“Running can help you loose weight. Running can build muscle tone. Running can improve your complexion. Running can strengthen your heart and make it work more efficiently. Running can increase your aerobic capacity and lower your blood pressure. Running can relax you, help you quit smoking, and reduce the risk of heart disease. Running can reduce depression and lift your spirits. Running can help you think and make you more creative. Running can make you more athletic and energetic and full of vitality. Running can improve your self-image and make you more self-confident. In short, running can change your entire outlook on life and make a new person of you.”

WILLOW SEWARD'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS;
WILLIAM SEWARD, HER RELATIVE, WAS THE
AMERICAN SECRETARY OF STATE
WHO BOUGHT ALASKA FROM RUSSIA IN 1867
"Running with a Side of History and High-Flying Adventure"
By: Willow Seward

So, September 13, 2023, was a pretty big day for me. Why, you ask? Well, it marks five whole years of me going out there and running at least 3 miles every single day. Rain or shine, no excuses. And let me tell you, it's been quite the journey.

A little fun historical fact for you all. My family tree has a surprising twist in it. Secretary of State William Seward is actually my fifth cousin, six times removed. Yeah, the guy who was all about U.S. history, making deals, and shaping the nation. His grit and determination? Well, they've inspired my running journey in ways I didn't see coming.

Running every day? Easier said than done. I've faced down Covid—twice, a nasty stomach flu, hangovers (let's not talk about those), and even some minor injuries. There was that one time I went on a trip and, oops, forgot my running shoes. What did I do? Ran barefoot, of course! Sometimes I've hit the pavement in the middle of the night, knowing a crazy workday or flight delays were waiting for me. But no matter what, I laced up and got out there.

You might be wondering how I squeeze in all this running with my day job as a pilot. Well, turns out, running and flying go hand in hand. Running keeps me physically and mentally fit, which is a plus when you're in the cockpit. Running around the world as a pilot has its perks too. I've seen the sunrise over mountains and the sunset in new cities. My runs have been my personal tour guide.

In between flights, I've managed to squeeze in a few 5Ks and even a challenging 10K. Trust me, those race days brought their own set of stories and challenges. But the camaraderie of fellow runners and the thrill of the finish line have made it all worth it. However, this is just the beginning. There's no finish line in sight, and I wouldn't have it any other way. My next adventure? A sprint triathlon in early November. Swimming, cycling, and running—it's a whole new ball game. I can't wait to see what kind of stories that adventure will bring!

As I celebrate these five years of running, it's not just about a streak. It's about embracing history's little quirks, conquering life's curveballs, and living life one mile at a time. Here's to the next five years and beyond, chasing new horizons, making deals with destiny, and reminding myself every day why I run.

Secretary of State William Seward (1801-1872)

THE SEWARD AND WASHBURNE FAMILIES
STREAK RUNNERS AND DIPLOMATS
By: Mark Washburne

Like many of you, running every day has become an important part of my identity through the years. I am also grateful for having been given the opportunity to serve on the management team of our running streak association for over a dozen years now. In my work life, I am a college history professor and much of my professional life has been spent thinking, writing, and talking about stories from the past. In particular, I have a special interest in events before, during, and after the American Civil War having written a multivolume biography of my distant cousin, Elihu Washburne (1816-1887), who was an Illinois Congressman (1853-1869) and close political ally to both Presidents Abraham Lincoln and Ulysses S. Grant.

Secretary of State Elihu Washburne (1816-1887)

Coming from the same hometown of Galena, Illinois, Grant and Washburne were particularly close and President Grant appointed Elihu Washburne American Minister to France, a role he served from 1869-1877. Washburne presented his letters of credence to French Emperor Napoleon III in May 1869 and was present the next year for the Franco-German War (1870-1871). During that war, Minister Washburne distinguished himself as one of the only foreign diplomats to remain in Paris during the German siege of that city and later the Paris Commune (1871). After these events, both the French and German governments honored the American Minister for his diplomatic and humanitarian efforts during those trying times.

Forgotten to many, Elihu Washburne had another diplomat role in between his long service as an Illinois Congressman and American Minister to France. From 5 March 1869 to 16 March 1869, a period of just twelve days, Washburne served as the American Secretary of State. The diplomat that Elihu Washburne replaced as the head of the State Department was William Henry Seward, who served as Secretary for almost 8 years during the Lincoln and Andrew Johnson administrations. As you learned from the previous article, Secretary Willard Seward is also a relative of airline pilot and streak runner Willow Seward.

In September, I received an update and picture from Willow Seward on her five-year running streak anniversary. Given my interest in the American Civil War, I asked her if she was related to Secretary Seward and received confirmation that she was indeed. My family thinks I am an over sharer and I certainly was with Willow Seward when I learned that she was related to the American Secretary who purchased Alaska from Russia in 1867. I proceeded to write to her about the friendship her 19th century relative had with my 19th century relative. This essay shares that story of the connection between the two American Secretary of States whose relatives would one day become streak runners. Unless you count running for President – Seward nominated for President but lost at the 1860 Republican Convention and Washburne nominated for President and Vice President but lost at the 1880 Republican Convention – this is a history story and not a running story. Please be warned, therefore, and move onto to our next article if learning about American history is not your thing.

In researching and writing my books, I learned that the Elihu Washburne might have met William Seward as early as 1852. In that year, Elihu Washburne was elected to Congress as a Whig from Illinois. During the 1852 campaign, I found he had some contact with William Seward, a former Governor (1839-1842) and now a Senator (1849-1861) from New York. Later, on 16 May 1854, Congressman Washburne set sail for Europe with three other Congressmen. Washburne wrote at the time that he was pleased when Senator Seward went on board "to bid me good bye."

In 1860, Senator Seward's name was put into nomination for President at the Chicago Republican Convention. Elihu Washburne was sick and stayed in Washington and did not attend the convention. His younger brother, Congressman Cadwallader Washburn (among his brothers, only Elihu added the "e" at the end of the last name) was "a delegate from Wisconsin and a supporter of Seward." Cadwallader Washburn ended up being a Civil War General and Governor of Wisconsin. In the 1830s, Cadwallader Washburn left Maine for Wisconsin with just $5 in his pocket but still ended up being a successful businessman. His flour won a "Gold Medal" at an international competition and he ends up being the founder of General Mills Corporation.

With the support of Cadwallader Washburn and others, Senator Seward received the most (but not a majority) on the first two ballots for President. Despite his early support, Senator Seward would lose on the third ballot to Abraham Lincoln for the Republican nomination for President. Lincoln would go onto win the Presidency that November and then chose his rival, Senator William Seward, to be his Secretary of State.

In early 1861, Congressman Washburne and Senator Seward arranged to have President-elect Lincoln put on an earlier train to his inauguration because of threats against Lincoln's life as his train went through Baltimore. Congressman Washburne later wrote about the plan to "sneak" the President-elect into Washington:

As the 4th of March [date Lincoln would be inaugurated President] drew near, what occupied our most anxious thought was, how Mr. Lincoln could get to Washington and be inaugurated. Governor Seward was the Senate member, and I was put on as the part of the House, for the reason, perhaps, that I was from Illinois, a known personal friend of the President who had been in close correspondence with him all winter. Associating ourselves together, we came to the conclusion that everything must be done with the most profound secrecy.

Governor Seward, his son Frederick W. Seward, subsequently his Assistant Secretary of State, and myself were the only persons in Washington who had any knowledge whatever of Mr. Lincoln's proposed movements. That there was a conspiracy in Baltimore to assassinate him as he should pass through, there can be no reasonable doubt.

We hoped he might be able to come through in the daytime from Philadelphia, taking a train secretly and cutting the wires, so that his departure could not be known. But General Scott's detectives in Baltimore had developed such a condition of things, that Governor Seward thought that the President-elect and his friends in Philadelphia should be advised in regard hereto, and on the night of the 22d [21] of February he sent his son, Frederic W., over to Philadelphia to consult with them. Till now we believed the President would come over from Philadelphia on the train leaving there at noon on the 23d [22].

In the meantime, the President had promised to run up to Harrisburg to attend a reception of the Pennsylvania legislature at twelve o'clock on that day. Up to this time the situation had been fully discussed by the friends of Mr. Lincoln in the light of all the information received, but no particular program agreed upon. It was not until the party started for Harrisburg the next morning that the best method of getting to Washington was finally talked over.

Mr. Lincoln had previously had a conversation with the detective Pinkerton and Mr. Frederic W. Seward in regard to the condition of things at Baltimore. The Hon. Norman B. Judd, of Chicago, one of the most conspicuous and trusted friends of Mr. Lincoln, who had accompanied the party from Springfield, suggested a plan which, after full discussion by Mr. Lincoln and all his friends present, was agreed upon and successfully carried out.

This plan, as is generally known, was that after the dinner which Governor Curtin had tendered to him had been finished, at six o'clock in the afternoon, he should take a special car and train from Harrisburg for Philadelphia to intercept the night train from New York to Washington. The telegraph wires from Harrisburg were all cut, so there could be no possible telegraphic connection with the outside world.

The connection was made at Philadelphia. Mr. Lincoln was transferred to the Washington train without observation, to arrive at his destination on time the next morning without the least miscarriage, as will be stated hereafter.

On the afternoon of the 23d [22], Mr. Seward came to my seat in the House of Representatives, and told me he had no information from his son nor anyone else in respect of Mr. Lincoln's movements, and that he could have none, as the wires were all cut, but he thought it very probable he would arrive in the regular train from Philadelphia, and he suggested we would meet at the depot to receive him.

We were promptly on hand; the train arrived in time, and with strained eyes we watched the descent of the passengers. But there was no Mr. Lincoln among them; though his arrival was by no means certain, yet we were much disappointed. But as there was no telegraphic connection, it was impossible for us to have any information.

It was no use to speculate - and, disappointed, and under the empire of conflicting emotions we separated to go to our respective homes, but agreeing to be at the depot upon the arrival of the New York train the next morning before daylight, hoping either to meet the President or get some information as to his movements.

I was on hand in station, but to my great disappointment Governor Seward did not appear. I planted myself behind one great pillar in the old Washington and Baltimore depot, where I could see and not be observed. Presently the train came rumbling in on time. It was a moment of great anxiety to me.

Congressman Washburne claimed that there were many false stories about Lincoln's arrival for his inauguration:

There had been a great deal printed in the newspapers about Mr. Lincoln's arrival in Washington and about the 'Scotch cap' and 'big shawl' he wore through Baltimore, etc., etc., most of which is mere stuff. I propose now to tell about his arrival at Washington, from my own personal knowledge - what I saw with my own eyes and what I heard with my own ears, not the eyes and ears of someone else.

As I have stated, I stood behind the pillar awaiting the arrival of the train. When it came to a stop I watched with fear and trembling to see the passengers descend. I saw every car emptied, and there was no Mr. Lincoln.

I was well-nigh in despair, and when about to leave I saw slowly emerge from the last sleeping car three persons. I could not mistake the long, lank form of Mr. Lincoln, and my heart bounded with joy and gratitude. He had on a soft low-crowned hat, a muffler around his neck, and a short bob-tailed overcoat. Anyone who knew him at that time could not have failed to recognize him at once, but, I must confess, he looked more like a well-to-do farmer from one of the back towns of Jo Daviess County [Illinois] coming to Washington to see the city, take out his land warrant and get the patent for his farm, than the President of the United States.

Washburne startled the President-elect and his bodyguards:

The only persons that accompanied Mr. Lincoln were Pinkerton, the well-known detective, recently deceased, and Ward H. Lamon. When they were fairly on the platform and a short distance from the car, I stepped forward and accosted the President: 'How are you, Lincoln?'

At this unexpected and rather familiar salutation the gentlemen were apparently somewhat startled, but Mr. Lincoln, who had recognized me, relieved them at once by remarking in his peculiar voice: "This is only Washburne!"

Lincoln was pleased to see his old friend and political ally from Illinois. "Then we all exchanged congratulations and walked out to the front of the depot, where I had a carriage in waiting," wrote Washburne. "Entering the carriage (all four of us) we drove rapidly to Willard's Hotel, entering on Fourteenth Street, before it was fairly daylight. The porter showed us into the little receiving room at the head of the stairs, and at my direction went to the office to have Mr. Lincoln assigned a room."

Soon after arriving at the Willard Hotel, they were greeted by William Seward. "We had not been in the hotel more than two minutes before Governor Seward hurriedly entered, much out of breath and somewhat chagrined to think he had not been up in season to be at the depot on the arrival of the train," wrote Washburne. "The meeting of those two great men under the extraordinary circumstances which surrounded them was full of emotion and thankfulness. I soon took my leave, but not before promising Governor Seward that I would take breakfast with him at eight o'clock; and as I passed out the outside door the Irish porter said to me with a smiling face: 'And by faith it is you who have brought us a President.'"

Later, Washburne had breakfast with Seward. "At eight the Governor and I sat down to a simple and relishing breakfast," concluded Washburne. "We had been relieved of a load of anxiety almost too great to bear. The President had reached Washington safely and our spirits were exalted, and with a sense of great satisfaction we sipped our delicious coffee and loaded our plates with the first run of Potomac shad."

Washburn Family from Maine

Once the Lincoln Administration began, Elihu Washburne's oldest brother, Israel Washburn, who served as Governor of Maine from 1861 to 1863, also had contact with Secretary of State Seward. "It was early 1861," recalled Governor Israel Washburn, "when I visited Washington at the request of Mr. Seward who tendered me an appointment as foreign minister which I declined having so recently entered my duties as Governor." While Israel Washburn turned down an appointment as a foreign minister, another brother, Charles Washburn, served as the American Minister to Paraguay from 1863-1868 under Secretary of State Seward during the Administrations of Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson.

Maine's Governor Israel Washburn, by the way, was the first brother elected to the United States House in 1850. With younger brothers Elihu from Illinois (first elected in 1852) and Cadwallader from Wisconsin (first elected in 1854) there was at one point three brothers from three different states in the House of Representatives in the 1850s. The youngest brother, William Washburn, also served terms the House from another state, Minnesota, in the 1870s and 1880s but not at the same time as his older brothers. The youngest brother, William Washburn, was also the only sibling to serve in the United States Senate (1889-1895).

During the American Civil War, Illinois Congressman Elihu Washburne served as an important link between Illinois President Abraham Lincoln and Illinois General Ulysses S. Grant. "About all I know of Grant I have got from you," wrote Abraham Lincoln to Congressman Elihu Washburne in 1864. "I have never seen him. Who else besides you know anything about Grant?" Many historians believe that General Grant's quick rise in the ranks during the Civil War was aided by having a Congressman from his hometown of Galena, Illinois, promoting the General's accomplishments with the President of the United States.

The events of April 1865 would be dramatic and life changing for both the Seward and Washburne families. For Congressman Elihu Washburne, he was an eyewitness to the end of the war in Virginia. In April, 1865, Grant's Army of the Potomac finally captured Petersburg, Virginia. Confederate General Robert E. Lee, with his army now reduced to 25,000 men, could no longer hope to defend Richmond and began moving West in hopes of finding a way around the Union forces. The Confederate General's objective was to hook up with other Confederate troops in North Carolina. As recalled later by Congressman Washburne, that news would arrive in early April: "The news of the fall of Richmond reached Galena at eleven o'clock Monday morning, April 3, 1865." After hearing the news, Washburne "took the train 'for the front' at five p.m. and arrived in Washington, April 6th."

Congressman Elihu Washburne was soon headed for Virginia where he would see President Abraham Lincoln for the last time:

I found that the President, Mrs. Lincoln, and a party of friends had left on an excursion for Fortress Monroe, City Point, and Richmond. Mr. Blaine joined me, and we made the trip together to City Point. On arriving there, late Friday afternoon, we found the President and party had returned from Richmond, and were on their steamer, the River Queen, which was to remain at City Point over night.

In the evening Mr. Blaine and myself went on board the steamer to pay our respects to the President. I never passed a more delightful evening. Mr. Lincoln was in perfect health and in exuberant spirits. His relation of his experiences and all he saw at Richmond had all that quaintness and originality for which he was distinguished. Full of anecdote and reminiscence, he never flagged during the whole evening.

His son Robert was in the military service and with the advancing army, and knowing that I was bound for the 'front' the next morning, he said to me: "I believe I will drop Robert a line if you will take it. I will hand it to you in the morning before you start." I went to the wharf the next morning, and soon Mr. Lincoln came ashore from his steamer, with the letter in his hand. He was erect and buoyant, and it seemed to me that I had never seen him look so great and grand. After a few words of conversation, he handed me the letter, and I bid him what proved to be alas! a final adieu.

General Lee surrendered to General Grant on Sunday, 9 April 1865, at Appomattox Courthouse, Virginia. Unfortunately, Elihu Washburne missed the event but would arrive in camp the next day. "Arrived at Genl. Grant's headquarters at 9.50 P.M. and am to remain with him in his tent overnight," Elihu Washburne wrote in his diary on 10 April 1865. "Found all the staff here who greeted me with great cordiality and kindness."

Congressman Washburne spent the night in Grant's tent and the next morning he left for Appomattox Court House with a company of cavalry, which the General sent as an escort. The Illinois Congressman rode directly into and all through the Confederate camp, where they saw General Lee and a number of other Generals.

The official surrender came the next day on Wednesday, 12 April 1865. In his diary, Washburne recorded the surrender of the Confederate troops: "At six o'clock, I saw the final surrender and stacking of arms of Gordon's entire corps, consisting of ten thousand men. The whole body was addressed by Gordon and when he concluded, the last ditch was reached and the arms stacked and the Johnnies marched off to the tune of Dixie played by a band. Got chips from the apple tree under which Lee surrendered to Grant. I stay at Gibbon's headquarters to-night."

By noon on 12 April, Congressman Washburne, having seen more than 10,000 soldiers surrender, decided to start on his return journey. Washburne's party was joined by three Confederate Generals: "Twelve cavalymen were assigned to [Washburne] as an escort, for a few of Lee's soldiers had taken to the woods with their weapons. Three Confederate generals asked permission to go with the Washburne party, for they were afraid that some trigger-happy Yankee might think that a confederate general was still fair game."

By Good Friday, 14 April, Congressman Elihu B. Washburne, had already departed from his Confederate traveling companions and had arrived in City Point, Virginia. "He was not only extremely happy about the final victory of the United States over the forces of rebellion, but also proud that, as far as he knew, he was the only northern civilian to witness the final surrender at Appomattox."

Washburne also had the honor of telegraphing General Robert E. Lee's farewell address at Appomattox Courthouse to Secretary of War Stanton. While Washburne was already on a steamer heading for Richmond, the message (apparently sent later that evening) was not received until 8:30 p.m. at the War Department. This was approximately the same time that the Presidential Party had arrived at Ford's Theater to see Our American Cousin.

The play had already started when the Presidential party took their seats. Onstage, Laura Keane, as Florence Trenchard, was in a scene with Lord Dundreary. Seeing the President, Miss Keane stopped the action and applauded vigorously. The entire theater stood and also applauded. The orchestra conductor, Professor Withers, raised his baton and the band played "Hail to the Chief." Entering the Presidential box, President Lincoln "turned smilingly to the cheering audience and bowed."

The play, Our American Cousin, was a "creaky farce" about an American bumpkin, Asa Trenchard, who goes to England to claim a fortune he has inherited from a noble relative. Trenchard is pursued by a fortune-hunting Englishwoman, Mrs. Mountchessington, who wants him to marry her daughter, Augusta. The Lincolns appeared to enjoy the play.

In the second scene of the third act is one of the most "predictable crowd-pleasers" in the play. Mrs. Mountchessington, after learning that Asa Trenchard had given away his inheritance, denounces him for not knowing how to behave, and makes a haughty exit. Asa responds to her exit by saying, "Don't know the manners of good society, eh? Well, I guess I know enough to turn you inside out, old gal -- you sockdologizing old man-trap." The laughter and applause almost covered the sound of a shot being fired in the presidential box.

The assassin was actor John Wilkes Booth. At a distance of about two feet, in the midst of laughter, the actor pointed his derringer at the back of Lincoln's head on the left side and pulled the trigger. The ball entered the back part of the President's head. It was about 10:13 p.m.

Washington.

My dear Sir,

I thank you sincerely for the kind expressions of sympathy contained in your letter of yesterday.

My father's condition, we think is now gradually improving from day to day, though he still suffers much pain -

Yours very truly,

Frederick Seward's letter to Governor Israel Washburn – 14 April 1865

At precisely the same moment when Booth shot the President, one of the actor's henchmen, Lewis Thornton Powell, made an appearance at the mansion of Secretary of State William H. Seward, on Lafayette Square, and rang the doorbell.

The Secretary of State was at home recovering from a driving accident he had suffered a few days before this eventful day. Seward had been thrown from his carriage with great violence, breaking his jaw. The physicians had made a steel mask or frame to hold the broken bones in place while setting. All the family bewailed the accident bitterly at the time it occurred. The accident would later be seen as a blessing in disguise as the steel mask protected the Secretary from a would-be assassin's knife.

Earlier, after Seward's driving accident was reported in the press, former Maine Governor Israel Washburn, oldest brother of Elihu, sent a letter of sympathy to the Secretary of State. On that fateful Good Friday, 14 April, Seward's son Frederick, who also was the Assistant Secretary of State, acknowledged Governor Washburn's note:

Washington
April 14, 1865

My dear Sir,

I thank you sincerely for the kind expressions of sympathy contained in your letter of yesterday. My father's condition, we think is now gradually improving from day to day, though he still suffers much pain --

Yours very truly,
F. W. Seward

Hon. I. Washburn, Jr.
Portland, Me --

Meanwhile, later that night, Lewis Powell, pretending to be a medical courier, informed the young black servant who opened the door that he wanted to see the Secretary as he had been sent by Dr. Verdi with a package of medicine for him. William Bell, the doorman, objected, saying that no one could go up.

For several minutes they argued in the hall, finally Bell relented. Being the man was so insistent and "had a very fine voice," Bell thought better of it. The servant then apologized for having been rough in his refusals, and let the messenger follow him upstairs, whispering, "Doan' walk so heavy."

At the top of the stairs, the two met Frederick Seward. Powell told Frederick Seward that he desired to see his father as he had medicine for him. Frederick went into the bedroom of his sick father, but returned with the message that his father could not be seen, as he was asleep, and requested that Powell hand him the medicine. Powell insisted that, "I must see Mr. Seward." Frederick Seward replied, "You cannot see him. I am the proprietor here, and his son; if you cannot leave your message with me, you cannot leave it at all."

After realizing he would not be able to see the Secretary, Powell started to go down the stairs with Bell preceding him. Powell suddenly turned upon Frederick hitting him twice on the head with the butt of his revolver until he was unconscious. Bell ran downstairs and out the front door, yelling, "Murder!" Powell, in the meantime, had started for Mr. Seward's chamber.

George Robinson, who was acting as attendant nurse to the Secretary, and who heard the disturbance in the hall, opened the door to see what the trouble was in the hallway. Powell struck Robinson with a knife in the forehead, knocking him partially down, and then pressed by him to the bed of Mr. Seward.

The Assassin then jumped on the bed and inflicted with his knife three wounds on the prostrate Secretary, one a very large gash on the right cheek, a cut on his throat on the right side, and one under the left ear. Powell's knife, however, "glanced off" Seward's steel mask preventing more serious injury. This alone saved the Secretary's life.

After the attack, the Secretary's presence of mind prevented any further injury, for he gathered the bedclothes around him and rolled onto the floor. Major Augustus Seward, another of Seward's son, now entered the room, sprang upon the bed, and immediately grabbed Powell.

Augustus Seward, with the help of a recovering Robinson, were able to knock down Powell. Powell recovered, however, and struck Major Seward five or six times on the forehead and on the top of the head, and once on the left hand with what was supposed to be a bottle or decanter, seized from the table, repeating at the same time in an intense but not strong voice the words "I'm mad!"

Powell then broke away from Major Seward and rushed downstairs and out of the house. In exiting, Powell met Mr. Emerick W. Hansell of the State Department, who was coming up the stairs. Powell struck at him with his knife and stabbed him in his right side, inflicting a dangerous wound running from the spine obliquely towards the right side. The wound was three inches deep and nearly one inch wide.

Mounting his horse, Powell rode slowly down the street while William Bell trotted along twenty feet behind yelling to the world, "There he is!" For two blocks or more the strange little procession ambled along, until at last, Powell, as if awakening to his danger, "clapped spurs to his horse" and disappeared.

Lewis Powell wounded five persons before he left the house. The most serious casualty was Frederick Seward, the Assistant Secretary of State who had corresponded with Governor Israel Washburn earlier in the day. Frederick Seward's skull was badly fractured in two places, and it required the greatest care and the constant attention of the physicians to save his life. His life was saved but for the remainder of his days, he was compelled to wear a silver plate over the fractured skull. His father, William Seward, would also survive and continued his duties as Secretary of State until 4 March 1869, when he was replaced by Governor Washburn's brother, Elihu Benjamin Washburne.

It was suggested by our esteemed President, Mark Washburne, that it would be of interest to survey the membership as to how many races they have run during their lifetime. We had very few responses from the announcement in the newsletter, so I decided to send emails to those who were listed in the survey done back in 2009. It was decided to limit the list to those who have finished at least 500 running races. A few of our membership, such as Jim Pearson, of WA (2nd longest active streak in the world), have not kept track of all their races. Here are the responses I received, including some info from the 2009 list:

I asked Paul Ladniak about all his races. He retired from racing in 2021, after having 5 stents placed in his arteries (he had a heart attack at night but did not know it):

I started out as a sprinter, running the 100 yd dash. I consider myself a cross country and track runner. During track and cross-country season we had meets twice a week. I sometimes ran 3 events in a meet. I have running logs that go back to 1960 when I was in junior high and high school. After graduating from college and working as a teacher, I ran in all comers track meets sometimes twice a week, usually the mile and the half mile. I ran a 4:26 mile at the age of 30 and lost to Don Kardong (who finished 4th in the 1976 Olympic Marathon in 2:11). I ran only two marathons in my life. At the University of TN, I ran cross country (5 miles) and track (half mile, mile, 2 mile, 3 mile and 6 mile). Coach considered me unique in that I had such a range of racing ability that he could put me in a race and score points where they were needed. Running road races, I mostly ran 5 and 10k. My best 5k time was 13:14 and my best 10K time was 29:15. The race distance I liked the best was 5k.

* on Spring 2001 USRSA's 1st Streak List

The top 26 female run streakers have all registered their daily runs. Only the first two (Eileen and Julie) were among the first 100 US daily runners. They lived in 19 different states, with 5 from CA and 3 from MN. Their ages ranged from 27 to 43 when they began. Lois Bastien was the oldest to start and hasn't stopped yet, recently becoming the first 87-year-old (M or F) to run every day. Victoria and Diana were the first two (and so far only) women who have died among those doing it daily (32 men have died).

If I had extended the list to the top 30, it would have included Eliza Eshelman Miron of IN, who started streaking when she was 16, and Paige Pearson of WA, who began at age 13. More recently, the youngest girls to do it daily have been Lauren Thorson of MN, age 5, and Sierra Stempke of CA, starting two weeks before her 4th birthday, joining her dad and brothers for one mile each afternoon.

These totals include some who have not registered their streaks. Also, runners who have moved are counted in all the states they lived in during the time they did not miss a day. Not surprising that the six states with the most streakers in 2016 are still in the top six, though the order has changed. Since Apr 2016, the states who added the most doing it daily are TX (+226), CA (+216), and NY (+195). The top three gains for women are NY (+99), TX (+94), and MN (+89). Because CA, TX and NY have such large populations their stalker rates per capita are not in the top ten- 8.0 run streakers per million Californians; 10.0 daily runners per million Texans. #1 MN has a huge per capita lead at 49.6 per million residents (and has been on top for most of the last 40 years). followed by WY with 34.4.

Though there are no other states with more than 30 streak runners per million population, there is one country that has a high rate of streakers. Much of that is due to one woman, Ellen Westvelt. Ellen just recently became the first Swede to run every day for ten years. She and her husband have an ultra running community and company called "Pace on Earth." In the last few years they have promoted run streaks, have a big Facebook group (Runstreak Sweden), and the number of Swedes doing it has risen astronomically. As of Oct 15, 2023, Swedish residents have registered 759 active and 279 retired streaks. Ten individuals have both a retired and active streak, which means there are 1027 distinct daily runners. Given their population of 10.525 million, that makes their streak rate 97.8 per million, which will certainly pass the 100 mark soon. This is a huge jump from the 250 active and retired streaks combined on Jan 1, 2021 (or 23.8 per million residents).

Run streak reaches 2 years!!! Year 2 had plenty of challenges including: a tropical storm (ran between the bands), partial rotator cuff tear (homemade sling eased the stabbing my eyes out pain into stabbing one eye out pain), and a bout of COVID. I'm sure more challenges will come in year three but I'm looking forward to continuing this "No Blank Pages" lifestyle!

I started running occasionally in 2016 to stay in shape for soccer. Friends invited me to run the occasional 5K. In 2019 a friend encouraged me to run the Buffalo Half Marathon. After that, I began to run races with some frequency including the Buffalo Half Marathon, various RunDisney races in Florida, the ET Full Moon Half in Nevada, The Strip at Night Half in Las Vegas, the Buffalo Turkey Trot, the Utica Boilermaker 15K, and numerous other races in Western New York and Pittsburgh.

My streak began in February of 2020 when that same friend challenged me to run every day during the 40 days of Lent. I haven't stopped since, despite a few challenges such as the Buffalo Christmas Blizzard of 2022.

After a two-year run streak, I can honestly say I am the happiest I have ever been. A streak is not about motivation, skill, or even toughness. It's all about commitment.

There have been countless early morning and late night runs where the only thought in my head was, "just stay committed." This thought has translated into my everyday life.

I am more present around those I love, study harder as a second-year medical student, and live a life with intention. This has been a joy, especially with others, and I do not see an end in sight.

I reached my 2-year running streak back on July 5th and also 107,000 lifetime running miles last week (age 41)! I was recovering from Covid and our dog passing away when I reached my Streakaversary in July.

It's been a fun challenge the past 2 yrs keeping up a running streak! I've generally been healthier and recovered faster since starting the streak. I've dialed in my diet, sleep, mental/emotional health, women's health, strength training, correct shoe size/width, and taking care of the little things. It all adds up and has helped me keep the streak going!

The toughest challenges to work through are ~freak injuries/accidents, lots of travel/stress of travel, and non-running related health issues (~food poisoning, Covid, allergies, Perimenopause). My toughest health challenge this year has been working through symptoms of Perimenopause.

I've set several World and American Records the past 2 years, including the 48 Hour World Record back in March 2023. I think of doing 1+ mile a day as active recovery that has helped me recover faster from Ultras. I wish I had discovered doing a running streak sooner!

Glad to report starting off another year of my streak. The past year was very eventful. I "semi-retired" after working full time for 50 years. With my job, I traveled 75% of the time which at times made keeping the streak alive a bit challenging.

I have now added consistent additional mileage and enjoying the extended time on the roads running. I have also been able to play significantly more tennis 3-4 times a week and fortunately has not impacted my running at all.

Overall, the past 12 months have been eventful with my "semi-retirement" and enjoying my new founded extra time to run, play tennis and spend more time with my children and grandchildren.

DAVID ARCHER JOINS SRI FROM CANADA

I get a monthly newsletter from Runner's World. In the issue that I received on August 18, 2023, is an article titled: Meet the mum with a 9.5-year run streak. In that article was a link called: The rise of the run streak. This article had a reference to the United States Running Streak Association. I googled that and decided to join. That was the morning of August 26, 2023.

So, my "streak" started August 26. I use Strava. The stats on my first run for what I hope to be a long streak are 10 km, 6:13/km. I live in a rural location in Ontario so I enjoy the birds, fresh air, open fields and low traffic volume. The cattle are often curious as I run by but sometimes they stampede away. I run on the road so my choices are north, south, east, west. Going "around the block" here means 8 km or 7.3 km or such.

I started running in high school for a reason that I cannot remember. I did a fundraising walk-a-thon, 18 miles, some time while I was in high school. My older sister mentioned a classmate who had run the distance. Living in a small rural community in Alberta I had never heard of such a thing.

I did some running in university, always alone, no races. When I moved to Toronto in 1977, I continued running, not keeping track of it at all and not being aware of the racing scene. In the fall of 1980, I joined the orchestra of the National Ballet of Canada. I am a trombonist. I would run in the various cities in Canada that we toured to and also in Europe. Walking/running in a town/city is a good way to see it. In Luxemburg I almost got lost. From where I was up a hillside I couldn't see the hotel where we were staying and I didn't want to retrace my steps because of the dogs. Finally, I noticed a building way up the valley that was across from the hotel. Saved! On one run in a large park in West Berlin I felt that I could just fly, it felt so good and easy. That was when I was 26 in 1981.

I stopped running for years because my right hip hurt. The doctor said it was arthritis. I should have kept running. Anyway, I swam in a pool for months, completing a 2,500 meter (1.55 miles) fundraising swim. I stopped swimming because it was bothering my shoulder. In 2013 I joined Tidal Fitness, a CrossFit gym in Toronto. My shoulder and knee issues disappeared and I also started running again.

I have participated in 18 races since starting racing in 2017 - 5K, 10K, a virtual 21.1K during Covid, and trail races. My latest 5K in July of this year, the Lindsay Milk Run, took 25:26. I won my age group - 60+ at age 69. In June I ran the Toronto Waterfront 10K in 53:37. An organization called 5 PEAKS organizes trail runs/races all across Canada. I did two last year and two this year. These were near Toronto in ski/mountain bike territory, meaning lots of up and down, twists and turns, rocks and roots. After the 7K trail run last year, called Cider Under the Moon, I was so pumped and feeling so alive. It was a fabulous feeling. This year was a 6.9K trail run and a 13K trail run. I need to learn to pick up my feet. Street racing is so different from trail racing, especially if it is a mountain bike trail. I fell four times, three while I was trying to make up time on the second lap, and I also landed in some poison ivy. But not even my ego was injured. The important thing is that I WAS DOING IT! Near the very end of each race I sprint with whatever is left.

With the exception of racing, my running is alone. I live in a very small rural community (17 dwellings). One reason for joining Streak Runners International is to provide more motivation for me to get out regularly. One mile is so short that I probably won't stop there even if I am wasted from the day before. My goal is to do a half marathon in 2 hours or less this fall. Two years ago, my first half marathon was the Canada ARMY Run. The race was held virtually because of Covid. I did it in 2:07:00 from out my front door.

I run because I enjoy it, it is a challenge, it gets me outside and it is healthy. I also need the mood/mental boost that it gives me. I have some aches and pains but I have not had any injuries from running except black toe. For those of you who have injured toe nails while running, there is a running store in Toronto called Black Toe Running.

I have also started tracking my distance on The Cooper 12 Minute Run Test. I recently did that and I ran 2.43KM, excellent according to one chart.

I feel that running is very necessary for me as I age, both physically and mentally.

VERONICA DINNETZ'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

4 years of running, I never thought I would make it this far!

It all started with a 30-day challenge, and then 100 days, and after that why not a year? I think it's the same for most of us. :)

The beautiful and amazing thing about my runstreak is all the new places I see as I explore them running.

I try to celebrate all even days and annual anniversaries and do so with pride! Sometimes it's hard to run just one mile, but in these years, I've completed my first marathon, and I believe there will be more to come.

The most common question is - have you never been sick? Oh yes, I have, but not enough to make me stop!

And I think when you run every day you make the period of weak... oh, I mean the sickness a little shorter than if you just stay in bed.

I hope I will get many more years of this streak and I am grateful for all my support from family and friends!

It's crazy to think that I started my running streak the day after Hurricane Harvey left our side of Houston, Texas, in August of 2017. Now, here I am: six years later!

I ran during the Winter Storm of February 2021 (inside my house, I'm not THAT crazy) and even with a thrombosed hemorrhoid (I kid you not) and various other pains and issues! Here's to my 7th year...and beyond! (The picture is from my first day of running.)

AMY BAYLISS' STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

My brother inspired me to start a running streak. He is in the "well versed" category and will reach 16 years on his streak this year and I am excited to reach my 5-year running streak. However, I must admit initially I thought his endeavor was completely nuts!

I probably need to explain myself, I am a physiotherapist and when one appraises the research on sporting injuries; rest and cross training is typically recommended for inflammatory conditions. But I am a convert. I feel like I have less injuries since I started my streak.

That being said, I wanted to recommend to all those undertaking a running streak to listen to your body, have a shorter run on days when something feels uncomfortable or painful. Also, be proactive, find a good sports massage therapist to help you manage aches and pains. If your injury does not settle down, then seek out a physiotherapist/physical therapist who specializes in working with runners.

One technique that I specialize in and have used with many runners is Instrument Assisted Soft Tissue Mobilization (IASTM). It is great with soft tissue injuries.

Congratulations to everyone who has also reached a streak milestone this year - cheers to many more enjoyable running days!!

This year has been super hectic. Despite having Covid, hospital trips, and tiring ski days, I've still managed to run every day. I even bumped it up to 5k a day 6 months ago which has been super fun.

TIMOTHY VIGIL'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

August 26th, 2023 marked RSD1826, 5 years of running without missing a day. The lowest mileage day run during these past 5 years was during a bout with covid when I ran 1.4 miles, but typically I run no less than 3 miles.

I have run through the heat of summer in different states, the cold of winter in many states, but mostly in the high desert of New Mexico and some in the high elevation of Colorado.

Summer, winter, spring and fall have all had their challenges, which in some cases ended with a treadmill run. Sick or well, minor injuries and all did not keep me from missing the minimum of 1 mile. Early mornings or late nights because of work or travel couldn't keep me from maintaining my runstreak. Although I am mostly an afternoon or early evening runner, in order to make sure that I kept my streak, I did run early mornings.

I have had previous run streaks in all my years as a runner, but most of those streaks were within the last 10 years. I had 1 runstreak as a college athlete of around 300 days but didn't streak again until about 10 years ago.

I ran for just under 1000 days and broke it due to messy travel for work. I had a few other minor streaks of 200 and 300 days but couldn't keep them for odd reasons. Finally, on August 27th, 2018, I ran a short 3 miles in the Colorado mountain town Silverthorne and it just kept going.

I am very blessed and happy that at the age of 59, I can still run streak, as it has helped keep me in competitive condition year-round. Thanks to the discipline it gave me to continue the streak, I have competed against the best in the US at the National Senior games in Ft Lauderdale in 2022 and in Pittsburgh in 2023 and making the medal stand in each set of games.

LARRY ZALEWSKI'S STREAK HITS 14 ½ YEARS

My anniversary update is a bit late here. I'm at 14 1/2 years or so. About 8-10 miles a day.

Getting older means running smarter. Less daily hills, taking it a bit less intense and having more fun. Living in Pittsburgh it's next to impossible to avoid hills unless you run along the rivers downtown. But the rivers have become home to several homeless drug addict camps. Nothing and nobody will deter me though. My favorite running course is a quiet country road, so I'm hoping to make a move soon to the country.

Dodging cars and people isn't very fun anymore. Still competing very well in my age group. Hoping to qualify for Boston Marathon in the 60-64 age group next year. I also completed by 32nd consecutive Ogden Half Marathon in Wheeling, WV this year. My all-time favorite race.

I'm still missing my mom and dad every day. My daily running stories provided them much entertainment up until 2 years ago when they left this earth. Running keeps me sane and happy and always will.

Stay healthy everyone and enjoy every run!

Yes, my streak is still up and running. :)

I'm not sure really what to say on an update. I continue to work with spreading the word about running every day in Sweden. We currently have 11,000 members in our Facebook-group "Runstreak Sverige" (means Runstreak Sweden).

I work as an ultrarunning coach at ultrarunning community Pace on Earth. You can follow me on instagram as @weselle.

And I'm running a lot of my runs together with my dog Vidar (Alaskan Malamute). I'm attaching a picture of us.

I'm still running ultra-races, though I've had a bit of bad luck this summer since two of my big races had to be cancelled or changed due to bad weather and thunderstorms. Over these 10 years I've run more than ten 100-milers and one 200 mile race. 2022 I finished Diagonale des Fous, one of my favorite 100-mile races for the second time!

Many of my daily runs are just 20-30 minutes and I still run by the minimum of 20 minutes per day (though always making sure I meet the requirement of at least 1 mile per day as well). I haven't had any big injuries or been ill (more than just a minor cold) during these years, so I would consider myself lucky!

Hello!! I can't believe today [9 September 2023] is 3 years!!! Numbers!! I love Numbers!!

Never would I have thought it a possibility back in September 2020 still reeling from lockdown after lockdown-this was something I could control and I'm so glad I started!!

I joined an online community via a WhatsApp & Instagram group, there were 70 plus of us streaking and now there's only 2 of us left!! Me and my Canadian virtual running bestie Cyndi Mason (joint 1322)

Not always easy!

Sometimes bloody hard through mental weather, illness, a house move, a new baby grandson and life's general rich tapestry, what I can say is I have never regretted a run. The good the bad the indifferent, it's just part of my daily routine now like brushing my teeth.

My dream is that Cyndi and I get to run together one day in person be that in Canada, Scotland or somewhere else around the world!

Huge shout out to all my cheerleaders. I've had incredible support from family and friends and something I wasn't expecting is all the amazing strangers who root for me every day on social media the running community really is something special.

JODY PRATT JOINS USRSA

I started my running streak without realizing it in a predawn Nor'easter on November 27, 2013. The following day I began a Thanksgiving-New Year's holiday streak. I decided to extend that to a 100-day streak. Then I decided to run for an entire year. And then I just kept running.

Since then, I have upped my minimum mileage several times. For the first four years, I added one mile on each "streakaversary." So, I ran at least two miles my second year, at least 5K my third year, at least four miles my fourth year... and then I realized that the distances were getting impractical, so I left it at four. Over the past five years that minimum distance has inched up to 4.5 miles - and I've vowed to keep it there!

As part of the rules that I've set for myself, all of my miles must be done outdoors. This has led to me running in blizzards, heat waves, rain storms, wildfire smoke, and everything else Mother Nature has thrown at me.

I've run laps on the top deck of airport parking garages and circles on ferry docks. I've done easy city runs, fun group runs, a bunch of marathons, hundreds and hundreds of miles of trail runs, and probably a thousand miles on this one street in my neighborhood that's the only runnable surface for most of the winter. I've streaked in about a dozen foreign countries (sometimes doing two runs in one day to account for time-zone changes) and 30 US states. I've run the day after extensive skin cancer surgery, through countless illnesses and injuries, and on days when life's curveballs have made it seem nearly impossible.

What all of this streaking has taught me is that there's a big difference between "I can't" and "I don't want to." Nearly every obstacle is merely an excuse. I've taken this lesson into my non-running life as well. If you want it bad enough, you can do it!

I'm grateful for everyone who supports me and cheers me on - especially my husband, kids, and running besties - and that my health and circumstances have enabled me to make it this far. I hope that my streak keeps rolling on for years and years and years to come!

BRUCE SHEPHARD'S STREAK HITS 15 YEARS

I feel fortunate to have made it to my 15th year of The Streak. At 79, daily running adds a special and healthful element to my retirement years. I have continued to run with the same running club, Forerunners, for twice as many years as my current streak.

Forerunners, founded by legendary Joe Burgasser, has inspired hundreds of runners over the years. At biweekly track, we celebrate birthdays-- Maria brings a bowl of fresh fruit and Bess comes up with cupcakes. The social dimensions of running remain important as our group ages along together.

The enclosed photo is from our club's celebration of Coach Joe Burgasser's 85th birthday which happened to occur on the same week as my 15-year streak anniversary.

Thanks for the acknowledgment of my 5-year accomplishment. It has been an amazingly insane journey so far. I was just tallying up my stats and I have covered a little more than 8,000 miles including twelve 50Ks (12 different states), a 50-miler, a 40-miler, and three 100-milers. I have also provided pacing for friends at a few tough 100-milers.

Over these 5 years, I think my greatest lesson has been learning how to be flexible. There have been many 1-milers to navigate around the ebbs and flows of life.

Now, I hope to continue my streak as long as I can, but if it ends, I am very likely to start a new one. Thank you for what you do to support this ongoing adventure for many crazy humans like me.

“My Running Odyssey: From Uncertainty to Unstoppable”

There's a moment in life when you find yourself at a crossroads. For many, it's a place or an event; for me, it was a simple action – running. I embarked on this journey not with the intention of becoming a prolific runner, but as a simple endeavor to connect with myself.

Years ago, if someone had told me I'd be an advocate for running, I might have laughed. I was the life of every party, orchestrating events that kept people up all night, celebrating and reveling in the high of the moment. In those days, my idea of running was a sprint to the next big event, the next thrill, or the next memorable night. Little did I know that I was sprinting away from the one thing that would give my life real meaning and purpose.

The transition from a party animal to a fitness devotee wasn't overnight. It began as a quest for physical well-being, perhaps a means to counterbalance the late nights and rich foods. But as my feet hit the pavement, day after day, the rhythm became therapeutic. Each step, each breath, each kilometer became a meditation, a connection to a part of myself I hadn't known existed.

The roads of the Philippines became my sanctuary. From the bustling streets of Manila to the serene paths along the coastline, every terrain told a story, and I was eager to be part of it. But this journey wasn't just about me. As my strides grew more confident and my distances longer, I realized I was no longer running solely for personal gain. The community I built, the friends I made, and the stories I heard made me realize that running was a universal language, connecting souls from different walks of life.

Through events and marathons, I met individuals with tales of resilience, perseverance, and dreams. These weren't just stories; they were fuel, igniting a passion within me that transformed my mere interest in running into an insatiable love. The likes of @hellagood, @davidgoggins, @nickbare, @erchana, @eliud, and @usainbolt inspired me, showing me that limits are just mental constructs, waiting to be shattered.

But it wasn't just about chasing records or impressive times. There were days when the skies poured, and every muscle screamed in protest. On such days, it wasn't the desire to outdo myself that got me out of bed; it was the promise I'd made to myself, the commitment to consistency. And on the days when the sun kissed the horizon and the wind played with my hair, I knew why I ran – for the sheer joy of it.

When I celebrated two years of running daily, it wasn't just a personal achievement. It was a testament to the unwavering support of my community, who had been with me since day one. From those who joined me for the sake of trend or “clout” to those who genuinely shared my passion, every individual made the journey worthwhile.

The Sydney Marathon stands out as a defining moment in my journey. It wasn't just about the race or the time I clocked. It was symbolic of my evolution. From the boy who once thought his purpose was to entertain, I had become a man who understood and is still learning the true essence of life - passion, perseverance, and purpose.

Now, as I look back, I realize that my running journey is a mirror of life itself. There are uphill battles, challenging terrains, unexpected turns, but there's also the thrill of the downhill, the joy of the open road, and the unmatched exhilaration of crossing the finish line. Running has taught me that it's not the destination but the journey that matters.

To those reading this, whether you're a seasoned runner or someone contemplating their first step, remember this – every journey starts with a single step. It's not about how fast you go, but how far you're willing to push yourself. Find your rhythm, find your pace, but more importantly, find yourself. And as you do, know that the road is long, winding, and sometimes tough, but it's also beautiful, rewarding, and full of surprises. So, lace up, step out, and run - not away from challenges but towards your dreams.

LINDSAY WILCOX'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

It seems only fitting that I would be sick on my 2-year streakiversary. While running every day has taught me a lot of things, above all, it has taught me that I can do tough things if I just start by putting one foot in front of the other.

This is my second streak and my second time to 2 years. My first streak ended the day before my 4th c-section at around 900 days. I was lucky enough, I'm sure in part because of my previous streak, to begin streak number 2 just over a month later.

My husband and children are incredibly supportive of my running and I appreciate them immensely. I've always wanted to make it to 1000 days, so that is my current goal, but the stalker community, those with 5000 days and those with 5, all inspire me to take it one day, one mile at a time. Achieving 3 years of streak running seemed impossible yet here I am. When I wonder if I can really keep this going, all I have to do is scroll through the SRI list of active runners. Some of you have been running longer than I've been alive!

2023 has been my most difficult year of running; I started the year with Achilles tendonitis, I suffered from COVID mid-way, and I am just now recovering from all my injuries and setbacks. Because of all this, I've had no choice but to run slower.

I've learned the hard way that my running goal should not be focused on speed, instead it should be about finding something magical in every run. And we find that magic in the running experience: a striking sunset, the scent of a summer evening's fire pit, the sight of fireflies, a plume of hot breath on a cold winter day illuminated under a bright headlamp, white snow crunching at each step.

The best yet is running past your comfort zone and arriving at a profound balance of mind, body, and soul - the clarity that only runners know so well. Fellow runners, I wish you all magic in every run, whatever that pace may be.

I consider myself a former athlete having played soccer through college. I started my re-acquaintance with running after a tough battle with Covid.

Last summer I decided to run every day to clear my thoughts. That lasted 46 days when I ended up out of commission for 2 days.

My current streak started 09/15/22. I travel every week for work and the run grounds me. I enjoy everything about my daily run. It has been an amazing experience that I hope to enjoy for years to come.

PETE WAUMSLEY'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

This is how I got to my 4 year Run Streak. I've been running for as long as I can remember. It has been the one constant in my life. I started in school with grass track running then road racing in my Royal Navy career, running a 2-hour 35 minutes marathon.

My Streak started in September 2019 as my friend was also in the early stages of his streak and I decided to do the same.

In the 4 years, I've covered over 11,300 miles (avg 7.78 miles/day). I've done races in 5k, 10k, marathons and Ultras in that time.

I always try to vary what I do, whether that's a route, distance or terrain, to me running is all about keeping it fresh. I couldn't have done this far if I just ran the same route all the time.

Living in Devon in the UK, I am very lucky to live a 20-minute drive from Dartmoor and running heaven! In the summer, it's an oasis of calm and tranquility; in the winter, it can be a very different beast but again it's what a streak is about.

I currently plan on carrying on with the streak for as long as possible. The next goal is Day 1,500 in November. Then who knows!

I feel very fortunate to report that I recently reached the ten-year mark on my running streak. During the past ten years I've run a total of more than 10,000 miles.

Out of all my runs I think the most memorable one was an early morning run along Omaha Beach in Normandy. But the most important numbers for me are that my blood pressure and cholesterol counts are good - however my BMI indicates that I'm still not tall enough!

I want to thank the organizers and contributors to this newsletter in that I find much encouragement for my running in the stories that are shared. As one of the earlier contributors noted, I haven't seen a stop sign yet so I intend to keep running every day. Mind, body, spirit.

Running is not just a physical activity for me, but a passion. It surges through my body with new energy, helping me feel fit and vital. It is my reliable companion when it comes to unwinding and clearing my mind.

Often, I find valuable inspirations in my thoughts during or after a streak that positively impact my professional life. As the head of a medium-sized company, it is crucial for me to have clear thinking and fresh ideas.

I am infinitely grateful that I have found this source of running inspiration. It gives me not only physical strength but also mental equilibrium. And it fills me with joy to know that I may pass on this passion to my two little boys.

For me, my streak anniversary is almost like a second birthday. It signifies not only a span of time but is a symbol of continuity, strength, and personal growth.

Streak running has become an important pillar of my life, bringing me joy, health, and inspiration. It is more than just a sport - it is a way of life that continually motivates and fulfills me.

I greet all fellow streakers and encourage you to stay true to yourselves and enjoy your runs.

Thanks to the SRI forum. I feel overwhelmed to complete 3 years of streak running and still continuing.

It's difficult last year as two of my family members suffered from cancer and after a 4 month fight I lost my brother-in-law. Those last 15 days in the hospital were difficult and I had to run those 2km and 3km inside the hospital campus. It nearly took my pressure off.

Five years of running at least a mile a day. The first time I heard about someone running every day was reading an article about the late Ron Hill. I didn't think it was possible to do this. What about injuries? Recovery?

This is actually the second streak. My first failed short of two years, when a bad movement caused a back spasm. As soon as I was able to, I started streak #2. My suggestion to anyone who has to stop because of a serious injury - pick yourself up and start your next streak as soon as possible.

The daily run is part of my routine - every day is planned in such a way that I get my run in, with usually enough margin in case I get delayed. For example, if I have to fly, and there is a possibility of a delay past midnight, I make sure to run in the morning. Of course, I always carry running shorts in my laptop bag, but so far have managed to not use them in an emergency. I also find it helpful to do the run as early in the day as possible, to get it out of the way.

Lastly, injuries. So far, I've been lucky. Despite being too heavy, I've managed to dodge serious injuries, possibly because of the daily runs. It also helps that I didn't get sports injuries as a child. Here's to the next 5 years. :-)

KELLY GRANT'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

1461 days. 48 months. Four years. Four years of running at least a mile a day every day.

During my streak, I have run in two continents, 8 states, through a pandemic, in snow, rain, sand, grass, concrete, through sickness and injury, in airports, hotels, basements and gyms, and early in the morning to late at night.

Some people ask why? Honestly, it's simple, because I can. One day, my body will betray me and I will not be able to run. Today I can, so today I will.

Some people ask how? Find (or build) a community of support around you. On busy or sick days, the support will keep you on course; and perhaps that support is even jogging next to you making sure you finish!

While running everyday does become engrained into your daily life, life happens and positive support surrounding you is essential. You see, my four-year anniversary is not my own, it's an accomplishment shared with my husband, children and dear running friends for I would not have seen this milestone without them.

Today I will continue to run *because* I can, surrounded by a community of support; when the finish line does come, and it will, I can look back at the beautiful journey and celebrate with those who made this possible.

ROGER CROSSLEY'S STREAK HITS 12 YEARS

Hey everyone. I hit the twelve year mark today (October 14th) with a 7.2 mile run on the treadmill. Most of my running nowadays is on a trusty old Sole treadmill (2013 vintage) due to progressive arthritic degeneration in both knees & lower back. I much prefer running outside & when I do it's always the best.

Although I just turned 70 recently, I've been able to increase my daily average to a little over 7 miles a day over the past two years (my daily average for my streak to date is 6.5 miles). My pace has slowed however & I now run between ten & ten-and-a-half-minute mile (was turning in eight and a half to nine-minute miles when my streak began).

I also gave up running 5Ks & 10Ks a couple of years ago (didn't want to cross over that 30-minute mark for a 5K). I never ran in anything more than a 10K. Marathon running is beyond my comprehension & I have the utmost respect for those that do.

I started running in my late fifties & hope to continue running for as long as possible. I plan to keep adding to my streak until I'm no longer physically able to run on any given day. So far, I've been fortunate to be able to run through a variety of injuries & illnesses including COVID in March of this year (that was fun). I wish all continued success with their streaks.

STEVE KASS' STREAK HITS A DECADE

On October 23, 2013, I was looking for a new fitness challenge and decided to run 30 consecutive days starting on October 23, 2023, without any particular goal except running every day, became 10 years. Minimum 4 miles every day to qualify for my streak.

Over the course of 10 years, I was in 15 countries and flew over 1.5m miles, ran through sickness, injury, inconvenience, hangovers, snow, sleet, rain, and whatever other obstacle emerged on a particular day.

I have been called Forest Gump more than once or twice but I take it as a badge of honor. I am proud of the accomplishment but also realize normal people don't get it, or why, or how! (I guess that makes me abnormal).

I started running when I was a teenager and started my streak in lockdown when I was 24 and when running was the only way to get out of the house.

However, running every day has hugely bettered my performances in races. Since starting my streak, I've done a 100km ultra in 13 hours, and have gone from a 3 hour 57 marathon to a 3 hour 15 marathon.

I've also just today [15 October 2023] finished the Amsterdam half marathon in 1 hour 27 minutes. I only broke 1 hour 40 mins in 2021, so I've chipped away at my personal best quite considerably recently.

A lot of my runs are done around Lakeside Country Park in Eastleigh but I often get out into the hills of the South Downs National Park at the weekends, and am a member of Winchester and District Athletics Club. I did a 'celebratory run' for my 1000th day in this summer by doing a half marathon finishing on a roman hill fort in Winchester near where I work.

My journey to becoming an "Official Streaker" started back in 2018-2019. I attempted to make it to a year then, and was plagued by injury right before the Boston Marathon. Since that date, I have had 2 more attempts at a year that fell through because of illness or injury. However, I stayed persistent, and finally had a streak that "stuck."

This past August I celebrated 2 years of my current streak!! (My wife threw me a party when I reached 1 year). I'm excited to have joined the team, and look forward to seeing how long I can keep this up. This group is such an encouragement, and you keep me motivated to keep on running every day.

Thank you for my Running Streak!!! 5 years has gone by so fast!!!

I am still running every day, some days more than others. I have also (since June) resumed my quest to hit 50 marathons before I turn 50 years old in February 2024. What a journey this has been, and would not be possible without the run streak.

There are so many days where I just want to relax, rest, and do nothing. But knowing that I have to run at least one mile, which usually turns into 3-4, I keep my fitness level significantly higher than if I ran when I felt like it.

Keep running everyone!!!!!!

Running out west downunder.

Hi, I am Iain, 61 years young, reaching my 7-year streak on Sunday 15th October.

I live in Perth, Western Australia and lucky enough to enjoy 4.30am runs by our Swan River nearby before work.

I travel across Australia and internationally every so often and love nothing better than a nice sightseeing run from my hotel.

Trickiest run for me was an early dark run on black ice and fresh snow in London one December. Nothing like my usual runs- I just managed to stay on my feet but had to buy some gloves and a beanie after day 1!

Craziest run to preserve my streak was running short laps for 40 mins in a private room in Hong Kong Airport during a layover where my travel was 35 hours door to door!

Before I began daily running 7 years ago I usually ran 10-12km about 3-4 times week with events being community fun runs mostly 10-14km.

I got up to running 35km in training and have run several half marathons.

Seven years ago, I switched to daily running of 3-7km mostly to get the enjoyment from the mental and physical benefits now combined with a gym workout.

Didn't set out to get a streak, just found daily, shorter runs so much fun and just became a habit.

Best regards from downunder Perth to all you awesome runners out there.

I have just reached my 10-year mark! I now run only 1-2 miles per day. I used to always be training for a half marathon even during the cold winter months.

About 4 years ago I tapered down to low mileage but have added in other activity such as walking and strength training. Health and fitness are extremely important to me and I also do intermittent fasting on a regular basis.

There are so many things to measure with various watches and smart phones; I track my heart rate, my sleep, my blood sugar and my ketone level on most days. But every day starts the same with a short outdoor run except when I'm travelling for work and then it's usually in a hotel room, but that's not often.

I still appreciate being able to run every day and it is a habit I hope to keep forever!! Here's to another 10 years.

WILLIAM HOWES' STREAK HITS 12 YEARS

My 12-year streak is still going!! It was in jeopardy last winter though it continues due to pure insanity or perseverance. I will let you and everyone else decide.

On Jan 24th I was running with my Tuesday running club on Detroit's River Walk. It was dark and about 1 ½ miles in I hit a rut on the sidewalk and took a very hard fall on the cement. I got up, dusted myself off & ran another 3 miles.

When I got back to the tavern where we were meeting after a while, I couldn't raise my left arm (and I'm lefthanded!) Then my right hand began to hurt.

I went home and my wife Beth drove me to urgent care who couldn't get a clear x-ray of my arm so they sent me to ER about a half mile away. After finally (and painfully) they got one which revealed that my left elbow was broken at the radial cap. I broke it in the same spot back in Dec 2012 also falling while running! My right hand showed no fracture, just bruising.

They weren't sure if I would need surgery or not. At that point I was thinking goodbye streak so I asked Beth & my daughter Lauren (who happened to be working in the hospital that day) should I ask my nurse if I could do a 1-mile streak saver around the ER. To my amazement, Beth, Lauren and my nurse said go for it. The nurse was awesome and actually laid out a 4-corner route for me. So, I trudged around holding my arm in a sling in my street shoes and got about ½ mile when security stopped me. I guess they frown upon idiots plodding through their ER's.

We left the hospital still not sure if I was going to need surgery or not. Just so happened that I had an orthopedic appointment scheduled that Friday for my little finger (another story). I still needed to get the streak mile in so that night after Beth tied my shoes and stood by me, I got the mile in on my treadmill.

I ran 1-milers for 3 days on the treadmill and that Friday I lucked out as the orthopedic doctor said I wouldn't need surgery but just 6 weeks of physical therapy which I did successfully.

Very thankful to still have the streak.

I hope the best for all our fellow streak runners!!

4 years completed! I have done 1460 days and I averaged 4.16 miles a day.

In that time, I have gone from a 300lb man to having run 2 loaded marathons and multiple half marathons, carrying 40lbs on my back and wearing army issued boots and completing a 4x4x48 extreme challenge, this time carrying 48lbs on my back.

I have also completed multiple military style TABing (Yomping or Rucking) challenges over the years. My running without weight has brought my 5k parkrun time down from 48 minutes to just over 21 minutes.

My plan for next year is to break 20 minutes and try and run a marathon without carrying stupid weights on my back!

MELISSA JACOBSON'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

Hi! I love all the places my streak takes me. Every year I reflect on the different places I might not have run if it was not for streaking. With 7-year years completed now I added another big milestone. I completed the Minnesota Voyageur 50-mile race in July. Learned I can still run a mile and hike a bunch the next day.

I have also been working really hard on another running project. I will finish running every street in Wright Co, MN next week. What started out of boredom during the pandemic turned into being really fun. About 3600 streets and 2300 miles of roads.

My streak also just hit 12,000 miles last week [message dated 12 September 2023] too.

AMY MCMANAMEN'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

Wow! Seven years and my running streak continues! I live in Laramie, Wyoming so our short fall weather will be ending soon giving way to the long, cold winter! In spite of the weather, running is always the best way to start my day.

Depending on my work schedule, this daily run sometimes starts at 4:30 a.m. The Wyoming skies are amazing and beautiful at this time of the day. It is also so quiet.

My favorite runs are when my daughter joins me! I love that we can share this time and even grab a quick coffee at the end of the run. Running has become such an important part of my life journey and brings such a feeling of strength and joy and connection!

HELEN DEGENNARO'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

What a gift it is to run every day! Today [21 October 2023] marks two years of my 2nd streak.

My first streak (4+ years) ended abruptly when I was hit by a car (while running, of course). I was so fortunate to come out of it pretty unscathed, but did need to take about 6 weeks off to recover.

In the past two years, I have run 14 marathons, and pr'd my last 3! I have also shared many miles with many friends both two and four legged. I feel so blessed in so many ways.

Cheers, run streak fam! Happy running and may you meet your goals and live your dreams, whatever they may be.

JULIE BARNES MAURER'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

On Saturday October 28, 2023, I celebrate my 3-year runiversary. When people ask about my streak I frequently quip "it was a 30-day challenge that has gone horribly wrong!"

It's been a delightful journey. It has served me and continues to serve my physical health and mental health. Not every day is rosy, and on the occasion that life is too busy or overwhelming and I just don't feel like it. The imagined sadness and emptiness of ending the streak is WAY heavier than getting out and putting down a mile or two. I always feel relief on those days and a little boost of pride in myself.

I didn't realize the number of streakers out there until I stumbled into this little universe. I have met and connected with some of my favorite people through this adventure. I have no idea if/when this will stop. So, for now I will continue to enjoy the journey one mile at a time!!!

24 September 2023 was my first day of my running streak. I go a minimum of 3 km every day. There was a rough start a few weeks in, where I tripped during night running, and got a bruised ribcage + corona (not a comfortable combination when coughing), but I have managed to keep the streak going, and am well motivated.

I have always been active, with football, squash and hiking, and started running seriously during the corona pandemic, which amounted to two ultra runs. I also have been road cycling a lot this summer, and hope to continue this as well.

All the latest science points - beyond every shred of doubt - that running is probably the best chess move for your long-term health and longevity, and that is the main reason that I want to run every day.

I live in the southern part of Norway, work with IT development, and will try to run outside all year, as I enjoy all seasons outdoors.

JESAL PATEL'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Today [29 October 2024] I completed the 4th year of my current running streak. My daily minimum for all this time has been 3 miles and it's all done outside regardless of weather. During this streak I've totaled over 2,200 for a year and also had a streak of 10k per day which lasted over a year.

I've run through pain and illness and just once had to stop mid-run because I could no longer stand upright (back issues). 4 times this year I got my miles done on an airport treadmill during trans-global travel when, due to time change, it was my only option to keep the streak alive. Also, against my doctor's advice, I got in a run after having had been anesthetized for a procedure earlier in the day.

I'm the Mayor of my hometown of Lincolnwood, just North of Chicago, and use my running to keep a close eye on pedestrian ways throughout my community and the greater Chicago area. Running is a way of life for me, the streak has become a healthy obsession...it continues...

TOPHER CISAR'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Nothing much has changed as of late. I try to average 3 miles per day. Sometimes it's more, sometimes it's less. Overall, 20-25 miles per week seems to be the distance that my schedule and my body tolerates the best. I listen to a lot of music when I run and I think the music, just being alone with my thoughts or chatting it up with my kid Hudson (also a streak runner) are some of what I look forward to the most. I offer for my other kids to come with too and really like it when they say 'yes'...but that doesn't happen too often.

Ha! They're all pretty busy with their own things.

So far, I haven't experienced too many challenges other than just finding the time to run. Life sure does get busy sometimes. Most of the time, my run is in the late afternoon or evening. The days are getting shorter now, so it'll be soon Cold, Hi-Viz and Headlamp runs for sure. For whatever weird reason, Hudson and I enjoy running in inclement weather. Being in the Midwest, those days are right around the corner. Bring it!! See you on the trails!

JONATHAN COX'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

What a great surprise to find an email from SRI congratulating me on my two-year run-streak! Humbling to join the ranks of a community that includes people who have decades of run-streaks under their belt!

I enjoy reading people's run-streak stories - whether running through serious illness, adverse weather conditions, or just beating the temptation to skip a day because you don't feel like it.

For me, this is about taking the daily decision-making out of exercise. I have always enjoyed running when I am doing it, but not enough to motivate me to enthusiastically make the choice to run at any particular moment. The concept of a Streak works perfectly for me - removing any real need for willpower. There's no need to wrestle with the question 'shall I go for a run today?' The decision has been made (over 2 years ago!) - it's simply a case of when (a decision made easier by linking the run to the morning school-run).

The joy comes when I am on the run itself - the sunrises and sunsets I wouldn't have seen; the wildlife I'd have missed in the countryside; and the parts of towns and cities that I would have never seen were it not for the necessity to get those 2 miles in each day.

With thanks to Fr Edward Owen who first made me aware of streak-running, and who joined me for my first anniversary run last year.

Looking forward to passing the 1,000-day milestone in the year ahead!

I just hit my 3 years Streak Anniversary! Honestly, that feels so weird typing out. I think it's because 3 years has gone by so fast. Getting a mile in every single day has just become routine.

Hi everyone! Today [3 November 2023] starts year number five of running every day. I don't need to tell anyone in this group, how challenging it is between the weather, work, family, traveling, and all other obligations. It's very tough to keep this going. I typically get up between 3:15 and 4 AM and start my day with a mile before doing CrossFit five days a week.

SARAH WHITE'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Yay, 3 years - this year of my streak I really stopped thinking about it much. It's so much just a part of the day!

I also ran much more this year than in previous years (streaking and pre-streak) - averaged just over 10 miles a day. I only realized I was going to hit that milestone a few days before my streak-aversary. So that was fun - and a little scary. :)

I ran my 2nd and 3rd marathons in the past streak year and developed some of the best running friendships. I am looking forward to the next year. :)

Steven Casale

STEVEN CASALE'S STREAK HITS A DOZEN YEARS

Hello everyone! My name is Steven Casale from Taylor, PA, and on November 12th, 2011, I began running at least one mile a day as an incentive to lose weight.

My first running goal was 100 consecutive days. Then I realized that was easy, so I increased it to 500 days. After reaching that goal, I figured why stop now? So, I set my new goal to 1000 days. On my way to reaching that goal, I learned about the United States Streak Runners Association, and the rest is history.

I have run through sprains, pains, COVID, stomach flu, and diverticulitis, and run through all types of weather (I would put a mailman to shame).

I have, as of today [12 November 2023], my 12 year anniversary, run 4,384 days in a row for a grand total of 10,543.274 miles. I have averaged 2.4 miles a day since I was 53 at the start of this journey.

I am now 67 years old and look forward to running much more. I wish I had this idea when I was younger as it would have given me the motivation to start my running adventure sooner!

Congratulations to all those running from THE HILLS (50+ years) to the NEOPHYTES (1 to <5 years), and may your streaks continue!

JOHNNY LOGAN'S STREAK HITS A DECADE

I celebrated my 10-year runiversary with friends who kindly gave up their time to join me. I started my streak one month after my 50th birthday. I ran most of that month but missed a few days. Had I started on my birthday I would've run every day of my 50s. Never mind, all streaks start somewhere and I only set out to do one year!

The highlight of year 10 was running 40 miles on the last day of my 50s and 27 on the first day of my 60s to complete a local trail that links Abbeys in southern Scotland called the Borders Abbey Way.

Year 11 is going well!

MARK EWELL'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

This is the third anniversary of starting my running streak, and it has been a great year for running. I run every day, but my "real sport" is competitive stair climbing - racing up the stairs in tall buildings. I started the year with the news that I was the #1 Towerrunning USA athlete for 2022, and I made good on that with a win at the Towerrunning USA National Championship in February.

During the year I raced up the Strat Tower in Vegas, US Bank Tower in LA, Space Needle, Empire State Building, One World Trade Center, and the Sears Tower (aka Willis) - among others. I finished the year #1 again... oh, and I turned 50 in March! Still running and looking forward to another year.

ZAC WATNE'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Like many people who start run streaks, I did so with one simple goal in mind: to get more active.

Figured it would help me feel better physically - little did I know how important it would be for my emotional well-being and overall life satisfaction. There have been some rough days physically - after getting injured doing ultramarathons (have completed a 100-miler, 50-miler, and a couple of 50Ks during the streak), after long ski days (have learned to run before I ski), and through some illnesses.

More difficult still has been running through a separation turned divorce and through days where mentally and emotionally I didn't have any energy. I always "know" I will feel better, and 99.5% of the time that ends up being true with illnesses being the lone exception :).

Kudos to everyone streaking out there, best of luck in keeping those streaks going! Though more so I hope your streak journeys have been, and continue to be, as beneficial to you as mine has been for me.

Much love,

CHRISTOPH DIETZ JOINS SRI FROM GERMANY

I was born in 1970, but started to run not earlier than August 2015. Therefore, I'm now running since more than 8 years now. For the first years it was hard to run, but I did it two to three times a week. Of course, sometimes I couldn't run. And after some years I realized that I now look with longing when I drive somewhere and see other runners.

About one year ago I read a book about running a marathon once a week for one year. A famous German comedian (Wigald Boning) wrote about his challenge to run 52 marathons within one year. Well, sometimes he cheated a little bit. But he had a streak active while his first about 300 days of the challenge. At some point he decided to end the streak and to focus on his marathon challenge. While reading this book one thought came into my mind: May I be able to streak run? And I tested it.

My first try lasted for only 25 days. I had some pain in my right shin. And this had to disappear to be able to be prepared for a small ambulant operation later on. After only 11 days of pause I could start into my second streak. This was November 19th, 2022. While the first days of this streak I had the operation. But I could run just before it and my doctor allowed me to run the mile about 30 hours after the surgical intervention. Streak on! Yeah!

Years end came and I thought about my running goal for 2023. Because the streak wasn't that old I thought that 1,000 km may be a reasonable goal. Well, to make it short: I reached this goal by mid of July. :-) My training tool tells me, that about 1,800 km could be achieved - this is more than I ever run in one year!

I'm running prior to work for about 3,5 km. On weekends I'm on longer tracks, normally about 6 km on Saturday and up to 20 km on Sundays. I would like to do longer runs on weekdays, too. But I have a family, which, of course, is supporting me. But they also need me for the morning routine.

Today (November 18th, 2023) I ran for the 365 days without a gap and reached 1.800 km in total in about 193 hours (that's more than 8 days!) of running. My test of streak running isn't over yet. And I hope it will go on a long time!

MARY JACQUES' STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I recently reached my three-year mark of my run streak. I have run my mile with laps in my house (it is just under 100 laps), laps at the airport, snow, wind, rain, freezing cold and blistering hot. It is funny how we find time and ways to complete the mile.

Since becoming a streaker I have completed several half marathons and 4 marathons, two of which are major marathons. I ran Chicago on my two-year anniversary and my family said that was the perfect way to stop. My response was...now the challenge is if I can run one mile after running a marathon!

I ran Boston in April and the Maine Marathon followed by the Marine Corps marathon two weeks later. I really feel running a mile a day has helped with recovery...although many would argue it isn't good. It works for me! Pretty proud of my streak and will keep it going as long as I can. Happy Running!!

I feel a deep satisfaction having made it to three years! This past summer was difficult with the challenging wildfire season in Alberta which meant the outdoor air quality was consistently unhealthy to run in.

Luckily, I was able to find a nearby treadmill and keep the streak going. This effort has forced me to be very adaptable and strategic in order to keep the streak going. I didn't know the true depth of perseverance until this point.

Oh, I also had to run while I had COVID which I finally contracted in February 2023 - nearly three years into the pandemic.

LON FLAUD'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Thank you so much on the congratulations on my 4th anniversary of my current running streak. A little bit of history on it. My original streak ended on day 1579 because it was raining after work in the morning so I went home and was going to run before work that night. I totally forgot to run.

Funny thing is I have a treadmill in my living room and didn't get on it to at least run the mile. Missed that one day and started this current one right away. Did take me 2 weeks to get over screwing up and missing that day.

My brother, who is a bike rider, is the one to help me get past it. So, sometime in March, barring any miss steps, I'll be setting a new record....here's hoping.

I've been running since spring of 1990 as a junior in HS on the track team. Ran distance on the track team in junior and senior years and cross country in my senior year. I started tracking my runs in 2008.

In my 30s, I started running half-marathons.... now, completing 25 and finished 7 full marathons.

I run right away after work for stress release and relaxation. I love running and when ilhead home I'm completely at peace. Love this hobby.

So glad I discovered the art of streak running. I look forward to my daily run every day.

Thanks again for the congratulations and I look forward to next year and my very first 5-year streak!

ULRICH GASSNER'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,095 DAYS

I wanted to alternate my daily exercise so that I go to the gym or swimming pool one day and run the next.

Ulrich Gassner
Isny im Allgau, Germany

AMY COLLINS' STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

2,191 Days, rain, shine, early, late...6 years of Run Streaking!

One highlight of this year was streaking on three continents in three days during a summer trip in 2023! Streaking through Kenya, in the shadow of Mount Kilimanjaro, on the beach of the Indian Ocean, and with elephants and giraffes in the distance was amazing.

I continue to be inspired to streak, and don't see an end in sight!

Streak On, Streakers!

Amy Collins
Washington, D.C.

BONNIE DYE'S STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

Six years now and aiming for seven! This year I officially became a triathlete - completing two sprints triathlons in 2023 and thinking about my goals for 2024.

I also finally found myself in bed with COVID after avoiding it for 3 years - I took it slow and careful but managed to keep the streak alive.

I'm thankful for every day of streaking and my stalker community. Just keep running!

Bonnie Dye
Durham, North Carolina

CARSON TIGGES' STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

5 years and still going!

Carson Tigges
Hudson, Iowa

DAVE MCGILLIVRAY INDUCTED INTO MEDFORD MUSTANG ATHLETIC HALL OF FAME

I was humbled to be inducted into the Medford [Massachusetts] Mustang Athletic Hall of Fame yesterday [19 November 2023]. Best part was my son, Luke, introducing me! It took over 50-years and over 150,000 miles but it was worth the wait!! Ha.

Dave McGillivray
North Andover, Massachusetts

RICHARD THOMSON'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,788 DAYS

I had Robotic Inguinal hernia surgery with mesh yesterday [21 November 2023] on both sides of my groins I had several tears in groin. Been running poorly for over 2 years.

Richard Thomson
Bangor, United Kingdom

ELISABETH WESTENGEN JOINS SRI FROM NORWAY

Passing day 386 [message dated 22 November 2023] of my runstreak on my way back to running again.

Elisabeth Westengen
Jesheim, Norway

DAVE BEVERLIN'S STREAK HITS 20 YEARS

On November 21, 2003, I completed my 20th year of running at least 3 miles outside every day.

For the last 7 years, I've been running with an "unloader" brace on my right knee due to osteoarthritis, but other than that my running health is good. Best of luck to my fellow streakers.

Dave Beverlin
Appleton, Wisconsin

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And---which is more---you'll be a Man, my son!

- Rudyard Kipling (1865-1936) from his poem If.

THE FINISH LINE

By: Mark Washburne

As this quarter comes to an end, we look forward to celebrating another big running streak anniversary at the end of 2023. Started on 29 December 1973, Richard Westbrook, a retired teacher and coach from Jonesboro, Georgia, will, hopefully, become the sixth person in the world to reach the half century mark with his running streak. The other six to reach 50 years are the late Ron Hill (retired: 21 December 1964-28 January 2017), Jon Sutherland (active: 26 May 1969), Jim Pearson (active: 16 February 1970), Steve DeBoer (active: 7 June 1971), and Alex Galbraith (active: 22 December 1971). Unfortunately, details about a 50th running streak celebration for Coach Westbrook were still being finalized as I write THE FINISH LINE so please check the SRI Facebook page for updates.

In this Winter issue, streak running (of course), history, and flying were featured in our cover story on Willow Seward. Besides having a five-year running streak, Willow is also an airline pilot from Meza, Arizona who has combined her job flying and love of running as her “personal tour guide” to see “the sunrise over mountains and the sunset in new cities” from around the world.

Willow Seward is also a relative of former American Secretary of State William Seward, who purchased Alaska for the United States from Russia in 1867. As I am distantly related and wrote a multi-volume biography of Elihu Washburne, the diplomat who followed Secretary Seward to the top position at the American State Department in 1869, I took a special interest in the family history of our Arizona streak runner. After receiving Willow’s five-year anniversary story and picture, I shared with her my research on how her 19th century relative was a friend and political ally of my 19th century relative. As it is not often that we know of family connections dating back a couple of centuries from our new friends in the streak running community, I shared that story with you as a separate article in this Winter edition of our newsletter.

Besides sharing stories about family history, I was also busy celebrating my own streak running milestone this quarter. On 18 October 2023, my running streak reached half my life on Running Streak Day (RSD) 12,345. Let me give it to you "straight" about this unusual coincidence. If you count the day I was born as Day 1 until the last day I did not run before the start of my running streak (30 December 1989), there were 12,345 days. Also, if you count the first day I ran during my running streak as Day 1 (31 December 1989) until 18 October 2023, there were also 12,345 days. My streak of running every day, without missing a day, at least 3 miles a day, has reached half of my life.

For my math friends, having the numbers line up in straight order - one two three four five (12,345) - is an unusual occurrence when you reach 5 digits. On 17 May 2017, I reached 5 digits on RSD 10,000 and October 18th was first time the numbers lined up in straight order since that date. The numbers will not line up in straight order again for another 11,111 days (over 30+ years) on RSD 23,456 that calculates to be on 20 March 2054. As I will have just turned 98-years old on my next straight day, I do not expect my running streak to still be active. I do hope, however, that I can give it a good run for the money and that I will see you while out running tomorrow and for many tomorrows to come.

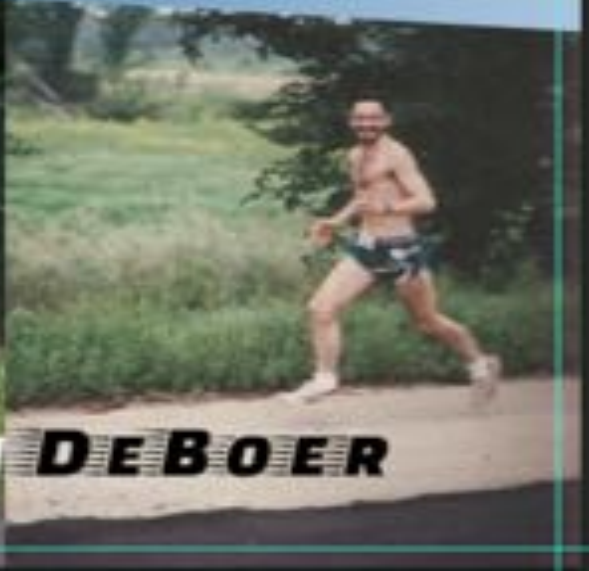

As always, I want to wish all of you good luck as we each run the roads and trails – every day!
