 days.

I could still run, but a hamstring injury I got in January had worsened up until then. So I thought it was time to take a rest.

Besides streak running, I have another goal, which is to run a sub-three-hour marathon. I had been chasing both goals, but considering that the injury was never getting better and that the window for running a sub-three marathon is narrowing as I get older (I am 46 now), I concluded that I need to focus on recovery for now, which means I have to stop streak running. I can restart it from scratch after achieving the sub-three marathon.

It's been more than a month since I stopped running every day. After spending some days without running, I realized, even more clearly than before, how much I love running.

Unfortunately, the hamstring injury and other minor injuries still hurt but they are getting better little by little. Hopefully I will be able to train hard again in a few months.

I am still inspired everyday from the updates by all the streak runners on facebook. I hope to be back to the community with a report of achieving my goal.

KEVIN TOFEL'S NEW STREAK HITS 1 YEAR

After retiring my first streak at 425 days back in 2012, I started my second last year and finally crossed back into official streak territory in June. It's good to be back!

I suspect that like many fellow streakers, I have a particular reason or two for streaking. Mine are for my health and also for my running performance.

On the health side, it's mental health more than physical to me. After my father took his life in 2009, I started recognizing signs of depression in myself the following year. So I turned to the one thing I could count on throughout my life, which was running.

I've run competitively on and off since high school in the mid-1980's, including a then school record 2:01.1 in the 800m back in the day.

Running daily helped offset the depression during my 2011 - 2012 streak. Perhaps it's because that no matter what, I could achieve some level of personal accomplishment each and every day. I'm still dealing with the mental health challenges, both with medicine and the daily running, but I know for certain that streaking has positive effects on my state of mind.

From a performance standpoint, I know I'll never be as fast as I was 30 years ago. But during both my retired and my now current streak, I've seen tremendous reductions in race times. During the current streak for example, I've seen my half marathon times quickly drop from 1:59 to 1:52 to 1:44, just within six months time.

My love for the track is still here too and without any formal speed work, I was able to crank out a 64.84 second 400m indoors this past January; good enough to be in the top 20 US times in 2017 for my 45-49 age group. By continuing the streak (and maybe actually doing real track work this time!), I'm hoping to go back under 60 seconds before I'm 50 years old in 2019.

One other quick thought since I'm a bit of a numbers geek. (And I'm betting some other streakers are too!). I started my current streak on 6/10/16. I didn't realize it at the time, but that date is a numerical palindrome, meaning it reads the same forwards and backwards. Yesterday was run streak day 400 and ironically, the date was 7/14/17, which is also a numerical palindrome. Go figure!

Been a nice 2+ years now of running.

Here Is the update so far as of today (RSD 740): I have a total miles ran during streak of 3,137.55 with a daily average of 4.23 miles.

During last year of the streak, I have run and placed in a quite a few 5ks. I have also run in some 5 milers and a few half marathons.

This spring I completed my 19th half and last Fall ran in the 2016 Marine Corps Marathon, my 7th marathon finished. It was not the best run of my career. I was in total pain (of my 7 this was the worst one) but still somehow finished.

I don't have a race planned until September, which will be a half marathon (# 20). Then fall and winter will be a bunch of local 5ks.

Mileage goal for this year is to run at least 1600 miles for the first time. My personal record is 1512 miles set last year.

Also this past year I ran a few milestones: I started to log my runs in the spring of 2008; ran my 10,000th logged mile; 3000+ streak miles run; 2nd year of streak running; 25 months in a row running at least 100 miles; and 15 months in a row now running at least 120 miles.

Now just need to find that elusive running partner to date. lol

Keep streaking!

DIANNE HOLLIDGE JOINS SRI FROM ENGLAND

I started running some time in my mid to late 20's. I had very unstable asthma as a child which restricted any sports I could do (I learned to play the piano instead, and sadly not very well). In my teens I dislocated my left knee cap on a school exchange program in Germany, and that was the start of a lot of knee problems. It dislocated again in 1991 just after I started nurse training, and I had surgery to stabilize it, and then further surgery to correct the first surgery. My knee looks like a shark has taken a go at it, which is far more exciting than the truth! It turns out that both kneecaps track in the incorrect plain, making them prone to dislocating and also means that the cartilage is being worn away.

I started running as a lot of my friends were runners. I was much slower but loved it and was inspired by my best friend who ran the London Marathon in 2002. A few more surgery's later on my knee and I completed London in 2005, easily one of the best days of my life.

A few years later and my left knee was becoming increasingly unstable and giving way. I had an arthroscopy, which should severe osteoarthritis in the left knee and moderate to severe in the right. Unfortunately my left knee then got infected and required admission to hospital for Christmas for a wash out (which was a great description of my Christmas too!!) Subsequently, I was informed my knee was so damaged that only a knee replacement was an option. The surgeon said, "do what you like, you can only make the pain worse, the knee has had it."

January 2015 I started couch to 5k. It took me about 6 months but I got there in the end. Then I started running more regularly, and discovered Killerton parkrun. My knee played up towards the end of 2015 and everyone advised me to rest it, so I started volunteering at parkrun instead. However, I realized the more I rested, the weaker my knee became. A wise friend who is an osteopath said that movement is the best thing. So I listened and started running more. The swelling went down, the strength and stability improved and it's been amazing.

I have successfully completed a year of a running streak (minimum of a mile every day, including throughout Glastonbury festival!), and am stronger than ever. My knee is better than it has ever been since I was 14, clearly having strong muscles supporting it has made the difference.

I have completed 7 organized half marathons in addition to regularly running that distance "for the fun of it," numerous 10k and 10 milers, 60 parkruns and recently completed the Women Can Marathon at the end of May. I am one of the run directors now at parkrun, managing to avoid almost certain disaster every week! I love running and plan to keep the running streak going for as long as I possibly can.

I never realized how transformative doing the same thing day in and day out could be until I unintentionally began my running streak on 13 July 2016! I'm sure I started running for the same reason as many others in this fine group: to lose weight! I began my weight loss journey with an at home fitness program and made significant progress. I had established the habit of working out at home 4-5 times a week, but then I had to travel. I truly disliked running, but discovered it was the easiest way to exercise while on the road. I began running every couple of days. Then three days in a row. Then every day for a week. Then two. Before I realized, I'd been running every day for a month! I grew up playing volleyball and basketball, so I knew my way around a gym. But I wasn't familiar with this whole running business. Turns out, there's mixed advice on the Internet about the impact of running every day. I decided to just play it by ear and listen to my body. Honestly, I've never felt better in my life!

I have rediscovered my athletic side with running. I am a naturally competitive person and have found that the best competition for me is doing better than I did yesterday! I love to see my progress, analyze my times, and vary my training workouts to seek different results. Not every run has been a good run, but I know that I've learned something from each and every one!

I've participated in quite a few local 5Ks, 8Ks, and 10Ks. I finished my first half in just under 2 hours at the recent San Diego Rock 'n' Roll and am currently training for the Air Force full marathon in September!

Hello! I'm 39 years old and a single mom with an amazingly talented, kind, and patient 14 year old son. I've learned more about running and about life over the past year than I ever Though running is expected. individual endeavor, having the support of a community like this makes overcoming the mental hurdles a bit easier! # SHELLEY COOK JOINS USRSA

My streak officially began on January 21, 2009. It was sometime in July of that year, that a friend had looked at my running log and said, "You should see how long you can keep your streak going." Challenge accepted!

I had started running back in 1998, after deciding my life needed a major overhaul. I woke up that morning about 30 pounds overweight, with what would be my last hangover. I found a pair of "running shoes" and ran a mile. I never looked back. For the first ten years of my running journey, I was very focused on the competitive aspect of road running. I trained hard, ran a lot of races, won a lot of races, and really learned some solid discipline that transferred to real life. But eventually, road running just wasn't as satisfying as it once was. The pressure to perform well and the disappointment that came when I didn't meet a goal, started making running not fun.

Then I discovered the trails and ultramarathons, and an entirely new world of happiness and joy opened up. Running was no longer about pace and PR's, instead it was helping me learn about myself and my limits. Ultras were so refreshing because the vibe was so different, more relaxed and FUN! I was still quite competitive, I'm sure I always will be! But it was more about seeing how far I could push myself and how many people I could connect with along the way. Trail/ultrarunning has taken me to some of the most beautiful places I've been to, and I've met some of the most selfless people over the past 9 years. I love ultras because they are always humbling and I always walk away with a ton of gratitude.

My personal minimum for my streak has been 2 miles. There have been a handful of exceptions where I have defaulted to the USRSA's 1 mile minimum – after a 100 mile race and after I ran myself over with my truck and ended up with 6 broken ribs (I don't recommend this).

On top of my running streak, I have another personal goal that I have yet to achieve: win a race of every distance. So far, I've won every race distance from 1 mile to 100 mile. The only distance I have yet to get is the 100k - that's a really competitive distance!

I began running on January 1st, 2012, at the tender age of 64. It was a New Year's resolution -- not to run, particularly, but to lose a bit of weight. I wasn't seriously overweight, but I'd found that the older I got, the harder it became to keep the pounds off. At the time, I was living in Florida and was lucky to have a house that sat on a disused golf course. had so approximately 10K of golf cart track to run on. However, that first morning I managed only about 200 yards before doubling up, short of breath. When I managed to straighten up I looked along the path and thought, Tomorrow I'll try to make it to yonder palm (about 50 yards further along the path). Well, make it I did, and then some. Before long I was completing a little loop out back of the house, which I estimated to be about 3/4 of a mile (no Garmin or Fitbit at that point)!

Like many previous such New Year's resolutions, my efforts were successful for a short time, but eventually my metabolism caught up with the new regimen. However, unlike previous unsuccessful dieting solutions, the running solution stuck. I still weigh about the same as I did back on January 1, 2012, but my heart and blood pressure are thanking me.

In October of the same year, the belly dance studio I attended was getting up a team – Bellies for Boobies -- to do a 5K to raise money for a breast cancer charity, so I signed up. It wasn't until the race director called for runners to line up for the start, that I realized everyone else was doing the walk... I was the only one running in belly dance costume. Oh well, not to worry, Batman was there to keep me company! It was hard going, but I managed to complete my first official 5K around sunny St. Petersburg, FL... without stopping or walking!

Sometime in 2015, still in Florida, and many races later, I saw a piece on the CBS Evening News about a guy who had run every day for many years. I didn't catch his name... but I did catch the bug. My first streak lasted around 270 days. I'd had a couple of nasty falls and, having an important trip to England coming up (house hunting), I decided that discretion was the better part of valour, so ended my streak voluntarily.

In May 2016, after almost 30 years in the USA, I made the move back to England and joined a running club, Bridlington Road Runners. It was a busy time, setting up home from scratch, and needing everything from tea bags and cat litter, to insurance policies and a car to get around in. I managed a few short streaks, but inevitably daily life got in the way. But on July 7th, 2016, with all our daily needs pretty much under control, I began my current streak. My partner and I are avid auction goers, and I was lucky enough to pick up a treadmill for only 25 pounds, so on the days that my old bones don't feel like hitting the pavement, I can run on the 'dreadmill' while watching the cricket that I'd sadly missed during my time in the US!

Although no longer living in the US, I did make the pilgrimage to San Antonio, Texas, last March to run my fourth consecutive Alamo 13.1 and, at 69, I managed to win my age group category (F65-69) for the first time. In 2018 the race organisers are initiating a full marathon, the Alamo 26.2, and I'm in!

Last year I ran my first marathon, the Yorkshire Marathon, held in and around York. It was a qualifying event for an age-related England Athletics marathon team and I was fortunate to be selected for the team... to run the Chester Marathon in October 2017. I don't think it gets any better than that... wish me luck!

I started running in 2011 after a bad break up with my fiancé. I was at my heaviest weight and tipped the scales at over 200lbs for a 5'3" frame. I could barely run a mile but I kept at it. I started out with the NO Boundaries running program and excelled to become a mentor.

To date I have completed 13 half marathons, countless 5ks, trail races, relays and fun runs. I completed the Toronto Ragnar this year as well. I ran the WDW marathon in Jan 2017 and got engaged at the end!

My fiancé ran with me and planned an amazing surprise by proposing after we finished. I have met some amazing people through streaking and the Rochester NY streak group is an amazing support. According to your stats I am #5 in my area. My (now husband) started streaking on my 1 year run-a-versiary as well!!

I never really enjoyed running, but would occasionally find time to run as a part of weight loss struggles. In 2011, I enjoyed some success with losing almost 75lbs.

I took up running again, hoping that at a lighter weight running would be more enjoyable. I completed my first half marathon, the Marine Corps Historic Half marathon. My training however was very sporadic and inconsistent.

In 2015 while beginning my training for this annual event, I began to experience chest pain and shortness of breath during several short training runs. I eventually decided to get this checked out. I failed my cardiac stress test, had a cardiac cath. with 3 significant coronary artery blockages. I had stents placed and began follow-up care for coronary artery disease. The good news was my cardiologist gave me an otherwise clean bill of health and told me I could return to normal activities, including running, as long as I felt ok. So, 6 weeks later I completed the Marine Corps Historic Half marathon - did not have a very good time, but was able to finish.

In October of that year, I ran in the Baltimore running festival half marathon – and recorded my worst time ever. I chalked this up to poor training and not my heart condition. I made the decision that I needed to be more committed to my running, mostly to improve my health, hoping that my race times would gradually begin to improve.

I started my run streak on January 1, 2016 – not exactly sure where this journey would take me. After a few months, I began to realize that it was this level of commitment that was missing – for me it basically had to be all or nothing – and I see no end to this streak in sight - I'm all in!

Thank you for welcoming me to the Streak Runners registry. I am super excited to be part of this amazing group. I am a stay at home mom with a small day care. I stay very busy running around with kiddos.

My Husband David and I have been married for 17 years. We have a son David 26 who has a beautiful wife and gave us an amazing grandson. We also have a son Zachary 16, who is about to start his senior year of High School and a daughter Elizabeth 8 who will be entering third grade.

I have been running for several years. I have completed 24 half marathons, 2 triathlons, 1 full Marathon and am currently training for my second Full.

I started streaking August 1, 2016. I have run everyday and also have a sub streak of at least one half Marathon a month. As well as a sub streak for out door runs.

For my 1-year streak celebration, I was fortunate to have about 15 running friends/fellow streakers join me for a 3.65-mile run around my hometown. Followed by a bar-b-que and of course some delicious cake. I look forward to many more miles and continuing this streak. Best wishes to all fellow runners and streakers! Thank you!

JOHN CHANDLER'S STREAK HITS 36 YEARS

This morning ran a typical li'l 5-miler @ 5:15a, and none too fast. Was afflicted with a mysterious calf problem back in June/July - caused me to walk home from a couple of runs, but always had at least MY minimum of 2.0mi already in hand ("in foot?" "under foot?"). I think I finally "cured it" with 8 consecutive 2milers (a.k.a "Streak Runs") - and by the end of that stretch of short ones was starting to really crank those 2-miles (or what passes for "cranking" these days). Might've been a shoe-related problem rides" "new are noticeably softer/more-cushiony what than thought were "just fine" until the injury.

I'm still helping coach Girls CC and Girls Track (Distance) out @ Waukesha West HS. One of our runners just placed 11th in the World Championships Marathon in London!: Serena Ramsey Burla ran 2:29:32 (ran her PR 2:26:53 in LAST year's World Championships Marathon in Osaka, placing 10th!).

I've got a son who will be matriculating at Notre Dame this fall – and a daughter who will be a senior @ Whitefish Bay HS. I just realized: my Streak has always been longer than their combined ages – my 36 > 35 (currently they are 18+17 - in 3 days). Next year, if I make it to 37, they will be 19+18 = 37 = TIED. Then, after that, since they gain 2 years to my 1 year, I will fall farther and farther behind (in more ways than that, right?).

OK, sorry to ramble – this is likely the most "reflective" I'll get RE "The (silly) Streak" (as I call it), so, thanks for listening, and thanks for all your STREAK-related activities!!

TOM LLOYD'S STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

On August 1, 2017, I ventured out on a short and easy run that was the start of my 7th year as a Run Streaker.

The past year was filled with a bit more discomfort and injury (not to mention busy-ness and stress) than previous years, and my running certainly suffered as a result.

There were far more days that were "just the mile" than I am proud to admit, but it wasn't all bad. In May, I ran a barely-Boston-Qualifying marathon time of 3:09:53 at the Eugene Marathon (great course, great atmosphere, highly recommended).

For the upcoming year, I'm hoping to get back to more consistent training so that I am not so dependent on the daily mile, and have no plans to end my streak any time soon. One of these days, I'd like to find a way to get in a run with my Anniversary-mates on the Registry.

It's always fun to see the updates from everyone, and I look forward to continue following everyone's progress. You're all inspirational to me and you keep me going!

MATT MILLER'S NEW STREAK REACHES A YEAR

I am glad to have made it back to the 1year plus mark and look forward to continuing this streak for many days to come.

Last April, when a broken left fibula ended my 768-day streak, I was really disappointed. I had my sights on my comma or 1000 days, which I thought was my next big goal. However, it was not to be.

I actually worked out every day while I was on crutches and in my boot and unable to run. It was my way of dealing with it and still getting a small victory over the circumstances. So I have worked out or ran every day since my original streak started which is now over 3 years ago and my current running streak just recently hit the 1 year mark.

I have only run one marathon since my injury and that was my 5th overall but have run several half marathons.

I have run as early as 3:30am and prefer to always do my runs early in the morning. I run a minimum of 2 miles per day and usually work a long run in on the weekend.

I really enjoy running and one of my favorite parts is the camaraderie with other runners and the beautiful scenery that I get to see as I run.

I have included a picture of myself and my daughter that was taken at Ohio University in Athens, Ohio after my first post injury marathon at the Athens Marathon.

All seems to be going well for me and the streak. Having a strong 2017 to date as I am still on target for at least 7300 miles this year – just hoping I will avoid a major injury. I am hoping to finish the month of July with my first ever 800 miles month...6 more days to go and 125 more miles. I'd ultimately like 813 since that would essentially be a marathon a day...but doubles rather than singles in a day!

JILLIAN FARLAND'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,859 DAYS

Back in 2012 my boyfriend, Travis, suggested we do a 40-day run streak. 40 days turned in to 100, turned in to 1 year, turned in to many more...

When we got pregnant in October 2016 I had a sinking feeling my first streak would be coming to an end. Luckily, we made it to 5 years in May, celebrating with a 5-mile route that drew a "5" on GPS.

Fast forward one month, I woke up in labor at 4am and told Travis we had to get out for a run immediately if I was going to get in my 2-mile minimum before the baby arrived. Travis very patiently timed my contractions while I ran a 21:31 pace (ha!!!) and our son, Graham Alan Farland, was born in our home 8 hours later. My streak ended that morning at 1,859 days.

Exactly 2 weeks later, on Graham's due date, I started my 2nd streak. If more children are in the cards for us, I plan on continuing this streak until Baby #2 arrives...

Looking back on the 1st streak, my favorite run was the one I did next to Travis the morning of our wedding -- I couldn't ask for a better running and life partner.

All is well. I spent the first six months of the year in Xalapa, Veracruz, Mexico. My streak continued there on some of the best running routes I've encountered. There is an excellent community of competitive, hospitable runners in that city. I only competed in one race, but it was the hilliest 10K I've done.

JILL WOFSEY'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 594 DAYS

It is with great sadness that I had to retire my beautiful running streak of 594 consecutive days. It started on Tuesday, December 22nd, 2015, and ended on Sunday, August 8th, 2017. It began as simply a challenge to see if I could get past the first week. After I had done that, it became much more than a "Can I do it?" activity. It became a habit, and one I became quite addicted!

I had a really good running year in 2016. I felt strong, healthy and happy. During that year, I ran a total of 2,605.49 miles. I ran one race per month, and ran competitively. The year culminated with a 50K, a day that felt like one of the best of my life, and won Female Masters.

In 2017, I continued to race once per month, but had some problems early on in the year, when I stubbed my left pinky toe extremely badly (nearly broke a toe). Though it hurt horribly and was excessively bruised, I continued to run every day, and toughed it out. Then, piriformis syndrome struck on my left side. Because it was not so acute (the way my right side is now), I was able to run through it, including during the Boston Marathon. It was a slow race because of the injury that had not yet healed, but I managed to finish successfully.

The following is a summary of my run streak: Sunday, August 8th, 2017 was my last day of streak running, on which I ran a painful 1 miler. I was struck with a very serious case of piriformis syndrome, involving impingement on my sciatic nerve, creating the "electric shocks" I felt. I made myself a promise that I would keep the streak alive as long as I was physically able, and I did that and so much more! During my streak, I averaged 6.76 miles per day, the total miles adding up to 4,009.57.

Also, during that time, I ran 19 races: one 50K, 4 marathons (one of them being Boston in 2017!), 5 half marathons, 2 10Ks, 1 4.4 miler, and 6 5Ks. I ran through all kinds of weather, terrain, various injuries, illnesses, fatigue, and countless inconveniences. Thinking back on the whole adventure, I was forced to dig deeper than I ever have in my life, and I feel grateful for that opportunity.

Thank you to the group for all your wonderful inspiration. At this time, I do not know if I will attempt streak running again. For now, I need to relearn walking--even a moderate walk hurts very much right now. So we shall see what happens! Thanks for reading, and best to all of you!

STACEY BROOKS' STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

My first streak that lasted more than a month, was 133 days and ended when an evening triathlon I was planning on doing was stormed out. I took a nap, and by the time I realized it, that streak was over. So the next day, August 10, 2012. I started out again with a 3.1-mile run to work, and a 5.5-mile run home. Since that day, I have run every day, sometimes twice, while maintaining a minimum of a 20-minute run (or 2.1 miles, whichever takes longer to get to). Over those 1826 days, every run has been outside. Here in northern New York, that means mornings as low as 20 below and afternoon highs in the summer in the 90's. Most days, I'm out the door by 5:45 AM so it is done before I go to work.

In that time, I've completed 16 marathons, 19 half marathons and 1 Ironman (and survived the required Ironman training when my coach told me I was supposed to have a "rest" or non-run day; there were a lot of those 2.1 mile/20 minute days in my 8 months of training for that).

There have been a couple of injuries along the way. A sciatic/SI joint issue that I'm still dealing with, and a hamstring pull about a month ago that I was really worried about. That has subsided and I have a great outlook for the fall, with an Ironman 70.3 in Lake Placid and 3 marathons, including New York City.

The thing that I like most about streaking is that it takes the option out of the equation. It's not if I'm going to run today, it's when I'm going to run today. I'm really excited to have graduated from Neophyte to Proficient, and look forward to the day when I become Experienced. In the meantime, streak on!

ED GOFF'S STREAK HITS 37 YEARS

I finished my 37th year of running every day with my usual 3.4 mile loop this morning on neighborhood streets.

It seems that age is catching up with me. I did the Gasparilla Run in Tampa again this year but dropped back from 15K to an 8K. Nonetheless I came in 5th in my age group.

I'm doing a 5K on the 21st, which is being held to celebrate the opening of a new bridge here. It will be hot and humid here in Florida even though it will be an early morning run. If I can do 11 min/mile I'll be VERY happy.

I have not always been a runner. In fact, I did just about all other sports except running. By the time I was in my mid-20's, I started to realize I was not quite as good as I used to be. I still wanted to be active and I love the competition so I became a "runner."

Started out as a couple of times a week with a few races a year and eventually moved up to my first marathon in San Diego in 2007. It was a humbling experience as those 1st marathons tend to be but wanted to keep going. I tried my first ultra-marathon in Cleveland (24 hour) in 2010.

This year I ran the 72-hour Day at the Fair Race in New Jersey completing 122 miles. After a couple of attempts at running everyday, I finally got it right.

Currently, on day 381 and hope to continue on. I enjoy running in different cities and certainly enjoy running with my oldest son (age 13) as he has now become a cross-country runner. I still have lots of running goals for the future and truly believe you can always go farther...

GEORGE HANCOCK HITS 100,000 LIFETIME MILES; STREAK HITS 15 YEARS

I reached several milestones since my last update. On Thursday morning January 5, 2017 I reached and crossed the 100,000 mile mark. I started road running and keeping track of my mileage in 1973. I'm the third runner in the Greater Johnstown, Pennsylvania region to run over 100,000 miles.

I also retired from the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown after 23 years on November 30, 2016. I'm enjoying my retirement days. My interests include running (of course), writing (5 different newspapers), reading and book collecting. I somehow gained neighborhood yard work too. I currently cut and trim three other yards besides my own.

Also, my second running streak reached 15 years on June 22, 2017. My first running streak ran 24 years and 88 days from February 26, 1978 to May 24, 2002. I missed only 14 running days from September 1, 1976 to the current date.

Some soft tissue issues and tendonitis have slowed me down this summer. I'm running slower lower mileage and no racing until these issues improve. The consequence is my lifetime road racing total hovers at 498 races. If the issues improve I'll run over 500 races by the years end. If not, then some time next year.

Run smart, run well!

NANCY WEST'S RUNNING STREAK HITS A DECADE

The last year of running has been harder for me to complete than the nine years that preceded it, combined. And yet here I am, celebrating my tenth anniverary of streaking!

Painful running throughout summer of 2016 culminated in a self-diagnosis, then confirmed by a physical therapist, of posterior tibial tendinitis. Though the physical therapist predictably told me to stop running, my husband -- who is not a runner but has stood steadfastedly by my streak -- suggested I take it down to a mile a day and see if that alleviated the symptoms at all.

Giving up my prized 5-10 mile runs was difficult, but my husband's strategy worked. By Thanksgiving I was back up to two or three miles a day and the streak was unbroken. I haven't managed to return to my previous 5-10 milers, but I'm ok with that, because it turns out low mileage agrees with me.

My sciatica is gone; my incipient bunions have receded; my knees never hurt anymore. In fact, I've never felt better, orthopedically speaking. The marathon may never happen, but the second decade of streak running just might!

Other changes over the past year include the addition of a Richie brace, prescribed by a podiastrist to alleviate the tendinitis; and the omission of the dog, who is no longer allowed to run with me after tripping me up numerous times, most notably Memorial Day weekend when she stopped abruptly in front of me and I sailed over her, landing flat on my stomach, breaking a rib and spraining my big toe. (But yes, it happened all beyond the one-mile mark, streak remained mν intact.) Fortunately, she has learned to wait patiently until I get home from my run, knowing I'll make it up to her with a nice long walk. Here's hoping for another ten vears!

Nancy Shohet West Carlisle, Massachusetts

TIM OSBERG'S SECOND STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

Yes, my "second streak" is still intact and is now in its 7th year. I "only" have a little less than 20 years to try to beat my first streak, which was nearly 26 years in length. It was hernia surgery that put an end to my first streak in 2011 and I started this current streak about five weeks after the surgery (6/24/2011) once I got medical clearance.

What I have learned in all this is that I plan to run every day of my life as long as I am medically able.

By way of an update, this year has been a great running year for me. For both of my streaks, the minimum criterion I personally adhered to was to run at least 2 miles a day, with an occasional 5-miler and a somewhat longer run from time to time.

I got an Apple Watch last year to keep track of my fitness goals. In January, my daughter (an NYC executive for a fitness company and a certified fitness instructor and running enthusiast) invited me to link to her Apple watch so that we could see each other's daily fitness totals. Immediately I began to increase my daily miles (reflecting the competitor in me!).

For the past several months, my minimum daily run has been 5 miles a day (with just a handful of times I reverted to the 2 mile minimum).

I never thought I would ever approach running a marathon, but now I think that may be possible because I have run two half marathons in the past 3 months (just on my own, not sanctioned, and my longest runs ever), set a personal weekly mileage record of 55 miles (last week), and am about to eclipse 1000 miles for the year (probably on Monday) - a pace that will beat my old yearly record.

My point in recounting this to you is that I would highly recommend to readers of the newsletter that they link their smart watches to friends and family if they are a competitive type!

I also recommend committing to running every day of your life if medically possible. If you are hurting or injured, just stop and start the streak again! It has been a good strategy for me.

JOE BEYER'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

August 15, 2017 I Completed 7 Years.

- * Day #1 of my running streak was August 16, 2010.
- * After my run on August 15, 2017 I completed:
- 7 years running at least a mile a day, 2557 days.
- Approximately 13,600 total miles logged, averaging ~5.3/day.
- 92 Marathons completed during this streak (a number which will not change moving forward!).

Two very notable running events over the last year:

- 1. I retired from running Marathons so I can focus more on other hobbies. Therefore, the Burning Man Ultra, August 30th 2016 was the 242nd and last Marathon (or longer) I will ever run, honest. All my toenails have now returned and I'm not looking back.
- 2. Last December 22, I bruised my ribs while skating (see previous note about pursuing other hobbies). What a klutz! Fortunately I managed to run a very, very, painful and slow mile the next morning. I may not have exhaled for it's entirety, thus keeping my streak alive. Unfortunately I couldn't do any more than one mile so my 3 mile streak came to an end at 2,106 days. :( January 1st 2017, after 9 days of recovery, I started my new 3 miles/day streak which stands at 227 days after August 15th.

MARK SIROIS' STREAK ENDS AFTER 2,126 DAYS

I need to report that I retired my streak at day 2,126 on August 14, 2017.

Eighteen months ago I had a serious slip/fall resulting in some serious damage (meniscus tear, ham tendon tear, MCL, and more). Since then I was able to run 2 marathons last year but November began a cycle of 1 month of decent running for every 2 of hobbling through runs with little enjoyment. Repeat MRI showed increase in my meniscus damage, and subsequent full thickness loss of articular cartilage and increased joint effusion. Drained 60cc a few weeks ago, with a good week of running followed by limping through 2 milers again. My fitness has been dropping. I would like to run the Detroit Free Press Marathon with my 18 year old son, his first.

So, that's my reason in a nutshell. I'm continuing with a triathlon type personal streak, resuming my running when my knee is able to handle it. I'm a physical therapist who has a practice that treats endurance athletes. I wish I could have kept it going, but now am moving forward with a goal of completing an Ironman distance.

I don't have photos while running, am attaching one from the end of a run a few weeks ago with my Dutch Shepherd, Jet (Belle Isle in Detroit). I got a Dutchie specifically for their highenergy need for activity as a running partner. I typically run, and now swim and bike early morning. I'm not sad about the end of the streak since it started with a goal of 1 year and had it not been for my injury would still be streaking. The bottom line is its all about staying active and healthy. At 54, I'd like to keep running another 30 years and realize that my body won't handle daily running anymore. I feel I can keep running many more years if I transition from this streak to a new one.

Best regards and wishing you all much longevity on your streaks.

Mark Sirois Southgate, Michigan

BRUCE MORTENSEN'S STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

Yes, my streak hit 6 years today. I have 1457 miles for the year going for 2000 miles for the year, which would give me at least 2000 miles every year since 1960. I did have one day where I had food poisoning and it was tough to get 1.2 miles in but otherwise it has been a good year.

STEVE DAVIS' STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

Running only outdoors in Michigan has its challenges which makes streak running so interesting. Running in -38 degree windchill makes you wonder if running in shorts ever happened or ever will again. Running in the summer makes you think "were there really runs where I couldn't wring my shirt out after the run?"

There was one recent muscle injury (hamstring) where each time the right foot hit the ground it was like a stabbing knife. That's when you KNOW that foot hits the ground about 1000 times per mile. Luckily that only lasted a few days of 2 mile minimum runs.

During the 7 years I ran 21,145 miles, 8.3 miles per day varying from 2 miles to 27 miles. A mini streak of 37 consecutive 200+ mile months is still going. Early morning runs on trails is just a fantastic way to start the day!

KRYSTIN CLODFELTER JOINS USRSA

My running "career" started with a 5k back in high school, in Texas. I wore light grey cotton shorts, sweated through them, and spent the rest of the morning looking like I had peed myself. But, I was pleasantly surprised to end up in 3rd place.

Needless to say, I had no running mentor in my life at that time. I got myself some proper running shorts after that incident. I ran sporadically from then until college, when I ran my first marathon. I continued to run sporadically until a knee injury took me out for my longest stretch, about 6 months.

I decided to come back with a vengeance and signed up for and completed my first ultra run in 2013, a 50 miler. I have since done many ultras, including some 100 milers. I fell in love with the ultra running community and found my niche in running.

While long trail runs are my favorite, I continue to compete in local 5k's, half-marathons, marathons; whatever tickles my fancy. I have a pretty good track record of making the podium in local races - although my focus is not to beat others, but to beat myself.

Besides racing (or just finishing - in the case of ultras), I became a pacer in 2016. I find great joy in helping other people reach their time goals in half marathons and marathons. Looking forward, I hope to one day add "Boston Qualifier" and "Boston Finisher" to my running synopsis.

ELLIS HAMILTON'S STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

Hard to believe that it's been six years, but I keep right on shuffling along each and every day. 2017 has been pretty quiet running wise. I decided to take a year off from "racing," as our Summer was pretty jam packed with other activities. Lot's of travel, as well as friends staying with us as they traveled here to visit our beautiful Pacific Northwest.

I bagged some streak runs in a new foreign country. Iceland, which I highly recommend as a travel destination. Lovely country and wonderful folks over there.

I've also added barbell strength training to my workout regimen. I do that twice a week at my local gym. Pro tip: do your daily run before doing your 180lb barbell squats. Otherwise, it's neither easy nor pretty.

Other than that, I am definitely looking forward to the cooler running weather of September. This heat really has to stop!

Evolution of a 50 Something Runner By: Wm Troy Donahoo

When I was young I wanted to run the fastest

It was the time after Pre

And a good 2-mile race meant not being lapped

As I got older I wanted to run the farthest

Frank Shorter and Bill Rodgers were heroes

But life had no time for such training and dedication

Then I wanted to run the most

Mark Covert, Jon Sutherland, and Raven

And a kidney stoned stopped it at 1121 days

Now I am just happy to be running

Seeing the joy and accomplishments of my daughter

But over triple digits in the current streak

THE FINISH LINE By: Mark Washburne

As noted in our cover stories, the big news from this quarter was the ending of two very long streaks in June. On June 2, Dr. William "Bill" Stark ended his streak after 14,876 days (40 years, 266 days) due to hernia surgery. Dr. Stark's streak, started on 10 September 1976, appeared in the first issue of this newsletter in April 2001 and was listed as 17th longest known running streak in America when the United States Running Streak Association was first formed. Through the years, Dr. Stark, who was a Professor of Biology at St. Louis University, updated our association with pictures and stories of his many years of streak running and was featured on the cover of the Winter 2017 issue of The Streak Registry celebrating his streak turning 40 years. When his streak ended, Dr. Stark had the 9th longest active running streak in the world and now his streak is listed as the 5th longest retired running streak in the United States and 6th longest retired streak in the world.

The other long running streak to end in June was that of William "Bill" Finkbeiner, from Auburn, California. Mr. Finkbeiner's streak, started on 1 January 1980, was also listed in the first issue of this newsletter in April 2001 and was ranked as the 44th longest known running streak in the United States at the time. Mr. Finkbeiner's streak ended after he was "hit by a bicycle from behind and driven into the asphalt and gravel edge of the levee on which [he] was walking with five friends." Mr. Finkbeiner's injuries included "loss of two front teeth, fracture of left thumb and additional fracture in left hand, fracture of skull, nose and several orbital fractures around [his] left eye, many facial lacerations and a lot of road rash." Besides being a streak runner, Mr. Finkbeiner was also a celebrated ultra runner. "My 30 consecutive year streak at the Leadville Trail 100 ended in 2013," noted Mr. Finkbeiner in the Spring 2016 issue of The Streak Registry. "The buckle they awarded me is twelve inches wide!" Mr. Finkbeiner's daily running streak lasted 13,679 days (37 years, 164 days). When his streak ended on June 13, Mr. Finkbeiner had the 28th longest active running streak in the United States and 30th in the world and now his streak is listed as the 11th longest retired running streak in the United States and 12th longest retired streak in the world.

We here at SRI/USRSA wish both Bills speedy recoveries and much luck in the future.

In other running streak association news, I recently signed a contract with a company to redesign and automate our website. As it stands right now, all new streaks and changes to streaks have to be retyped and added by me to several different lists, including a list that is forwarded to our webmasters for inclusion on our website. The process is long, slow, and time consuming. Under our proposed new website, individuals will be able to fill out their own streak information with only a final one-step approval process by us before it appears on our streak and membership lists. In the meantime, please bear with us as work proceeds on our website.

Speaking of our website, a big thank you is also due to our Webmaster, Steve Morrow, and our Assistant Webmaster, Mike Johnson, who have maintained our website for the last few years. We are grateful for all their support and our hopeful that their volunteer jobs will be greatly reduced under our new proposed automated system.

Good luck to all of you as we each run the roads and trails – every day!
