Scott Ludwig 40th anniversary celebrated at University of Florida in Gainesville, Florida.

SCOTT LUDWIG'S STREAK HITS 40 YEARS
"Scene of the Crime"
By: Scott Ludwig

I wanted to do something special to mark the occasion.

The 2003 Boston Marathon was my 100th. I ran it from the finish line to the starting line that morning before the start of the marathon, getting in a quick 26.2-miles to limber up (and no, I didn't count that as marathon #99).

The finish line of the 2005 Atlanta Marathon marked the spot of my 100,000th lifetime mile. Several friends and I enjoyed post-race champagne near the finish line afterwards.

The 50-yard line of Florida Field at the University of Florida (UF) marked the spot for my 125,000th lifetime mile in 2011. I was greeted by a host of cheerleaders, dance team members and UF mascots Albert and Alberta (whom are both alligators).

While Cindy and I were vacationing on the island of Oahu in 2012 I ran the Honolulu Marathon to mark the occasion of my 200th marathon.

I ran with my good friends Valerie, Al and Antonio in August of 2018 as I completed my 150,000th lifetime mile.

With the 40-year anniversary of my consecutive years running streak coming up in November of the same year I wanted to make it memorable. I decided to return to the scene of the crime; where it all began. Gainesville, Florida. That meant rounding up the usual suspects to accompany me: Antonio, who will probably be my last protégé; my younger son Josh, who crewed for me at Badwater and whom I accompanied with on his first marathon that just so happened to be in Gainesville (as was mine almost 40 years ago); and Keith, whom I've known for several years and shares the same feelings and commitment when it comes to the sport of running.

So at 7 a.m. on the morning of Friday, November 30, 2018 the four of us began with the 4/10-mile loop I used to run around the married housing complex Cindy and I lived in while we were graduate students at UF in 1978. After that we followed the route around the perimeter of campus that was my 'Sunday long run' four decades ago.

We took in all the sights—Century Tower, the UF landmark that loses a brick for every virgin that graduates (it's still 100% intact); Murphree Hall, the dorm I lived in as a freshman (from which my roommate and I ran a streak of a different kind in the fall of 1973); and the university's track where I ran my first sub-six minute mile (I ran a quarter-mile to commemorate the occasion; I barely broke six minutes).

We ended our eight-mile run by entering Ben Hill Griffin Stadium through the south end zone and were greeted by a team of cheerleaders, Albert and Alberta (of course) and my name in lights on the ginormous scoreboards on both ends of the field.

After posing for pictures and talking to the cheerleaders about university life 'back then,' the four of us ran another two miles to where our car was parked, rounding out the day with an even 10 miles. (I want to mention that the cheerleaders told me that anyone living in Murphree Hall before it was air conditioned—as I had done as a freshman—was considered 'cool,' proving once and for all that I was ahead of my time.)

So today, with 40 years and 150,000 miles under my belt what comes next? Fifty years? Two hundred thousand miles? Perhaps, but if not I'm perfectly satisfied with how things stand right now.

After all, it's been a good run. A good, long run.

People have asked me what I'm most proud of about my streak. It's pretty simple, actually. What I'm most proud of is not that I've run every day for the past 40 years; but that I never needed a reason not to.

USRSA FOUNDER JOHN STRUMSKY
REMEMBERS ALASKA TRIP
By: John Strumsky

Dawn and I travelled to Alaska in late July, 1999 so that I could run in the state. The trip was part of a three-state tour to run in Idaho, Oregon and Alaska, which marked the 42nd, 43rd and 44th states which I ran in on my daily running streak that started back in 1983. I ran 24 miles while in Alaska on my quest to run in all 50 states.

Here are three photos. The first is of me standing at the sled dog statue where the Iditarod Race starts each year. Next is one of me with Doophis and Jim Crum, the chainsaw artist who carved the bear. For some time during the 16 years I had been running every day at that point, Dawn had been suggesting I should find something that would remind me at a glance of all that running. I'm pretty sure she meant a little plaque for my den wall or a little statue or something along those lines, not a thirty-pound log cut into the shape of a running bear. And, I don't usually anticipate events. I didn't expect to really look for anything until my run through all the states had been completed. However, when we walked by Jim's chainsaw wood-carving shop in Anchorage, I knew Doophis was it. Jim called him a happy dancing bear of little brain and no name, and I told the artist that he did have a name. It was Doophis, a happy running bear of little brain who liked to run every day. Jim loved the story the bear was now going to represent, and had his studio manager note it down to attach to a copy of this photo, which he intended to hang in his shop. As for Doophis, here's the third picture. I've seen him every day now for 19 years. The happy little guy lives in my den, and just makes me happy seeing him.

My daily running streak lasted twenty-five years and eight months, and in those 9,395 consecutive days I ran over 46,000 miles through all 50 states and 15 foreign countries. I also ran 644 races during that time.

Celebrate your running and your life.

John Strumsky, Doophis and Jim Crum in 1999.

DR. HERBERT FRED DIES AT THE AGE OF 89

[Editor's note: We here at Streak Runners International and the United States Running Streak Association mourn the passing of Dr. Herbert Fred, a fellow streak runner and amazing long-distance runner: "From 1980 to 1983, he set a number of national age and age-group records for ultradistances, including a 100-mile run in 17 hours, 2 minutes, 3 seconds at the age of 53. On April 20, 2016, Herb completed an entire year of running one mile or more every day — a world record for 86-year-olds. He ended his running career in 2016, having totaled 253,010 miles — more documented lifetime miles than anyone else in the world." The following are some of the articles submitted by him to TSR.]

[TSR COVER & ARTICLE SPRING 2014] DR. HERB FRED NEARS QUARTER MILLION LIFETIME MILES

“Flying” across the finish line of the 1983 Gulf AAU 100-mile run in Kingwood, Texas, in 18:11:50, Dr. Herb Fred set a national age (52) and age group (50-54) record. The following year the finishing time was 17:02:03, another age (53) and age group (50-54) record.

Dr. Herb Fred

On Approaching A Quarter Million Miles By: Dr. Herb Fred

In 1966, at age 37, I took up running as part of my restructured lifestyle. Now, at age 84, I'm still running, having covered over 249,300 miles in the interim—over 10 laps around the earth. Selected aspects of that journey form the basis of this report.

When my running career started, I was a full-time medical educator on the faculty of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. Across the street from my office was the 440-yard track of Rice University. Because of my busy work schedule, I chose to sacrifice my lunch hour so that I could run 3 miles a day on that track. Starting my run at noon became a habit that I maintained for the next 21 years.

As my daily mileage grew, I needed more than the lunch hour to complete my workouts. Arranging my teaching activities around my running took care of the problem most of the time, but when it didn't, I simply ran for an hour at noon, and ran again after work. For the first year or so, I trained solely on the Rice track. On the weekends, I sometimes entered a two-mile cross-country race.

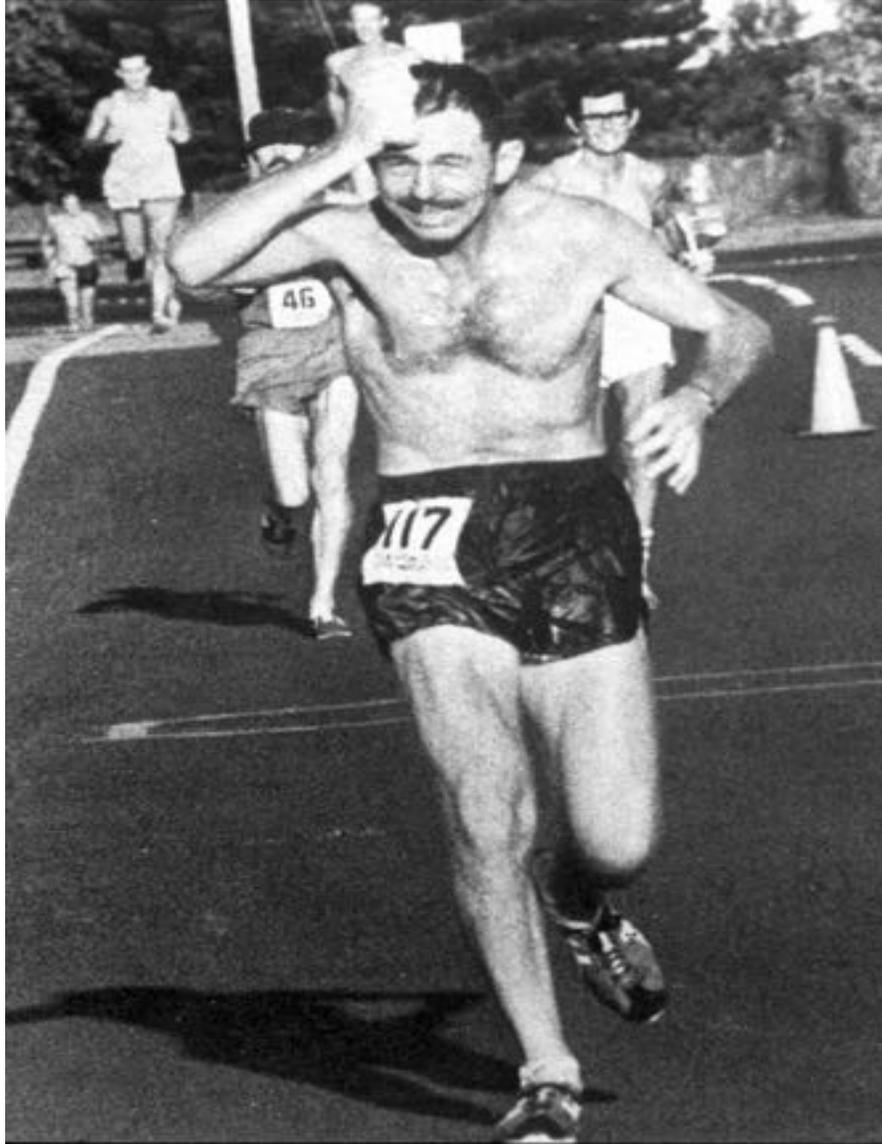

Herb Fred takes 2nd place in a two-mile cross-country run in 1968.

When my daily distance had increased to 8 miles a day, I quit the track altogether and turned to the streets of Houston where I ran everyday (or night) in rain or shine, and in scorching heat or bitter cold. I typically ran alone, always on the left-hand side of the street facing traffic.

Over a three-year period, I gradually increased my runs from 8 miles a day to 16 miles a day, reaching at times 22 miles a day. When preparing for a marathon or ultra-marathon, I would sometimes run 30 miles on Saturday and 40 miles on Sunday.

In the late 60s and early 70s, there were only a handful of runners who trained on the streets of Houston. And since I ran farther, more often, and for longer periods than any of them, I soon became known as the "village idiot." By the 80s, however, when running had become popular all over America, my image changed from that of idiot to eccentric.

My routine of running daily on Houston's streets served me well when I traveled elsewhere. No matter where I was—Oslo, Stockholm, Edinburgh, London, Paris, Shanghai, Beijing, Ottawa, Montreal, Geneva, Rome, Munich, Copenhagen, or many American cities—I ran in areas where tourists never go and saw things that tourists never see. This was particularly true in China. I also completed 41 marathons, almost as many ultra-marathons, and established age or age-group records (now all broken) in the 100-km, 100-mile, and 24-hour runs.

Herb Fred In the middle of the pack in the 1974 Honolulu Marathon.

On 4 June, 1987, after I had covered approximately 130,000 miles, my street-training came to an abrupt end. It happened during the afternoon rush hour as I was crossing a busy downtown intersection about to finish a 16-mile run. I had crossed that intersection countless times; my new office was on that corner and I ran from that point and back every day. The green light was in my favor and the "Walk" sign was on. But as I reached the middle of the intersection, a young motorist coming from my left ran a red light and hit me. The next thing I knew, I was lying on the street looking skyward, noting the clouds rolling around and around at a rapid pace.

Witnesses said that the collision bent the car's front bumper and right front fender and that my head shattered the car's windshield. I clearly recall the moment of impact; it was painless. Seconds later, however, my head, neck, left shoulder, right rib cage, and left foot began hurting—and for good reason. Studies showed that I had sustained two skull fractures, a blood clot on my brain, and fractures of my left foot, left shoulder-blade, and right rib cage, along with numerous cuts and bruises.

I spent 11 days in the hospital and 4 months at home recovering. When I finally was able to resume running—and feeling lucky to be alive—I decided to buy a treadmill so that I could run in my office without fear of ever being struck down again by a car. Now, 27 years after making that decision, I have reeled off almost 120,000 miles on the treadmill. I wore out three top-of-the-line home treadmills before realizing that commercial treadmills—the kind you see in health clubs—are the only ones that can withstand the wear and tear of my long daily workouts.

For my purposes—running far and long every day or night—the treadmill offered a number of advantages over street running.

First, and foremost, I could run worry-free—no cars, motorcycles, or bicycles to contend with; no unmerciful weather to prepare for; no dogs or suspicious-looking strangers to be concerned about; and no need to search for toilet facilities or water.

Second, convenience. I have a bathroom, kitchen, telephone, television, and radio nearby at all times. In addition, I don't have to spend time driving to a place to run or gearing up for the weather outside (it is always 72° F with low humidity in my office).

Third, the running surface is always smooth, even, and flat, reducing my chances of tripping, falling, or twisting a knee or ankle. Moreover, I can change the incline or initiate various work-out programs by simply “turning the dial.”

Fourth, darkness is never a problem, and I can run whenever my schedule permits. I formerly worked in the mornings and evenings and ran all afternoon. Now, I still work all day as a full-time medical educator, but I begin running at 6 or 7 pm, sometimes finishing after midnight. Since I eat only one meal a day (after my run) and require only 3 hours of sleep, this schedule suits me fine. (Incidentally, I have a loving, understanding, supportive wife and 7 tolerant adult children).

Fifth, boredom is never a concern. Although some people can read while running on a treadmill, I can't. But I do listen to the radio or watch television and frequently stop to write myself reminders or make and answer important phone calls. I can also run while using my cell phone without endangering myself or anyone else.

Sixth, my running shoes last longer. In fact, they look brand new even after they have traveled a thousand miles or more. That's because they don't get exposed to drenching rain, body sweat, street dirt, or the rock-hard, irregular, abrasive surface of asphalt and cement.

Seventh, injuries are rare, presumably because the indoor conditions do not promote slipping or sliding, the running surface is always smooth and flat, and there are no distractions that can force a sudden change in one's running technique. By contrast, injuries from running outdoors are common, and I've had just about all of them, from blisters to tendinitis to muscle tears to bloody urine, as well as numerous basal cell and squamous cell carcinomas of the skin. Fortunately, I haven't had a malignant melanoma, the most serious of sun-related skin cancers. I've also suffered from penile frostbite that resulted from a long run against a strong wind in sub-freezing temperatures.

Certain drawbacks of treadmill running merit attention. The first is price. A good, highly reliable treadmill built to withstand prolonged daily usage will cost at least several thousand dollars. I paid $13,000 for the one I currently use; some of the newer models sell for up to $20,000.

If you prefer to run with someone and still want to do so on the treadmill, your best bet is to join a health club. There, you can usually find several treadmills and lots of runners, but only during posted hours.

Finally, treadmill running robs you of enjoying Mother Nature. But Mother Nature is not always kind. She sometimes fashions icy terrains, blizzards, freezing temperatures, miserable heat and humidity, and drenching rain with lightning—natural phenomena I don't feel sorry to miss. Such dangers are never encountered on a treadmill.

In conclusion, how far, how long, how fast, and how often one runs is a personal matter. And whether one runs along city streets, or county roads, in the park or around a track, or over trails or on a treadmill is a personal matter, too. Running is what counts.

For your records, I supply the following information as of December 31, 2013:

- 1) My total mileage for 2013 = 2,192
- 2) My total lifetime mileage = 249,333
- 3) My current running streak began on 5/11/10 and is still intact.
- 4) I am currently 84 ½ years young.

God willing, I will reach 250,000 miles about Easter of this year [e-mail sent January 4, 2014].

I Have The Heart To Do It By: Herb Fred, MD

Just 95 days shy of my 86th birthday, the shortest of my many running streaks ended after 322 days. It ended for medical reasons. Over the past 5 years, I have had progressive stenosis (blockage) of my aortic valve, the valve through which blood leaves the heart for distribution throughout the body. The blockage had reached the point where operative intervention was indicated, even though I had no troublesome symptoms and was able to cover 4 to 6 miles daily during the past year.

As part of the preoperative workup, I had a coronary angiogram, a procedure that uses “dye” to visualize the arteries in the heart. To the surprise of my doctors and me, I had a 90% obstruction in one of the major arteries. Fortunately, the obstruction was relieved by inserting a stent. That event took place on March 9, 2015, the day my latest running streak ended.

On April 8, 2015, I underwent transcatheter aortic valve replacement, referred to in medical circles as TAVR. The procedure is performed under x-ray vision and completed without ever opening the chest. It begins with a catheter being placed in the femoral artery, a large artery in the groin. Through the catheter, a balloon device breaks apart the obstructed valve, making room therein for the new valve. The balloon device is then removed, and the new valve implanted. In my case, the actual operation time was an unbelievable 20 minutes. I went home the next day.

Twelve days after the TAVR, I started a new running streak. As of May 10, 2015, the streak is 21 days old, and my total lifetime mileage is 251,681. I plan to run daily for as long as the good Lord permits, and I have the heart to do it.

[TSR MEMBER UPDATE FROM SUMMER 2016] HERB FRED, 86, ENDS STREAK AFTER 367 DAYS; OLDEST ATHLETE TO RUN EVERY DAY

My latest running streak began on April 20, 2015. On Wednesday [20 April 2016] of this week, I will have run at least 1 mile a day, every day, since that streak began. As a result, I may be the first person anywhere in the world to accomplish this particular feat at the age of 86 years. (I'll be 87 on June 11, 2016).

Two other bits of news:

- 1) This coming Wednesday my total lifetime mileage will be 252,683.
- 2) My streak will end the next day (Thursday) when I undergo an operation for severe spinal stenosis. That procedure will sideline me for probably a month. Nevertheless, I hope to begin another streak when I recover.

DAVE DIAL JOINS USRSA OVER 193,000 LIFETIME MILES

By: Dave Dial

When the late mountaineer George Mallory was once asked why he wanted to climb Mount Everest, he responded, "Because it's there." In that regard, at 58 years of age, I've been asked why I run so many miles and I simply answer, "That it's just in my DNA!"

When I was young my family lived just outside Groveton, TX, a small rural town in the eastern part of the state. At age 6, following a trip into town, I recall asking to get out of the car so I could run home during the return trip. The roads were all dirt back then and not often traveled so it was safe enough that my parents let me do it! I simply loved the feeling of running; of covering distances under my own power.

My teenage years fell during the 70s and that's when the "Running Boom" hit. Suddenly my passion for the sport became vogue and that only added fuel to the fire. In fact, it was the cover of a Runner's World Magazine of running's "everyman," Bill Rodgers, on course to winning the New York City Marathon in 1976, that proved to be the tipping point for me. Boston Billy, as he's still known, became my running role model so, like him, I began logging my mileage, upped my mileage to 100+/week, and dreamed of some day running the Boston Marathon!

Bill Rodgers and Dave Dial (1978)

When I graduated from high school in 1978 my parents rewarded me with a plane ticket to Boston so I could visit Bill Rodgers Running Center, Bill's newly opened running store. My timing couldn't have been better that early June day because I'd been in Bill's store all of ten minutes when in he walked!

Bill allowed me to train with him during the week I visited - I logged 153 miles - and since then I'm proud to say I've trained with Bill many times over the years and worked at Bill Rodgers Running Center during numerous stints until it closed in 2012. More importantly, Bill and his older brother Charlie, who served as the store's manager, are now like family to me.

Now that I find myself in my fortieth plus year as a runner, I realize I never really entertained the idea of maintaining a streak during my early years. I was always red lining it in terms of my training - to race - and paid a heavy price injury-wise. Needless to say, as much as I hated missing a day(s) now and then, I felt that simply came with the territory!

During the early 2000s I got into coaching and stopped racing altogether. As a result, I began going extended periods without missing a day due to injury. As memory serves, that was the first time I began thinking about a lengthy running streak. With that in mind, having reached the 100k lifetime running miles milestone in 1998, the thought of perhaps reaching 200k first presented itself.

In recent years, I was asked to return to east Texas to help my dad with the three cattle properties he maintains in and around Groveton so, ironically, I currently find myself daily running the same roads I first ran as a 6-year-old! Of course, the ag business is tough on a body and since I've been here I've broken three ribs, my left wrist and my right forearm, been knocked unconscious once and suffered a concussion per that incident!

Despite being in the sticks, I keep my finger on the pulse of the running community by staying in touch with Bill and Charlie Rodgers. I've also been assisting my good friend Bobbi Gibb, the first woman to run the Boston Marathon (1966), with her Boston Marathon sculpture project. Additionally, I serve as a "brand ambassador" for Injinji and also "wear test," primarily running shoes, for Skechers.

As of the new year I haven't missed a day in over 11 years and have now logged over 193,000 lifetime miles. That said, I've been averaging 15 miles/day so barring the unforeseen, reaching 200k in 2020 at the age of 59 seems like it could become a reality!

Dave Dial (right) "with legendary streaker Ron Hill and former Soviet Marathon Champion Yuri Laptev in Bill Rodgers Running Center in 2011."

Dave Dial's Career Lowlights and Highlights

Running 7.5-plus laps of the earth comes with some weird confrontations including two bear encounters, two dog bites, two hit-and-runs by a car and one rattlesnake bite.

The most time I ever missed was 8 months, due to a torn right ACL.

The coldest temp I ever ran in was -35F (wind chill) in Boston, MA and the hottest, 117F in Borrego Springs, CA.

The highest altitude I ever ran at was 14,000+ ft atop Mt. Whitney in CA and the lowest, below sea level in El Centro, CA.

My 2:24:18 in the 1980 Boston Marathon as a 19-year-old is one of the fastest times in US history for juniors.

10k PR 29:48 (1989).

I found coaching to be as rewarding as anything I've ever done as a runner and have done so at the following San Diego area schools: Carmel Del Mar Elementary, Rancho Santa Fe Middle School, Torrey Pines High School and La Jolla Country Day School.

Chairing the annual jog-a-thon at my son's former elementary school, Carmel Del Mar, for 13 years is a memory I'll always cherish; sharing my love of running while raising funds for the school.

Being part Lumbee Indian, I've done long runs benefiting Native American causes including Wings of America and the Native American Preparatory School (now defunct).

"If you want to win a race you have to go a little berserk."

- Bill Rodgers

"We run not because we think it is doing us good, but because we enjoy it and cannot help ourselves . . . The more restricted our society and work become, the more necessary it will be to find some outlet for this craving for freedom. No one can say, 'You must not run faster than this, or jump higher than that.' The human spirit is indomitable."

SPRING 2019
--George A. Hancock
runnergah@comcast.net

March 1 begins Meteorological Spring. This season runs from this date through May 31, 2019. This time span is used for official weather record keeping purposes. So, if an area of our vast nation receives a deep snowfall on March 12 this event is officially recorded as a spring snow storm.

Traditionalists as most folks are celebrate spring's arrival on the Vernal Equinox. This year the Vernal Equinox falls on March 20, 2019. Once we reach that date many individuals are comfortable saying spring is here.

Of course, for the running crowd spring is the perfect season. Spring brings warmer temps, snow free roads and rich green to our roadside. Those wintry blasts with icy snow storms ease away. Mother Nature steadily creates a more suitable running climate.

Road racers also enjoy the spring season. The warmer weather allows these racing folks to race at faster speeds. Road racers also meet old friends at various racing venues. Spring races serve as a test for running fitness.

Winter, the last several years across the United States, was a roller coaster weather event. Western Pennsylvania experienced these rolling weather situations. A colder than normal fall season gives way to a sunny and warm Christmas season. Meanwhile, heavy snow falls south of Pennsylvania. Those persistent lake effect snow bands are absent. Running along the road in December is very pleasant.

Then one day winter arrives with a freezing vengeance. Schools are delayed. Local roads disappear beneath mounds of snowy ice. The temperature plunges. The phrase Arctic Vortex is used by many weather forecasters. Winter once again graces our local byways creating myriad running scenarios. What snowy fun!

Perhaps this is why most runners appreciate March and the growing spring season. Those delightful warmer temps, more delicious daylight and snow free roads combine to foster great long distance runs.

The color green spreading across our roadside is a nice plus too. Soon those other seasonal colors will add beauty to our daily runs. Spring delights await those willing to explore the spring roads.

Of course, the daily streak runner is aware of the changing seasons. It is extremely difficult to surprise someone running outside every day along our highways and byways. The daily runner is aware of the changing seasons. Very little seasonal change if any escapes the purview of the daily runner. The streak runner experiences the seasonal weather temperament on every run.

The streak runner also experiences history. Some say the streak runner is making history. This is a solid point. A streak runner with a multi-year lengthy streak is steeped in history. Those streak runners running every day at the top of our lists have seen history in the making. The people, places and events witnessed by these front runners is amazing.

And, these streak running front runners have stories. A few have written books about their everyday running experiences. These books are worth perusing. Three books in particular add a depth of running knowledge to our unique road sport.

Now if anyone else in our streaking subculture has a book in the works or recently published please send me an email. Let me know about your running book.

Let's examine three recently published running books. The first written by Laura Lee Huttenbach is titled Running with Raven: The Amazing Story of One man, His passion, and the Community He Inspired.

Huttenbach's 2017 book published by Citadel Books is about Robert "Raven" Kraft. Raven's incredible running streak began on January 1, 1975. Raven at age 68 has an incredible running streak. Raven's entire running streak features the same 8 miles at the same Miami Beach location at the same afternoon hour. Raven's streak is currently listed as the #6 longest running streak in the United States.

Raven has run through some nasty south Florida weather. Several years ago Sandy pummeled Raven with blistering sand on his streak run. Raven is joined on his South Beach evening run by legions of runners. Streak runners, runners from all over trek to Miami to run on the beach with this running icon.

Huttenbach in her informative book captures the persona of this streak runner. Raven despite some physical issues continues on with his running program. Reading Running with Raven is an eye opening experience. Huttenbach's prose places us into Raven's mindset. We can see and actually feel what makes Raven run every day.

Running with Raven aptly explains just what it takes to run for 40 straight years. The reader learns what running every day for 40 plus years does to one's psyche and physical wellbeing. Novice streak runners need to read Running with Raven.

My book My Running Odyssey published by the Daily American in 2018 is an account of my 46 years as a road runner in the Greater Johnstown, PA region. I started road running in 1973 and road racing in 1976. I completed 500 road races from the 5K to the marathon. My career running mileage now stands over 102,000 miles.

I have written about my book in The Streak Registry. I compiled two long running streaks. The first began on February 26, 1978 and lasted until May 2002. I followed this running streak with another long one that ran from June 22, 2002 until the end of December 29, 2017.

I began writing in 1986 for the Runner's Gazette. RG is a monthly running newspaper based in Lewisburg, PA. Currently, RG is transitioning to a full digital format. Escalating newsprint prices and the demand for 24/7 immediate news is pushing this digital trend.

The very first organized running streak list appeared in the December 1993 RG pages. My book explains how I approached this running streak topic. The issues involved in compiling the streak list is detailed. I discuss the thought running streaks are more common than many realize. There were many runners across the country running every day because they could. My running streak research project covered this fascinating trend.

I also discuss how this fantastic running streak organization The United States Running Streak Association (USRSA) began. This is also an incredible running story. John Strumsky had an intriguing idea. John's hard work, diligence and vision developed into our unique running movement.

So, if you are interested in learning more about the history, the beginning of our running streak association my book My Running Odyssey is the place to start. My book also describes what it takes to reach the 100,000 mile level while juggling family, work and life activities. It can be done. It's as simple as running every day.

The third book you need to read is Never Missed: Lessons learned From Forty-Five Years of Running Without Missing A Day by Mark Covert. This book was published by Warren Publishing in 2018.

Mark Covert is an incredible runner. Covert for years after Bob Ray ended his long streak maintained the longest running streak in the United States. Covert's streak is the

#2 longest retired streak on the USRSA list. Covert's 45-year long streak began on July 23, 1968 and ended on February 23, 2013. Mark Covert ended this streak on his terms.

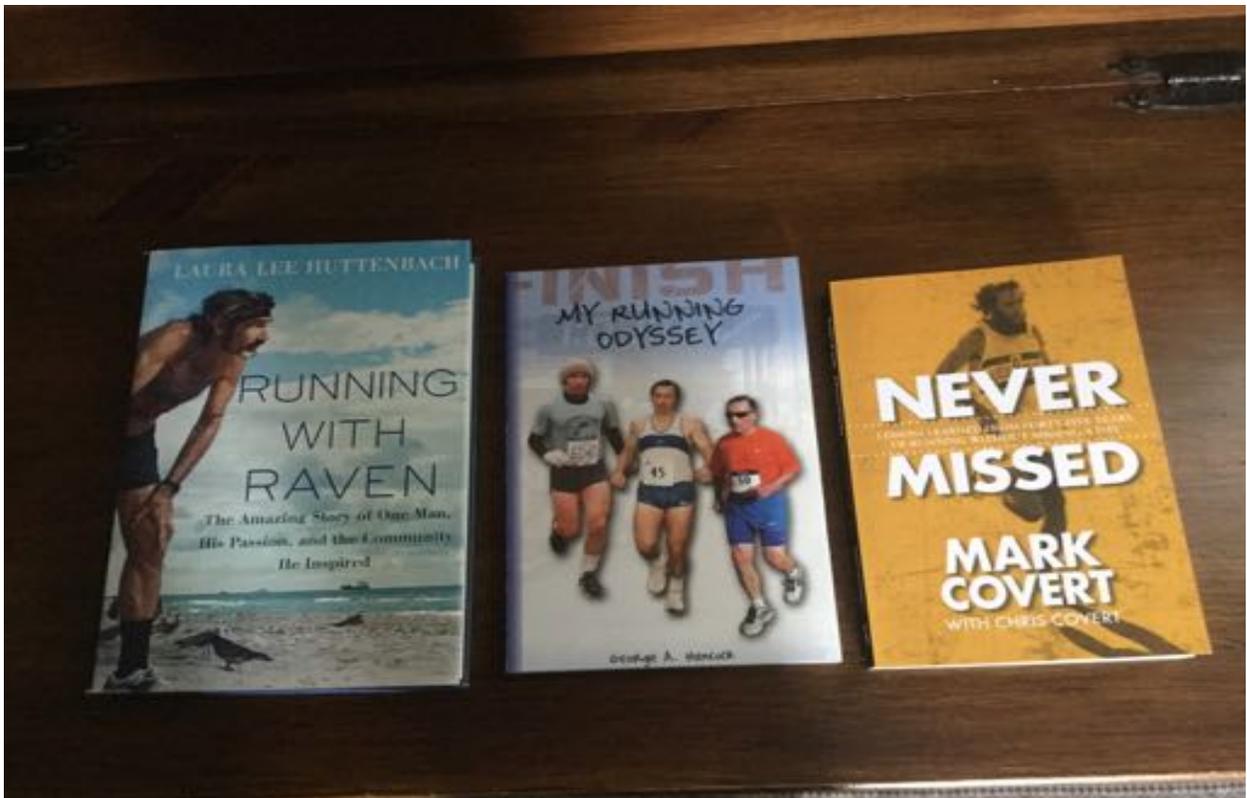

But Mark Covert was more than a streak runner. Mark was an accomplished runner. He competed in the 1972 U.S. Olympic marathon trials. Mark received a standing ovation as he finished his marathon on the legendary Heyward Field. But, you have to read his book to learn why.

Mark Covert was the first runner to train in the new Nike waffle running shoe. He also entered history as the first runner to finish a race wearing Nike shoes. Those historic shoes are now encased in a Portland, Oregon museum.

Plus, Mark ran an incredible 159,000 lifetime miles. Mark Covert's book is rich in descriptions about his running adventure. The final section deals with July 23, 2013. This is the day Mark's 45-year streak ended. Read this section slowly. The passage is a wealth of wisdom related to commitment, hard work and effort. Mark Covert has written another excellent running streak book.

All three books are available on Amazon. My book is also available at www.madeinsomersetcounty.com These three books are perfect reads as we transition into the spring season.

History is a great subject. We learn so much from those who came before us. Read these books and learn what it takes to maintain a long streak plus a fruitful and fulfilling running lifestyle. Running every day is worth the effort. Run smart, run well!

Traversing the Tundra Daily Grows in Popularity By: Steve DeBoer

Since Ted Corbitt began his habit of running daily in 1953 (the first person we have confirmation of doing so for one year or longer), streak running has been a relatively unpopular activity until very recently. By the beginning of 1980, only 38 persons had daily runs lasting 6 months or longer (0 women) in the US – at least who were known from George Hancock’s 1994 list of Streak runners and various other sources. More recently, we have learned of others and can now list 67 individuals who met that criteria in 1980, including 3 women. In 1990, using those same sources, there had been only 81 streak runners identified, with Margaret Blackstock being the only woman. Again, others have been found since then, so now we know of 159 streak runners, 10 being women. When the US Running Streak Association became incorporated in 2000, there were 113 active or retired, with two women, Margaret and Debbie Ciccati. As I review the active and retired lists now, plus some who never certified their streaks, that total is 213, including 15 females.

Here are the known numbers now (including those not registered), going up to the beginning of 2019:

1980 - 67 (3 F)
 1990 - 159 (10 F)
 2000 - 213 (15 F)
 2005 - 234 (19 F)
 2010 - 315 (47 F)
 2015 - 532 (117 F)
 2019 (includes all countries) - 2170 (405 F)

In other words, the number increased 800% from 1980 to 2015, but the number of women went up 4000%! In the last 4 years, daily runners increased another 300%, women going up 350%. Looking at time spent in running streaks (combined for those who have more than one), of the 500 longest, 14.2% are female, the next 500 34% are female, the next 500 38.3% are female, with 44.8% of the 1501-2000th being women.

Modern streak (daily) running began in the United States in the 1950s, as documented in previous Tundra articles (the only stalker in the 50s we know of is Ted Corbitt). In 2012, we finally achieved the 50 States + DC goal – a documented streak runner in them all. In November, 2015, we had for the first time an active registered streak runner in all states and DC, but that did not last. Now 48 states + DC have had a female running daily. Below is a list of each state, their first documented stalker and some other interesting statistics. Ages of active oldest runners are as of Feb 1, 2019.

 Three youngest (Sierra Stempke 3 yr 11 mo; Jackson Stempke 4 yr 10 mo; Lauren Thorson 5 yr 9 mo) & three oldest (Wendell DeBoer 85 yr 7 mo; Jim Woolam 86 yr 6 mo; Herb Fred 86 yr 9 mo) streak runners ever.

CT – Amby Burfoot ran daily for over 2 years but has never certified his streak.

MD – Bob Ray was first American to run daily for 20 & 30 years.

CA – Mark Covert was 1st to run daily for 40 and 45 years; Jon Sutherland (49 yr) has the longest identified US streak ever. Youngest, Sierra Stempke, began daily runs before age 4.

PA – Bruce McLanahan ran daily in high school (mentioned in Runner's World 1977 article on streak running by Nick Marshall).

MN - Steve, Dave and Wendell DeBoer were first family to have 2 and 3 streak runners. Julie Maxwell has longest retired female streak (33 ½ yrs). MN has most (170) and most active (102).

WA – Joel Pearson began daily running with his dad, Jim. Jim's other children, Paige and Hopper, and brother Don, make their family the first one with 5 streakers. Thorson family in MN now has the most – 7.

IL – Ken Young is only male runner to be first in 2 states (IL & AZ).

FL – Jim Woolam (age 86), oldest active streak runner; Lois Bastien (38 yr) has the longest identified world streak for women and is oldest woman ever (82).

WY – Elaine Rountree is only female runner to be the first in 2 states (WY & NV). Eileen's first streak is the oldest for F but not discovered until 2011.

ND, WV – only states never to have female running daily for one year; ND only 3 streak runners ever, none currently active.

AK – Bruce Sackinger reached one year November 2015, first time all 50 states have had an active, certified daily runner, 61 years after Ted Corbitt reached the year mark of the first registered streak in the US.

NM – Last state to have a certified streak when Jared Ostroski reached one year on October 24, 2012.

Currently 3 states with no males actively streaking (ND, AK, RI) and 4 states with no females (ND, WV, VT, AK); Two states (ND, AK) no one currently active.

With now over 2000 individuals documented running daily for one year or longer, it is still important to recognize we are not immune to at least a couple of things, taxes being one of them. Here is a list of those who have taken their running to a new level:

Steve DeBoer and Rick Rayman

PS. My wife, Gail, and I flew to Toronto, Ontario (the 4th largest city in North America after Mexico City, New York and LA) on December 8th to visit Rick & Marsha Rayman. On Sunday the 9th and Monday the 10th, I ran 4 miles with Rick to help him celebrate the last day of his 40th year of daily runs and the 40th anniversary of his first daily run, having the longest known running streak in Canada – next longest about 27 years. This is only the third time 2 streak runners with over 87 years of running daily have run together (the first was when Mark Covert (45 years) and Jon Sutherland (44 years) ran together the last day of Mark's running streak in 2013 in southern CA; the second was when I (46 years) ran with Steve Gathje (45 years) to celebrate his 45th anniversary Sep 2017 in Minneapolis, MN). Of course, Rick & I think we should get an extra year or two handicap for running in significantly cooler (upper 20s to low 30s) weather!

PPS: In the last 3 months, we have seen the first state with 160 & 170 streak runners (MN), the 3rd state with 130 (TX), and the 4th with 110 (PA). Also the 1st with 100 active (MN), and the 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th with 60 active (MI, NY, FL & PA).

The 70,000 Mile Club By: Steve DeBoer

A large number of streak runners (at least 138 that I have been able to confirm) have accumulated over 70,000 miles running in their lifetime. Here is an update of their total and streak mileage. Herb Fred ran more miles than any other person with verified records that I am aware of.

Darryl Beardall had run an estimated 280,000 miles by the end of 2012 but has not been able to locate all his running logs to verify his total. He has only confirmed his 2007-2017 mileage. He does not run on Sundays, so is not a streak runner. He ran the Olympic Marathon Trials in 1960, 1964, 1968 and 1972

Dallas Robertson is also not a streak runner. He ran between 20-25,000 miles before 1980, when he began recording his mileage (20,000 is used as estimate in listing his total mileage).

Don Ritchie, British ultra runner, who is not a streak runner, logged 208,100 miles from 1962 to 2011. His still standing track and absolute 100K world record (6:10:20, set over 40 years ago) was achieved in a track 100K race. Ritchie's halfway split in that race was under 3 hours, the first time anyone had run that fast for 50K as a split in a longer race. It remains the longest standing world record in all of Track & Field.

With Darryl, Dallas and Don, there are 141 runners now mentioned, though only 138 are part of the streaker "Club."

Since my immigrant grandparents had all died before I was 2, I felt my genetic profile and my future aging was not optimal. I began running in my late 30's with the thought that if I died prematurely, it wouldn't be for a lack of trying to stay in shape. Now with 54,900 miles behind me, my current doctor, who has run a # of marathons, says, "I want to grow up to be like you."

I am not a competitive runner, entering very few races over the past 30 years. I ran 2 NY Marathons as a guide with the Achilles Track Club, accompanying a blind runner in '92 [He suffered a seizure around mile 15. I finished the race alone], and a wheelchair athlete in '93.

I usually run a few different routes near my home in the a.m. A friend joins me 2 or 3 times a week. I am doing 4+ miles daily, 30/week. In the past I would double that, at a much faster pace. These days I am slow, but am very happy to get somewhere."

2 additional items: [1] I always watch the ground in front of me and pick up things. The list is long and, of course, amazing: a bag of stolen jewels, an assault rifle, a $100 bill, a platinum ring, and CAR PARTS. I made a collage, called "Road Salvage," which has had a few public displays. It is comprised of more than 200 remnants of vehicles. AND, I would love opportunities to display it more. [2] All of my running has given me the opportunity to learn to fly, which I often demonstrated to my classes.

CHRISTINE CROOKE'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

The past year has been the biggest challenge in regards to my streak. Many injuries caused me to question my ability to continue the streak. First a tear and bulging disk last September caused me to reduce my training miles.

Even though I had not trained properly I ran Philly's Broad Street Ten Miler. That resulted in a slight tear in my meniscus and an IT band problem. I struggled through the pain and had eight weeks of PT.

Through it all, I kept my streak alive. Many days were just the mile. I am glad I maintained my streak as I am now almost pain free. Since I turned sixty in June, I realize that my big racing days are behind me. I am happy to have the streak to keep me running and will plan a few 5k's in the coming year. And of course, I will be trying for the five-year mark. Streaking on!!!!

I have had several streaks going, but never anything serious (2-3 months). On April 1st, 2015, I decided to start another one which is still going! As I'm mainly an ultrarunner I've had to force myself to run sore and tired the day after a big run, like the Grand Canyon Rim to Rim, many 50ks and several 50 milers. Fun fact: because I was born in Spain (although I live in California) I grew up with the metric system, so running at least a mile a day doesn't cut it for me as it would be 1.609 km in my log, so I round it up to 2 km which means that my keeping the streak alive runs are 1.243 miles and not 1! A couple of times I've had to go out at 11:55pm because I was busy and forgot about the day's run. I've even run at Heathrow Airport while travelling! (I planned for the layover so I brought a clean shirt and deodorant in my hand bag).

I'm surprised at my own perseverance and now that I'm my way to 4 years I really don't see how I could give the streak up! Here's a photo of me at the Grand Canyon. That day it took us 16 hours to finish. The next morning, I got my short run in!

PHILLIP HAWLEY'S STREAK HITS 19 YEARS

I was very happy to become a lifetime member and the only delay I had was my evaluation of the time value of money and when the benefit of no future dues outweighed the one-time cost.

The difference in my life between when I hit my 18th anniversary and my 19th anniversary is that I have been blessed and cursed with a much higher level of responsibility at work. Since I became a father I have pushed myself on three short term goals: being equally good at being a parent, my job, and running. The focus, energy and time that I have dedicated to my new roll have had some effect on the other two.

My training runs over the last year have stayed consistent at around 5 miles in length but my pace has slowed from just under 6:30 a mile to just over 6:40 a mile. While that doesn't sound like a huge difference, the previous 8 years had been consistently between 6:25 and 6:30 pace, with the occasional speed workout. There is a psychological frustration going over the 6:40 mark because I run every mile with my phone and it announces my distance and time every tenth of a mile. Running at 6:40 pace is 40 seconds a tenth and not being under that average is difficult for me. It obviously had to happen eventually but I am surprised how different a year can make after around 2,000 training runs in a row that were in such a small range.

There really hasn't been any noteworthy experiences running in the last year. No news is good news in that regard. I won a few smaller races and came in the top 3 in a few mid-sized races. No injuries but ice season is upon us and the specter of that feeling when your feet slip on ice haunt my dreams.

I am looking forward to this spring to see if my oldest will be able to bike with me on occasion.

My 7,000th day is quickly approaching and I will try to think of a fun way to celebrate when it arrives.

RODNEY WALKER'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 898 DAYS

Frustratingly, my running streak ended on June 8, 2018. It lasted 898 days and I so wanted to "earn my comma."

It's a long story, but I was hiking the Appalachian Trail, and got deathly sick and after days on the trail and one night back in town, I ended up in the hospital. It was the first time I've ever spent time in a hospital. It was a serious kidney/dehydration/vomiting issue but after 3 days of IV fluids everything turned out just fine, but the streak ended.

I started another streak 4-days after being released from the hospital, and that one only lasted 58 days before an extreme sciatica issue began. That lasted for months, but once again I've started another streak that is 34 days old as I write this on Nov. 30th, 2018. I'll be in touch when I hit my one-year anniversary for this streak.

In the meantime, I'll be following along with everyone's progress and I appreciate the newsletters. They are always a source of inspiration. Thanks again for everything.

DAVID SHANNON'S NEW STREAK HITS 1 YEAR

I'm writing to you to let you know that I've climbed back onto the active streak list. After a dozen New Year's resolution streaks ranging from 3 days to 178 days, I finally heard about the United States Streak Runner's Association in 2012. I got a jump on the next year's resolution streak by starting on 12/26/2012. I made it 1,245 days when I retired that streak due to a piriformis injury.

I restarted a few months later and made it 322 days before stopping for an Achilles Tendon injury in June of 2017. I needed a total rest break and more intensive therapy, but got back on the streaking horse on 11/20/2017. So on 11/19/2018 I got back to neophyte status with an average run of 5.9 miles per day for the year. I've undertaken more preventive exercises to strengthen the supporting muscles and tendons needed for running. I've also improved my diet by reducing refined sugars. Consequently I have less inflammation along with fewer pounds to lug around.

As a bit of a numbers geek, I started a spreadsheet about a month after I started running in 1997. I've recorded every run since that time. My lifetime miles now stand at 32,347, of which 13,968 were included in my 15 various streaks over the years (a cumulative total of 2,574 streaking days during those streaks).

A couple of months after restarting my streak I also got back to racing. So far in 2018 I've run fourteen races, including six marathons and four ultra-marathons (31 miles to 84 miles). I wimped out in the middle of a 100 mile attempt last April when we got hit with an inconvenient blizzard in SE Minnesota. I'm looking to tee up my third attempt at the 100 mile distance in a couple of weeks from now in Louisiana. I'd like to get my second finish of that distance. Hopefully there will be no blizzards in Louisiana.

My streak started last Thanksgiving when I participated in my annual Turkey Trot run in Goshen, CT. I've been an avid runner for years, but wanted to try a holiday streak... from Thanksgiving through New Year's. I enjoyed it so much that I just kept going. I run outside everyday (despite the weather) mostly near my family's small farm. I have a three year old son, who always keeps me on my toes and a super supportive husband who attends every competitive run with my son. I love running, I love training for the same 5ks, 10ks and half marathons every year. I also love roping other people into my running fun. Over the past year, I've completed many runs around Connecticut, and I'm currently training for the United Airlines NYC Half! Thank you for including me in your streaking club, I cant wait to continue my streak into 2019! I'm SO proud to have made it a year!

TAMARA OECHSLIN'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,029 DAYS

Approaching New Year's of 2016, a colleague was setting her "challenges" for the year -- training goals, race PR's, etc. Knowing I would be defending my PhD that Spring, I knew my training would suffer and set my own challenge to get out the door to run every day, even if it was only for 10 minutes. There were weeks that winter that barely made it to 10 miles/week and that still had more miles than hours of sleep, but running kept me going. It remained a daily motivation through graduation, moving to a new state, and starting a new job.

This Spring, I celebrated Day 820 by adopting a new running buddy, a Vizsla puppy. The vet recommended waiting until he was 9 months and had grown to full height prior to training with him. Just days after that milestone, my Trailblazer finished his first full, 1-mile run on my Day 1000!

Unfortunately, I landed in the hospital in October with a ruptured appendix. The first 6 days, I ran 25 minutes of slow laps in my room, as far as the IV pole would allow. (Note: this does NOT please an ICU charge nurse...) However, further complications required me to end my first streak on October 25th, Day 1029.

It's been a slow recovery building back strength and endurance, yet I ran a continuous 5k last weekend! Yesterday, I ran my 1-mile loop through the neighborhood; today, I put on my RW streaker t-shirt and stepped out the door...

Talk to you this time next year!

CHAD SHILSON'S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

My streak continues as I've recently gone past the eight-year mark. This year, I'll top 3,000 miles for the second consecutive year.

In late December, I will complete a marathon in my 50th state. As of right now, I've run 48 of those states with a sub 4:00 marathon. If I'm able to get this last state under 4:00 hours, I'll need to go back to New Hampshire and run another one so that I can have all 50 states with a sub 4:00 hour finish.

During the New Hampshire Marathon, there was severe weather, lightning struck a tree near the course which shorted out the electrical system on some nearby cars and the race director put the race on pause for about 20 minutes so everyone could take cover. Needless to say, I put safety ahead of my finishing time and completed the marathon that day in slightly over 4:00 hours. Good times.

This year especially I've learned to focus and be present now. To think only of my run today, and that I'll want to run tomorrow. When my streak was in the 950-990 days range I forgot this, and started to think about earning that comma. I looked too far ahead things started to go wrong with injuries and illness. I've raced three half marathons in 2018 and joined a friend for a marathon as he completed 30 marathons in 30 days as part of the Dubai Fitness Challenge.

In 2019, I'd like to reintroduce some speed work into by routine and aim for a marathon PB. But more importantly, to enjoy each run one day at a time.

I just calculated my miles and I ran 2,268 miles for streak year 5 or 6.21 miles a day. I've run in 5 countries, 17 states, and 3 continents on the streak so far. I ran my fourth Boston Marathon, and fourth fastest marathon this year in Philly in 3:06:59 (current PR is 2:53:40 in Boston during my second year of the streak).

My most memorable runs are a mile in the airport terminal on the way to New Zealand last year, my first Ragnar, which

I think the streak helped me recover between each leg better than non-streakers, and running through two hurricanes. I am so excited for what the next year of streaking will bring.

CHARLES THOMAS' STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I just ran two miles and can now say my streak is officially three years old! My friend Scott was the one who inspired me to start my streak, and this year I inspired him to start a second one. My friend Dan started a streak too after learning of mine. He'll celebrate a year of running at least 5K a day on 1/1/2019.

EVGENY SIROTYUK'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

On December 1, 2018, I celebrated 2 years of daily running. Daily running has become so familiar to me that I go for a run without even thinking about the weather outside the window or the time of day. Running has become a habit. For 2 years I ran 10,615 km, an average of 14.54 km per day. In 2018, I finally ran my first daily run. Overcame 169 km 500 meters. It was not easy, but I'm not going to stop.

In 2019, I plan at least 2 daily and several 100 km runs. How many more years I can run every day no one knows for sure, but I'm not going to stop. While I feel good and as long as I am a motivator for at least one runner, I will run.

MIKE JOHNSTON STREAK HITS A DECADE

When I first became aware of the everyday running challenge, I was immediately intrigued. We were at dinner with the Andersons at Eddie V's in Austin, Texas when the subject was discussed. I decided to wait until the first of the year, along with my other New Year's resolutions to get started. I also planned on just earning the certificate for completing 365 consecutive days of running at least a mile. I never expected to continue for ten years.

As New Year's Day approached, I expedited the start, beginning my daily runs on December 29, 2008. As it turned out after the fall-out from ten years of pounding the pavement, one other runner started on that day, while five began their streaks on the 1st. As a result, my overall ranking has improved because of that decision. It's interesting to note that of those five, one is from Austin where I started my campaign and one is from Portland where I currently reside. One of the consequences of moving from Austin to Portland was reluctantly giving up my top-city ranking.

In moving from "Proficient" to "Experienced" status, I'm currently tied for 203rd on the Active Running Streak List. I've noticed that my position hasn't changed much in recent years, as habits are now well established above me. It's sometimes sad when I gain a spot, knowing that someone has given up due to injury or worse. I can't imagine life without my running streak - it gets me going every day. In fact, I've carried-over my daily discipline from when I was working into retirement. With a wife that's still working, it gets me out of bed before her and keeps me out of her way while she's getting ready. Otherwise, her occasional envy of my newfound freedom might lead to even more resentment. Fortunately, she enjoys her career for the most part and tolerates the only benefit of my older age.

I returned to my northern Indiana home for day 3,563, meaning there was a dusting of snow for my ten-year anniversary. I ran the usual 3.1 miles (5k a day) that I religiously maintain, with the exception of an occasional early morning flight. Tomorrow, I'll get up a 3:30 a.m. Central Time and probably barely exceed the minimum mile as part of the scramble to get to the airport. This is particularly painful considering that it's 1:30 a.m. at home. As always, the first mile is the toughest, and I won't get the rush of a longer run to start year eleven.

I would probably have a longer running streak if I had known of the challenge earlier in life, but ten consecutive years is an accomplishment at any age. I salute those that have toiled longer and encourage those that have just started. I'm grateful to have avoided injury and laziness and look forward to many more years of what makes many of my friends giggle - being a streaker.

Over the years, I've sadly transitioned from sprinting to running to jogging, and now simply chugging along. It takes a lot longer to run a mile these days, but I'm still making the effort every single day without fail.

JESSICA'S KNUTSON STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

My run streak is going great! It's been a wonderful 3 years. I completed two marathons and a race series in my hometown this year which helped me reach my goal over two thousand miles for the year.

It's also been fun to see my daughter and my husband start run streaking this year as well. They have a ways to go before they can register theirs, but it is exciting that they are striving to reach this goal. We will see if I can convince my four sons to join someday.

I'm looking forward to the coming year and just registered for my next marathon today.

Have a wonderful year!

My streak started as a challenge to run every day for a year. During that first year I learned about this group and was inspired to continue my streak. This group has also taught me how to streak through tough times. Luckily the biggest challenge I've faced so far has been traveling. Today marks my second year and I'm excited to reach my comma during 2019 and to run my first marathon outside the United States. To all my fellow streakers, I wish you easy days with plenty of time for your runs.

JOHN FAZ'S STREAK HITS 28 YEARS

This year provided a couple of challenges for me, primarily was a partial tear of a quad muscle above my left knee. It was painful so had to slow down the pace significantly. Also helped a lot when I could run on grass instead of pavement. The injury occurred a few months ago while I was demonstrating to my girlfriend, Michelle, how to incorporate "speed work" into her routine.

Our normal pace is around 9 mpm. After a 1.5 m warmup I instructed her to stay with me as we dropped down to a 8 mpm pace for 1/4 mile. She hung on with no problem. Recovering from that, I told her we were going to do the same thing at a 7 mpm pace. As we were nearing the end of that 1/4 mile pace, I "pulled up" too quickly. Needless to say, my old body was not prepared for that sudden braking action. It didn't cause a lot of pain initially, but it continued to get worse over the next few days.

Finally, fearing the possibility of causing a permanent injury, I consulted with my Dr. He said that it was a minor injury that would self-heal as long as I was careful. He was telling me to slow down until it healed and prescribed an anti-inflammatory.

Now this was a minor injury that should have healed in a few weeks, if I was in my 20s. Well, I'm not, so here I am several months later and just getting back to the low 9 and high 8 mpm.

The advice I give middle aged runners, "the mind forgets but the body doesn't." I had failed to follow my own advice having forgotten that I was no longer in racing shape capable of sub 6 mpm that I had been in my youth. Gone are the days when I could run a 1/2 marathon PR of sub 6:30 mpm during a full marathon. So for you younger or less experienced streak runners, heed the advice, and you older one, follow your own advice. Good luck in 2019.

This year was highlighted by officially joining USRSA, two 10k Bridge 🇫🇷 runs

I was also able to share my love of running through coaching and race directing this year where I put on a youth running Camp (Ninja Feet) in July, coached a charity team for the Falmouth Road Race, and coached a couch to 5k program and race directed the Dan Scharfman Memorial Run in September. SERENA RETTERATH'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I started my second streak on January 1st 2017, 25 days after I delivered fraternal twin boys. My first streak of 1,356 days ended during my pregnancy when my boys seemed to be growing too slowly. Here I am at 2 years again and I believe I value my streak more than ever.

My daily running is essentially my only me time. As a mother of 6 children from 18 to 2 years I need it!

During my streak I have PR'd at several distances. I've raced 3 marathons and a 50k as well as various other distances. I also was able to pace a marathon thanks to the recommendation of a fellow stalker. My children are learning valuable lessons and I have a nice pick of running buddies.

I'm very proud to say that I've completed 5,000 streak miles in my two years which averages out to 6.8 miles a day. I plan to continue as long as possible.

MARYLOU THELMO'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Today marks my 2nd Anniversary of streak running. I started my running streak on 1 January 2017. It was a New Year's resolution that has become an integral part of my life.

Prior to the start of my running streak, I had a long time bucket list goal of running a marathon. After winning the ballot entries into the NYC Marathon in 2011 and the Chicago Marathon in 2015, and not running the former, and deferring the latter for the following year, I finally ran my first marathon, and was hooked.

I heard about streak running, and thought that I would give it a try for just 1 year. However, having run at least one mile every single calendar day, and reaping the mental and physical benefits, I decided to continue with the streak.

In 2017, I ran the NYC Marathon. Unlike the 2016 Chicago Marathon, I did not enjoy running it because it was raining during most of the race. Nevertheless, I finished the marathon, and felt that if I can complete a marathon in less-than-ideal conditions, I can do anything.

I did not run a marathon in 2018 due to injury. However, I was still able to continue with my streak. Now that January 1, 2019 has arrived, I am looking forward to running the Berlin Marathon in September, and of course, continuing my running streak.

PAUL KIRNER'S SECOND STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Yes, my steak is continuing into 2019 but it began in 1990. In 1990, I ran 5K and 10K but not every day. My daily runs began with a New Years' resolution to run every day starting December 31, 1995 and continued even during the summer of 2010 when I went through 8 weeks of chemotherapy for cancer. I'd run in the morning before going to the clinic.

Nothing would stop this streak until I had surgery to have my gall bladder removed on December 11, 2014. That was 5,096 straight days in almost 14 years.

I started streak #2 on December 31, 2014. I am cancer free now and will surpass my previous record of 5,096 straight days on January 1, 2029 when I will be the ripe old age of 81- years - old. By the way, my average running distance per day was 3.63 miles per day or I logged 18,500 miles in 5,096.

My running streak is alive and well after 5 years. I ran 2,606 miles in 2018, averaging just over 7 miles per day. I've been fortunate enough to add mileage every year going back to 2013. I'd like to hit 3,000 miles someday, before the inevitable plateau sets in. We shall see. BARRY SACKETT'S STREAK HITS 9 YEARS

I am late getting back to you from my streakaversary on November 4th and that is a good description of my last year. Family, work and the world at large had me in a hectic place for much of the year, but that tide is turning.

In October I completed my second Ultra at the Mines of Spain 100 miler in Dubuque and it seemed to get my mojo back. I had dropped out of a 100 miler in December of 2017 at mile 80 and that set me back mentally.

Through that rough hectic year which included a significant injury I still got up and ran everyday and for that I am thankful. This knowledge that I have the privileged of running and moving through my space on a daily basis gives me so much that I am hopefully then able to give away.

To all of the streakers who might read this, thank you for doing this and congratulations for the wonderful gift you have each day to go for a run. Hope to report back in November of 2019 that I make it 10 years.

I did not race again in 2018—too slow and too cheap to pay race fees. Every time I get an “urge” to do a race, I’d be out running and hear the dreaded “on your left” as someone would be passing me. It’s embarrassing to admit my quarter mile speed is my former marathon pace. However, I’ve now completed 3 full years of not missing a day running—1095 consecutive days. I did make my goal of running 2000 miles in 2018 (2132 miles). This makes 37 years (since 1982) of logging at least 2000 miles a year. Overall, my lifetime mileage is 105,749. Maybe when I turn 70 in 4 years, I will run a race—definitely not a marathon, probably a 5K. I just need to remember it’s about the streak and ability to be able to still run and not the pace.

BREANNA BARNETT'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I celebrated my four year streak anniversary by...yep- running some more. I always celebrate the end of the year and the start of my streak with the same race in Flint, MI. It was cancelled last year due to crazy ice/snow/wind conditions and a -12 windchill, so my running group and I ran our own 8K race. This year they joined me for the actual race and I couldn't imagine keeping this streak alive and having so much fun without such a great group of runners/triathletes to share some miles with. I even have some of my running group into their own run streaks! I never thought I would be a part of such a crazy, supportive community like run streaks international but now I can't remember what I did before I started running.

I have no plans to quit my run streak- I am signed up for several races this year, including two marathons. This streak has brought me strength, courage, holes in my socks, and some great friendships...and it gets my dogs out of the house for a few miles, too.

Thank you for organizing such a great community and recognizing our streaks! Happy running!

MATT CRAWFORD'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

My running streak continues and today marks 2 years (731 days) of running at least one mile (1.61km) every day since January 8th 2017.

2018 was a busy year and I ran a total of 4,131km (an average of 11.3km per day) and climbed 58,325 metres elevation (which equates to more than 6.5 times the height of Mount Everest). Along the way I chalked up 400 runs and had some great adventures including: running as an official pace runner in the sold out 40th Gold Coast Marathon, joining the Đà Nẵng Runners for a group run in Vietnam and even commandeering a boat to get across Currumbin Creek when the roads were closed due to the Commonwealth Games cycling.

To keep the streak going I completed some pretty quirky runs too. Once I even took advantage of the miles and miles of air conditioned terminals at Singapore Changi Airport for a 1.7km indoor run while I was waiting for a connecting flight.

Kudos to my #1 training partner for 2018 - My coach Ross Kingsley who ran with me on over 160 runs and continues to inspire and challenge me every week. Thanks to his programs, advice and support I achieved race results including:

* 1st in category in the 2018 Up The Buff trail race.

* Qualifying time for the Boston Marathon with my 2018 Gold Coast Marathon race time.

* Completing the world's toughest half marathon - the Point to Pinnacle in under 2 hours while racing from sea level to the top of Mount Wellington in Tasmania.

I love running every day and I continue to record all of my runs and adventures on Strava which has been a great way to log my runs, collect measurement data and also connect with some great friends and running enthusiasts all over the world.

Thank you to my coach Ross Kingsley and The RK POD Running Group/ Club/ Team, to all of those of you who ran with me, and thanks to all my Strava friends for your support and kudos every day.

PAUL MURPHY'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

My streak continues. An interesting second year with runs in a number of new locations including Italy, Denmark, Greece, Korea, at sea on a ship and Australia, along with a few different locations within New Zealand. The only challenge is for me, I am not entering events, just battling with myself.

Next big goal is 1000 days which is due 27 September 2019. No illness in that two-year period and only a slight back niggle, so benefits are great.

There are days where I think it would be nice to have a day off, but it doesn't last long. I have a few "rest" days where I run a reduced length, but never less than 1.61km, or I do a morning run followed by an evening run which gives me 36 hours between runs.

I have even inspired a mate to start on a streak. It also impresses people when you tell them, although I do tend to keep it mostly too myself.

CHIP AKERS' STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

Seven years and counting! After barely surviving the less-than-pristine weather at Boston in April, I then had to deal with a torn hamstring that ultimately healed through PRP (Platelet Rich Plasma) injections. After a few months of 2 mile jogs, I was able to get back to training and all those doubts about "why am I doing this?" were answered. The lows are what make the highs so epic, right? JOE AVALLONE'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I completed 2 years of running every day on December 18 and, as in my first year, trained for and ran a few races ranging from 5Ks' to half marathons.

My total mileage for 2018 was 1,236 vs. 1,119 in 2017. I was able to shave 3 minutes off my previous year's marathon time in 2018 and will continue to work towards shaving an additional 3-6 minutes this year.

I have been fortunate to remain injury free and my largest hurdle during my streak is usually my 70-80 hour work week during the winter. As a result, many of my winter miles consist of morning treadmill runs, but have made a push this year to run a larger percentage of my winter runs outside.

I feel very fortunate to be able to run every day and hope I can continue to keep my streak going, while enjoying the strong, liberating and healthy feeling it provides. I am consistently inspired by the stories of other USRSA members and the miles, years and races they have run. Happy New Year to all and keep running.

I have just finished a long trip driving around Australia. Running every day of course. I am an emergency physician in Townsville, Queensland which has a tropical climate that tests the motivation in the summer months.

I have a 5k minimum and am fortunate to have avoided injury over the last four years. Highlight runs for 2018 included the Hamilton Island Hilly Marathon which has about 1700m elevation and the Tromso Midnight Sun Marathon in Norway. I travel to Papua New Guinea for work, which has a bit of a violent reputation, and occasionally need a security detail for my runs but I have never had a problem.

I find that doing the streak has meant running is just part of life, and it has become part of my sense of self. My wife and kids are getting on board as well. Highly recommended although I do wonder how fresh others feel after a couple of days off!

CHRIS BRACKMAN'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 2,693 DAYS

I'm emailing you with some unfortunate news in that yesterday January 19th, was the last day of my streak. After snowblowing the driveway I walked down to my mailbox to get the paper and slipped on a patch of ice. I took a direct hit on the inside of my left knee. Despite my best efforts with icing, elevation, etc. it soon grew to the size of a large grapefruit and necessitated a trip to the ER. On the advice of the doc there I decided to end my streak rather than risk further damage.

The last 7 plus years of running have brought many benefits to me which I am thankful for. I hope to start running again as soon as I get clearance and be back on the list someday. KARLA MYERS STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Thanks for the anniversary email, hard to believe it has been two years. I "celebrated" the year two anniversary in Phoenix AZ at the Across the Years race with my husband and my two boys. I managed to get one mile per hour for 24 hours (kinda a streak inside a streak!?!), as did my husband and oldest son. In 2018 the streak stayed intact with more consistency, no super long runs, but everyday no matter what I ran. I started the streak to prove to myself that I could stick with a New Year's resolution, but I have learned so much about the importance of doing something every day. Some days are easy, I feel strong, and some days I have to pull myself together and do it anyway. Either way, I always feel better when I complete my run. It has shown me the importance of discipline and that all you need to do to achieve a goal is work at it every day. This streak has provided the blessing of running in nine states this year.

In July my oldest son started his streak and frequently joins me on runs so we both get our miles in. He is just as intense about getting his miles. In November we were on the way to the airport, both of us were so concerned about getting our mile in so we did not lose the streak on the travel day we stopped at a campground off the highway we were on. We explained the situation to the campground hosts who allowed us in to run our mile in the parking lot and nearby trail. That run concluded four runs in four days in four different states. It has been great to share this passion with my son. I look forward to accomplishing my 2019 goal of earning my comma.

I have run 13 marathons in 8 states, plus the District of Columbia. This includes 4 inaugural marathons. My 1st was the Great Valley Marathon in Chambersburg, PA in 1985. I ran this about a year after my 4th child was born. My fastest was my 2nd, the Marine Corp marathon in 1985 with an official time of 3:48:51. The last marathons I've run were in 2014 where I ran the Deadwood Mickelson trail marathon (my personal favorite), the (inaugural) Fall Classic marathon (Estes Park, CO to Loveland, CO) and the (inaugural) Revel Rockies marathon. All 3 were about an hour slower than my old PR.

Over the years I've also run several half marathons, races up and down mountains, 24-hour relays, 2 - approximately 200-mile team relays, snowshoe races and many shorter races.

I started my streak when my husband decided to try to run for 100 consecutive days. I had already been running almost every day for many years and didn't think this would be hard to accomplish so I joined him. After the 100 days, I felt fine and just kept going. Currently, I am running between 5 - 10 miles per day and may decide to gear up for another marathon.

All of my running days are outside, no matter the weather. I strongly dislike the treadmill and always prefer to be out in nature.

I am happy to be a part of this fine group of runners!

STEPHEN BARDSLEY'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,764 DAYS

Last year my brother proudly posted on Jan 30th that he was entering his 4th year running streak. Running, fishing, drawing meant everything to Stephen. Sadly, on November 29th, just 2 months short of his 4-year streak, he fell and suffered a traumatic brain injury. Stephen had to have almost 1/2 of his skull removed and is slowly but actively fighting his way back from a near death experience. His streak meant everything to him and while I'm not sure he'll be able to run again, I know if he can he will.

I joined this group to start my streak and get on better path to taking care of myself both physically and mentally. There is nothing better to manage stress than a good run.

I was never really a runner until after I had my kiddos. I used to be the person in gym class who would do anything to get out of running. I always used my asthma as an excuse and would tell my mom that you would never see me run unless someone is chasing me.

When I was in college I didn't take very good care of myself. I drank a lot, didn't eat well and smoked, yes smoked with asthma. After I graduated from college I took a long look in the mirror and decided it was time for a change. I was overweight and didn't feel good about myself. I started walking outside, going to the gym and eating better.

In 2011, after having my son, I was 30 and decided to sign up for a 5k and give running a try. Since then I have run off and on with several half marathons under my belt and four marathons. I went through a tough divorce a couple years ago which made it hard to get miles in but, when I was able, it helped me cope better with the stress and anxiety that came along with it.

I am in a good place now and wanted to give myself a new challenge so decided to join this group. I am a full-time working mother with two children. I recognize the fact that in order to take care of them I have to take care of myself. Running makes me so much more happy and less stressed with day to day activities.

My start date was January 23rd of this year. It has been a short time but I am feeling really confident in myself and enjoying every moment I am able to get my daily run in.

MICHAEL BUERKE'S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

Another Groundhog's Day has arrived, and true to Bill Murray's classic film, I've repeated the same day over and over again....at least the running part. :-) I've now completed 8 years of running daily with Feb 2nd beginning year number 9.

Highlights of year 8 include hosting my 7th annual half marathon with my running friends, running nearly every day outdoors - no treadmill including last week's -28F day, a new record low temp for my streak, and related, setting a new record spread of 122 degrees between high/low temp while a run in the same year.

Looking forward to the next couple of milestones: day 3000 is around the corner, and if I stay fortunate and healthy, I'll celebrate finally being "experienced" as a runner when I complete 10 years, only 2 years away. It's been a wonderful challenge to tackle 2 full time and active jobs, 2 full time and active kids, and 2 full time and active running streaks (my wife recently celebrated completing 3 years and is working on year 4). We get creative with our schedules some days but we make it work! Streak on, runners.

ERICA GORMAN'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

When I started my running streak on December 30, 2011, I didn't fully understand what I was signing up for. I knew I wanted to challenge myself. To see if I could run every day in 2012. I worried about illness because up until day 1 I regularly knocked pretty sick to the point that running or doing anything in particular seemed near impossible, but yet, I wanted to try. I put my faith in God although on day 1 my faith was quite weak. Like I said, I didn't fully understand what I was getting into.

Over the years, mile after mile, I am learning more about myself. When you are running and reaching a new PR after a new PR in speed or distance, it is easy to go one. When you move into the 100's then the 1000's in your running streak, those are pretty big motivators. As I write this today, if someone asked me what day I was on my streak I would say, "I have to look it up." I honestly don't remember the day but do log it daily after my run. It goes in and out of my mind without sticking because, I believe, it has become a normal and essential part of my day.

My faith has grown and my speed has diminished. My PR's are happening and last year that really bugged me. By last year I do mean 2018. I tried to let go of my personal pride but all year I felt I was falling short after I ran one slow mile after another slow mile...trudging along through life that was throwing me twists and turns that made it hard to breath. But no matter what was hitting me, I ran. I couldn't not run not because of pride or ego but because it has become my essential lifeline in life. My thing to keep me at peace as much as possible and the days I logged 60 minutes or more of running and cross training were my strongest. I just took each day one at a time as I said good-bye to two men I loved and respected - ironically both lost their lives to the same rare form of brain cancer. I ran as other family members fight their own cancer battles. I ran as I wondered if my marriage would ever not be so strained. I ran through my own battles with depression, anxiety, and PTSD/PASS. I ran believing I was still failing.

2018 came to a wrap as I reached the milestone of 7 years of running every day and I kept on running thinking I was getting nowhere, but I was. Without me realizing it I nailed my 2018 goals and had the most mileage since 2015!

As of December 30, 2011 I have 10,169 streak miles and that number is higher as I write this today. It was humbling and eye-opening to see those stats when I felt so off in all I was doing. I was forging ahead, by God's grace, one day at a time and making new PR's as each day I run that just a mile is a new PR...and it is the same for you.

My running streak began on January 1, 2017. At the time I was working full time, raising two children, and taking courses to obtain a Master's degree. One evening I was taking a break to watch a TV program, and I thought to myself, "If I have 15 minutes to watch TV or read a book or surf the web, then that's 15 minutes I could be exercising and doing something good for my body." I don't normally make New Year's resolutions, but I resolved right then to run at least one mile every day for the next year. My husband competes in Ironman races, and even though his work schedule is all over the place, he makes time to train and maintain his diet. That was motivation enough for me to start my streak.

I never knew there was such a thing as a "running streak" until a short while ago. Knowing that there are others all over the world who have been running for years gives me a renewed sense of determination. And honestly, I feel guilty if I even consider for a millisecond not running for one day! I may not run as far or as fast as most, but at least I'm moving! I guess I've come close to 1200 miles since I started. Here's to at least 1200 more!

SARAH CURETON'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Two years honestly has snuck up on me! I am a mother of two under 5 and the Varsity Boys Soccer coach at the high school where I teach. I love to travel and remain busy both professionally and personally. This year, I have battled some sickness and personal loss, my running streak has been a way to maintain accountability for my commitment to running. I do a mile or more each day and use running as an opportunity to clear my head and prepare for what is to come, running has certainly become my "me" time! I played soccer in college and have been challenged with managing the wellness of my body throughout my streak, the streak runners association has been a helpful resource for questions and concerns.

Having a running streak requires dedication individually for certain but I would be amiss if not giving credit to my wonderful husband and support system. There are days they help with the children and always take my streak seriously, which is refreshing.

This past year I ran my first half marathon and my is it a love/hate feeling! I was so proud of myself and hope to complete more races moving forward as my own children grow and my streak continues.

And just like that, it's over! 11 years 20 days. Last day of the streak January 31, 2019.

Had a really great day yesterday [email dated 2 February 2019]. Had a big recruiting assembly in our middle school looking for more athletes for next year. Picked up a couple more for the track team and a girl for cross country next fall. Good day at school, nice dinner with my wife, some quality time with some old and new friends. Got home at a decent time and went to bed.

And woke up at 4:15 with the realization it was over. I had missed February 1.

So, I'm going to take some time to reflect and figure out what's next. And, focus on coaching young runners.

ERIC BRUST'S STREAK

Over the past three years I have been able to run at least one mile every day, with an average day being about six miles. During that time I was a CEO/owner of a midsize business that I sold during the streak. I also spent a good amount of time traveling around the world. I remember days where I would wake up at 4:00 am to run, just in time to hop on a plane, fly halfway around the world and have to run again as soon as I landed.

All but about 5 of my runs have been outside (no treadmills) which has also added a bit of excitement. I have been lucky enough to run in a snowstorm and a hurricane, within a few months of each other. I have run around in circles on a cruise ship in the middle of the Atlantic, and in about 8 different countries.

During this time, I also managed to run 10 marathons and countless other races.

I'm an ambitious 30-something scientist by trade, and wife, mom, runner, fitness addict outside of work. My love of running is something that I've had since middle school when I ran my first mile and got hooked.

I went on to join the school track teams and eventually cross country as well in high school, but it wasn't until my late 20s that I rediscovered how much I loved running. I started out with some 5ks with friends, and those quickly escalated into 10ks, and some 15ks as I trained for my first half marathon.

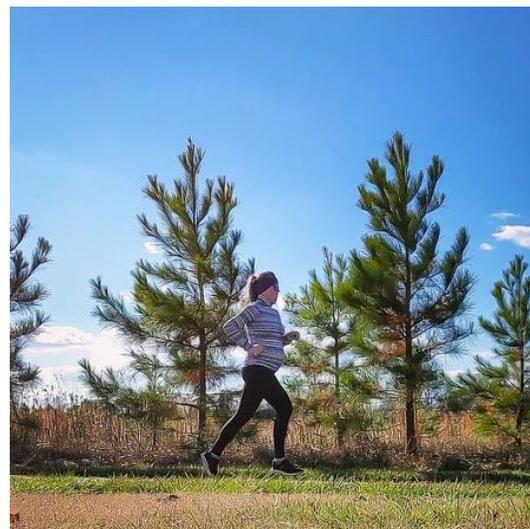

I can remember very confidently saying at the finish line of my first half that I would never run a full. I now need two hands to count the number of full marathons that I've run, and it wasn't long before I'd crossed into the 50k distance as well.

I love completing Ragnars and team relay events, trail running, road racing, and my streak wouldn't be alive today without my treadmill, so all miles are happy miles to me!

I started my run streak by accident... It was supposed to be a one-month commitment to remind myself how much I love to run. After I reached 30 days, instead of taking a day off, I told myself I'd rather hit 50 days before taking a break. Once I reached 50, I decided 100 might be a nice number to end the streak on, and of course once I reached 100, that wasn't good enough either so here I am at over a year already!

About 5 months into my run streak, we found out we were expecting our second child and as I draw closer to my due date, I know that the retirement of this streak is getting closer. On whatever day this streak ends on, I'll be so fulfilled knowing that for that many consecutive days, I laced up, went outside or stayed inside, pounded pavement, ran circles around the local track, adventured through trails, went solo, with friends, or while pushing my oldest child in our running stroller, and even on days I was sick, on work travel, on vacation, and throughout my entire pregnancy- I ran. Every day. I plan to rest and recover after I give birth, but this will not be my last streak!

Yep, the streak continues. I did about 4.8 miles this morning, on one of my usual "flat" routes near home. I discovered 30 years ago that the easiest way to stay in shape was to put on a good pair of "sneakers," and run out the front door. So much simpler and time efficient than going to a gym or getting together with others for a team sport.

Since 2/19/2017 on this streak, I've run a little over 2600 miles. Incredibly, it started in a mid-winter visit to relatives in Naperville, Illinois [just south of Chicago] after a 3-day rest from running due to sciatica. AND, I ran IN SHORTS, because they had a February heat wave.

Currently feeling well. Recently, a "great" case of bronchitis didn't have much effect, other than helping me to temporarily clear up my air passages. The doc told me not to run. I said, "okay." He looked at me and said, "you're not going to listen to me are you?" I smiled.

Attached is a photo of my collage of car pieces I've picked up over the last 30 years. It's going to be displayed in an art festival in March. Exciting. Someone other than me considers it "art."

In the 30 years, I've run about 55,200 miles.

Hope all is well with your health and running.

SRI/USRSA ONLINE

The following are links to some of your favorite streak runners that have been recently featured online.

THE FINISH LINE

By: Mark Washburne

“The [running streak] organization requires about ten hours of work for one person on a monthly basis, except for the month that the quarterly newspaper is published and mailed,” wrote our USRSA founders, Dawn and John Strumsky, in their essay “Our Swan Song” in the Spring 2011 issue of this newsletter. “That month takes about twenty to twenty-five hours of one person’s efforts or half that for each member of a two-person team.” The Strumskys, however, built better than they knew. Due to the mushrooming in streak running that they helped nurture, the actual amount of time required to operate this association far exceeds their time estimates posted in 2011.

The Strumskys last newsletter, TSR Spring 2011 issue, listed 269 active streaks and another 178 retired streaks all from the United States. Just 8 years later, this Spring 2019 issue lists 1,409 active streaks in the United States and another 777 retired streaks. In 2012, we invited streak runners from around the world to join our association so we now list an additional 212 active streaks and 64 retired streaks from our international athletes.

We have also seen a spike in our membership from the earliest days of our running streak association. A number that pops out at me this quarter is that we had 50 new members join SRI/USRSA in the first 50 days of 2019 (1 January – 19 February). In comparison, it took 239 days (21 November 2000 – 18 July 2001) before USRSA had 50 members and over two years more before we listed our 100th member (16 September 2003). We now have 1,531 members (not all active) that have become members of our association over the years.

Thank you to all of you for becoming our members and thank you to Dawn and John Strumsky for founding our running streak association. Speaking of the Strumskys, we were pleased to receive a submission from John this quarter where he recalls a trip to Alaska in 1999 that took place during his amazing quarter plus century running streak (please see page 7).

In reviewing the Spring 2011 issue, I also found articles by George Hancock and Steve DeBoer, who are both featured in this newsletter. George Hancock, another USRSA founder who compiled the original running streak list for Runner’s Gazette in December 1994, discusses some of the recent books written by streak runners including his own 2018 book My Running Odyssey that includes a section on “the beginning of our running streak association” (please see page 23).

In this issue, Steve DeBoer, who has the third longest active running streak in the world (streak started 7 June 1971), continues his “Traversing the Tundra” series with an informative article on the popularity of streak running (please see page 27). Steve also has another article on “The 70,000 Mile Club,” that lists athletes that have compiled more than 70,000 lifetime miles (please see page 33). Thank you, George and Steve, for your always informative articles for our newsletter.

This Spring 2019 issue of our newsletter also features three amazing athletes from Steve DeBoer’s 70,000 Mile Club. Our cover story this quarter features Scott Ludwig from Senoia, Georgia. Scott received the cover honors for completing two milestones last year: 40 years of streak running (started 30 November 1978) and over 150,000 lifetime miles (151,387 on 31 December 2018) (please see cover and page 4).

Another amazing athlete from Steve DeBoer’s list featured in this newsletter is Dave Dial from Groveton, Texas. Dave, who just joined our association in late January, has a current running streak of over 11 years (started 1 November 2007) and an even more impressive lifetime mileage total (as of 31 December 2018) of 192,862 miles (please see page 19). Thanks Dave for your article submission and for joining SRI/USRSA.

Unfortunately, the third person from the 70,000 Mile Club featured in this newsletter, Dr. Herbert Fred from Houston, Texas, passed away at the age of 89 in late December 2018. Dr. Fred is listed as second on the all-time mileage list with an amazing 253,010 lifetime miles. Through the years, Dr. Fred submitted articles to SRI/USRSA about his incredible running and was featured on the cover of this newsletter in the Spring 2014 issue. To celebrate the life of this outstanding athlete, we have reposted some of those articles from Dr. Fred in this issue of TSR (please see page 9).

As mentioned earlier, our running streak association has grown by leaps and bounds in the last few years requiring significant amount of time and energy to keep it moving. In the last year, we hired a web designer to update and automate our website. This update reduced the time required to process a new streak or retire an old streak but not always the time devoted to our streak association because so many new people ended up joining our association.

One of my more time-consuming duties is keeping up paper files on all the streak runners. In 2011, I was handed paper files of all the streak runners from the Strumskys with instructions to keep up the paper files for all new athletes. I have followed those instructions but now my basement is full of file cabinets and I spend several hours a week just doing filing. I discussed these concerns about eliminating paper files with our web designer who recently added a new feature to our website called "Share your news." With this feature, you will be able submit articles for this newsletter and I will be able to preserve them in your automated file without the need to also keep them in a separate paper file. As with most new things, I am sure there will be some glitches and we appreciate your patience as we work to streamline our processes to serve you better.

We also have been working to once again offer singlets, shirts, pullovers, and other clothing with our streak association's name on the front and the start of your streak on the back. Our previous vendor suddenly quit on us last November but a new provider has stepped up and is now offering most of our existing items and some new items. Please see "Shop" on our website that has a link to where you can get the latest in SRI/USRSA clothing.

As for us Washburnes, my wife Diane and I have had a challenging quarter with our running. Diane had severe knee pain (that was later diagnosed a foot issue) and ended her five plus year (2,092 days) streak in December. The good news is that Diane has recovered and even won her age group at a local New Jersey 5K on Super Bowl Sunday. Go Diane!

As for me, I have been struggling with some hip issues that appeared after I ran the Philadelphia Marathon in November. Instead of taking it easy, however, I actually upped my mileage in December so that I could record 2,000 miles for the year. I hit exactly 2,000 miles for 2018 and that is the 10th time in a row I have run 2,000 or more miles for the year and the 30th time I have run 1,000 or more miles for the year. My lifetime miles at the end of 2018 stands at 54,567 miles so I have a way to go before I can join Steve DeBoer's 70,000 Mile Club.

Meeting the 2,000-mile yearly mark and keeping my 29-plus-year streak (minimum 3-miles a day) alive came at a cost for me. In January, I struggled to do long runs in training for this year's Boston Marathon. My running has recently improved and I am hoping that determination, along with muscle memory, will help get me through what will be my 15th Boston and 37th marathon on April 15th. We will see.

Good luck to you as we each run the roads and trails – every day!
