STREAK RUNNER MICHAEL HALLORAN PASSES AT 72

By: Mark Washburne

Streak Runners International (SRI) and the United States Running Streak Association (USRSA) is sorry to learn of the recent passing of one of our long-time streak runners, Mike Halloran, from Jacksonville, Florida. Mr. Halloran was 72-years-old at the time of his passing.

According to his obituary (below): "Mike Halloran died Monday morning, October 14, 2019, doing what he loved - running. He started his running streak in April 1981, and then proceeded to run at least a mile, but usually three or more, every single consecutive day since then. Over those 38-and-a-half years, he made plenty of running friends, many of them simply people kind enough to wave every early morning as they passed him running down the street."

Mike Halloran's running streak (4 April 1981-14 October 2019) lasted for 14,076 days and was listed as the 31st longest running streak in the United States when it ended. It now is listed as the 11th longest retired streak on our United States list.

We here at SRI/USRSA offer our condolences to the entire Halloran family and his many friends.

IRELAND'S TOP STREAK RUNNERS
MAIREAD & TOM BLENNERHASSETT
By: The Blennerhassetts

Tom started his running streak 7 years, 4 months and 22 days ago - day 2700 today [9 November 2019] as we write this. Mairead is 104 days behind on day 2596. At the time we started we were not aware of other streakers in Ireland and we think we might have been the first to register on the USRSA/SRI site. We also set up the Running Streak Ireland Facebook page to see if we could cajole another few people to take up a streak.

There are now seven of us from Ireland on the streak list: Barry Kehoe, Ciaran Ryan, and John Sheldon join us on the active list and Keith Reilly and Mary Horan have retired streaks. We do know a few others that are trying it and hopefully they'll join the list someday soon. We are looked on as probably being a little odd, but that doesn't particularly worry us! It has been a great voyage however, and has brought so many good people into our lives from the Streak Runners International Facebook page. We met lots of our streaking friends in Boston and we hope to meet some more in Chicago 2020. We're easy to spot - we'll be wearing green.

MAIREAD BLENNERHASSETT'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

By: Mairead Blennerhassett

Well, here I am, just passed my 7-year streak anniversary. What started on the 1st of October 2012 as a thirty day challenge has morphed into something spectacular.

It's been a voyage of laughs, tears, sweat, blood, and miles upon miles, but I wouldn't give a day of it back. It was never meant to be this, I never imagined myself on the streak registry so far up along it. I now never imagine a day not running!

So what are the highlights and lowlights of the 7 years or even the time since I last featured in the streak register newsletter?

Highs : - 11 marathons, with the Dublin City Marathon this October 27th (2 weeks time from my writing this) will be the 12th. I'm a baker by trade so don't know if I'll ever do the baker's dozen (13!).

- I've lost count of the half marathons, 10 milers, 10 and 5k races but I have the bling for them all and each one is personal to me.

- Big highlight for me was meeting Mark Washburne completely by accident in Boston this year. We spotted a man in a red hoodie and SRI on it - sure we couldn't resist going over and introducing ourselves - couldn't believe it was the man himself and his lovely wife Diane. Amazing that it was in a sports shop too!! Met lots of other streakers also there.

- The Boston 5K - I got to cross the finish line of the marathon course, probably the closest I'll ever get to it unless I'm handed a place.

- All the places I've travelled to and explored via running.

- Clearing my head when I run and the funny looks I get from motorists when they see me having a chat with myself - but it's always good to get an expert's opinion!!

- All the chats I have with my club friends in "Brendan's Running Club" from Naas, County Kildare. Give him a like on Facebook and tell him Mairead sent you.

Lows - running through the death of my father-in-law this year, my hamstring injury that ruined my Derry Marathon, my kidney infection that ruined my last Dublin City Marathon, but I still dragged myself over the line!

Thankfully, my running highs far outweigh the lows, once I cross the start line, I'll always cross the finish line - a DNS would be preferable to a DNF and thankfully I have a streak of neither!

We love this running community, and always welcome runners to Ireland and meet up with them if at all possible. If we can't, we make sure to tell them all the beautiful places in Ireland they should explore. Let us know if you're coming as we sometimes might miss a post.

The attached photo shows a typical day in the west of Ireland - this was the 2019 Rock & Road Kinvarra Marathon that crosses the beautiful Burren at the start of March - it lashed rain for the entire weekend and, when you could not get any wetter, it stopped and we got this photo! I think it captures the raw beauty of Ireland, the madness of the streak runner, and the actual fun and joy you can find when you're in the rain and there is nowhere to hide.

Stay running all & you'll never know where you might end up.

Reflections on My 10-year Streak By: Rodger Kram

Although I began running almost every day at age 13 in 1974, I never seriously pursued a streak until 2009. Then, I was overseeing the medical care of my mother who was living her last days. As a result of the stress, I was skipping my usual run in a vain effort to “find time” for other things that needed to be done. In doing so, I became morose. Gradually, I began to realize in that tough period that my running was the one of the few things that gave me pleasure. It was something over which I had control (unlike medical twists and turns). Moreover, running relieved stress and allowed my mind the time and freedom to process the more serious events and decisions. I vowed to try and run every day as a positive reaction to negative events. Remarkably, my streak “stuck” from the first day onwards, I did not have any mini-streaks after I made the decision. Ten years later, I feel that for me, my running streak has been enormously positive.

There have been challenging days (food poisoning, snowstorms, flu) and some close calls. For example, one day while brushing my teeth before bed I realized that I had skipped my morning run because of an early meeting at school! Yikes, get out there! But, overall I find that maintaining a streak gets easier and easier. The momentum of the years is like a firm hand on my back pushing me out the door. Moreover, with a streak, I no longer have to make a decision every day about whether to run; if it is a day, I run. The unbridled enthusiasm of my black Labrador named Rono has put a smile on my face for >90% of my runs over the past decade. He has had to miss days and weeks due to elbow and eye surgery. But at age 11, he still barks wildly and jumps vertically as we start our run together. My wife Claire (who has her own 9 year+ mountain bike streak) has surely provided encouragement on challenging days.

I think that my 10-year streak indicates that at age 58 I am in good health, but is it the cause or the effect? That is, do I seldom get sick because of my streak or does inherent good health allow me to have a streak? I am very fortunate to be immune to overuse running injuries. But, I am not immune to the gradual decline in aerobic capacity and thus running speed. At age 26, I could run 20, six-minute miles in succession but now it has been 20 years since I could run one. Every year, I resolve to try and do more speedwork, but have never follow through consistently. Maybe this is the year?

With 45 years of running (10+ in a streak) under my belt, I take this chance to thank the man who started me on this path, my high school coach, John Wilkie. Thanks also to my running buddies over the years, notably: my teammates at North Hills High School (Pittsburgh, PA), Penn State buddies Tim, Bort and Dean, the Ladies of Nederland, Astro (my first dog), Pablo Sanchez, Pete Jensen and again Rono and the protégé pup, Hachi. I can't think of any good reason to stop my streak voluntarily so I'll just keep on running. Nothing hurts and running still leaves me exhilarated. I'm a lucky guy.

"When being passed, particularly early in long races, I say, "It's a long race. I'll see you guys later."

- Barbara Anderson-Tomchin

"Fear less, hope more, eat less, chew more, whine less, breathe more, talk less, say more, hate less, love more, and all good things will be yours."

Jennie Ossentjuk

JENNIE OSSENTJUK'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

By: Jennie Ossentjuk
Washingtonville, New York

I'm so excited to reach my 2-year anniversary. Streaking has added so much to my life, especially a sense of accomplishment that carries me through good times and hard ones. I really did not know at first if I could make it a week let alone a month or a year, but now feel like I can do this forever (if the fates allow). Thank you to the whole community who have been a great support. I wanted to share something I wrote after finishing Year 1, that still stands.. streaking is truly a Daily Celebration !!!!!

----- The Other Side of 365 -----

The "Number 1" question I have gotten from the many Facebook friends who have reached out, is "What made you decide to do this?" I have asked myself that often in trying to process the experience, but I honestly cannot remember how the idea to streak became a personal goal.

I looked back in my journal to find reference to when (and why) I decided to become a "streaker," but I couldn't find anything definitive. Maybe I didn't think I could really do it; actually. I KNOW I didn't think I could really do it, so likely I was scared to memorialize it in print where my children or my lineage would shake their heads knowingly; "She always had big ideas that never materialized...."

But, I DID DO IT! What seemed impossible a year ago, improbable six months ago, now seems not exactly easy, but not exactly hard either. I say "not hard" but also note that I write this in the present with only vague recollections of how I felt running through colds, the flu, strained muscles, a bout of sciatica; and a more clear remembrance of the time TSA almost put an end to my streak at the 3/4-mile mark in a terminal after midnight (our flight was not to land until the next calendar day and I had no choice).

I never really thought about “the other side of 365”; what I would do after completing a full year of streaking. Following the rules of USRSA/SRI, this entails running at least 1 mile without stopping every calendar day (based on the local time you happen to be in). I hadn’t thought too much about what would or could come next until recently, when the finish line was in sight. A kind of weird finish line, where there would be no tape to break, no family or friends cheering. Surprisingly this imaginary “finish line” was more like completing a “real” race than I would have imagined.

First – The “Cheering Fans”

I tried to keep my posting on social media to a minimum during my streak attempt. Until I was fairly confident I would make it, I didn’t want the added pressure of family, colleagues, and friends checking up on me and commenting. The last 30 days I started posting a different dedication every day with an accompanying song to go with the dedication; one that I listened to on that day’s run. I wanted to reach out and thank people that made a difference over my years of running, especially my husband and kids who had to hear about this “streak thing” pretty much every day. In the end I felt like I did have a crowd of people cheering me on, especially on day 365.

Second – “The Physical Sensation”

In the races I have run, like many other runners I know, as the sight of the finish line comes into view, you start to sprint harder and faster until you cross it; and, at least for me, after doing so sometimes you feel like you are going to puke. Then you slow down, cool off, and start looking around, slightly disoriented; feeling accomplished but also at a loss; because all those months of training, stressing, anticipating, are OVER. Surprisingly the psychological and physical effects of finishing this year felt oddly the same.

When a new runner completes their first 5k, the next thought is often about doing another; or trying a 10k, half marathon, or even a marathon. Some runners prefer to focus on PRs, some on longer distances, and some both. Either way, there are new goals and training plans each with unique challenges. What does a new streaker have to look forward to? Counting the days, weeks, months or years of the same?

More of the same? That sounded really horrible. At the same time, when I thought more about it, it also sounded pleasing, actually kind of wonderful.

To live each day in the present and really being satisfied with “just getting (at least) a mile done” is strangely empowering. Every day I get to “check the box,” cross the date off my calendar, and reach another goal.

Every run completed becomes its own achievement - and just maybe even the smallest achievements should be celebrated.

The other side of 365? A celebration of every day

Thoughts from Significant Others on Their Streak Runners (Part One)
By: Steve DeBoer

Roger Nelson, of Colleyville, TX, helped me put together some questions that I sent to some of our higher mileage and longtime daily runners for their spouse/significant other to answer. If anyone else would like to do it, you are welcome to contact me and I can send out the questionnaire (deboer.stephen@mayo.edu).

Of the responses I received, some were more detailed than others, so I plan to include some of those details. It seems those spouses who have also run tend to be a little more supportive, less inconvenienced by the daily habit, but read on and draw your own conclusions. The first six questions and responses are included in Part One:

1. Are you or have you been a runner? If so, how many years? How many miles per week? Ten spouses never ran, 12 ran or still run.

Susan Masters – 42 years (stopped 2017 due to arthritis, knee surgery); 15-25 miles per week; cut back starting ten years ago.

Laura McAllister – 42 years continues; 15-50 miles per week.

Stephanie Leibfritz – 42 years continues; 20-40 miles per week.

Jane Nelson – 40+ years, continues; 35 miles per week.

Lisa Woodburn – 40 years continues; 18-25 miles per week – more in the past.

Cherry Porter – about 40 years, discontinued; 20-40 miles per week.

Denise Childs – 38 years continues; 20-35 miles per week.

Tammy Slusser – 38 years, continues; 60 miles per week.

Veronica Rust – 20 years, continues; 25-45 miles per week.

Gail DeBoer – 20 years (ended early 2000s due to medical conditions); 10-20 miles per week.

Diane Washburne – 15 years, continues; 10-35 miles per week.

2. Are you or have you been a streak runner?

5 spouses had running streak, 3 of which are certified (Veronica Rust 2004-now, Tammy Slusser 2012-16; 2016-17 & Diane Washburne 2013-18). Veronica's active certified streak is now over 15 years. Jane Nelson (Roger's wife) and Ron Bastien (Lois' husband) never certified their daily runs. Though not part of the survey, in reviewing the lists in each state, there are 38 other couples who have had running streaks in 30 different states. CA, TX, FL, WA & IN each have 2 couples, but MN has 10 (Bakers, Buerkes, Deckers, Funks, Gilmans, Mathiesens, Pullis, Thorsons, Vitols, and John Magnuson/Mary Sarafolean)!

3. Do any immediate family members run? 15 of 22 have family members who run if siblings included (those listed in this answer do not include streak runners).

Brenda Hancock – George's brother (age 52) runs and races.

Cherry Porter – son (age 25) runs.

Tammy Slusser – have no kids but siblings yes.

Lisa Woodburn – son (age 29) runs and races (3 marathons) – was captain of USC track team and daughter (age 32) used to run in high school but stopped after compartment syndrome surgery.

Denise Childs – son (age 43) & daughter (age 34) run.

Gail DeBoer – son (age 26) has run off and on – says he might try marathon next year with his dad.

Laura McAllister – son and daughter run.
Mary Jane Lombardi – son (age 48 – good high school and college runner) & son-in-law (age 46) run.
Diane Washburne – sister (age 55).

4. Are any immediate family members streak runners? 7 of the 15 have family members with running streaks if siblings are included.

Veronica Rust – son Yeraj has running streak, on active list.

Barb Pearson – 3 children (Joel, Hopper & Paige) have run daily, Joel still on active list.

Jane Nelson - 2 sons (Grant and John) have run daily, both on active list; other son used to run but now needs hip replacement.

Stephanie Leibfritz – all 3 have run (daughters ages 33 and 27), son (age 37) ran daily for 3 years; all ran first marathon with their dad.

Gail DeBoer – Steve's brother, Dave, dad Wendell, and nephew Kevin Duban all have certified streaks – Kevin still active.

Susan Masters – son and 2 daughters run, one daughter ran daily for 9 years before having baby.

Karen Murolo – Fred's sister, Mercedes, has had several registered running streaks.

5. How long have you been married/in committed relationship? When did spouse or you begin running and streak running?

14 were regularly running when they began the relationship, 10 were running daily.

E Michael Latta – 55 years; Barbara began running after 20 years; streak began 1983.

Mary Jane Lombardi – 50 years; Jim was running; his streak began in 1991.

Susan Masters – 50 years; neither ran; Tim's streak began in 1977.

Cherry Porter – 48 years; Rick started running a few years later; streak began 1977; Cherry 1-2 years after that.

Pam Behr – 48 years; neither were running; Jim's daily streak began 4 years later (1975).

Jane Nelson – 42 years; Roger began running a few years later; Jane shortly after that; Roger's 1st streak began 1981.

Barbara Church – 41 years; George has always been a runner (streak began 1988).

Barbara Pearson – 39 years; Jim already running and had streak (began 1970).

Stephanie Leibfritz – 38 years; both were running; Bill's streak began day after son was born – 1990.

Lisa Woodburn – 37 years; both running when met in college; Woody began daily runs in 2003.

Denise Childs – 37 years; both running before marriage; Thad's 1st streak began 1979.

Tammy Slusser – 33 years; both running since high school – Don (1st streak began 1972) proposed at 1986 Pittsburgh Marathon (Tammy won it in 1994 and 2000).

Brenda Hancock – 30 years; George already running & had streak (1st one began 1978).

Gail DeBoer – 29 years; both were running; Steve daily streak began in 1970.

Laura McAlister – 28 years; both were runners; Grant streak began 9 years before in 1982.

Veronica Rust – 20 years; Gary already running & had streak that began in 1993; Veronica began after marriage.

Karen Murolo – 20 years; he was already running daily (since 1981).

Zoom Hamilton – 13 years; Dave already running daily (1st streak began 1972).

Diane Washburne – 5 years; both were running (Mark began daily runs in 1989).

6. What are the positive aspects of his/her streak running?

Latta - Some other runners recognize her as the "woman who runs every day."

Church - Good health, dedication, and feeling of accomplishment.

Hamilton - Positive physical and mental health benefits.

Rust - We enjoy running trails together, participating in local races and Veronica likes 50K and 50-mile races.

Hancock - George is healthy and doing an activity he enjoys.

Pearson - I admire his focus.

Porter - Rick has only recently opened up about his streak in the last few years. It has been very touching to see how much it means to him. He has been a wonderful quiet role model for our sons to have grown up with- to experience the discipline in the household especially in relation to exercise.

Nelson - He set a personal goal and has managed to continue his streak. When his streak was broken, he started over again.

Slusser - Streak not important, the running and racing is our focus.

Woodburn - Woody had some health tests done recently and his overall health and particularly his heart are in incredible shape. His mother died from a heart attack, so this is wonderful news. I also think his streak, and the dedication and determination that goes into it, inspires others even if they aren't runners or streakers.

Murolo - Impressive, inspiring, topic of conversation, keeps him fit, happy, healthy, and maybe even sane.

Childs - Ummm, not sure.

Behr - Now, at 71 years old, my husband runs to maintain health and wellness. Years ago, he was on a team and ran competitively in races from 5K to marathon distance. At that time, running every day was part training, part wellness and health and part stress control.

Leibfritz - Helps to keep me consistent with my running, even though my belief is that everyone should take a day off of running now and then!

DeBoer - Good example to family of setting a goal and sticking with it; gets him out of the house.

McAllister - It is character building and a healthy addiction.

Lombardi - Running has many positive effects on many people. If the streak has helped him remain a runner for 60 years then that is the most important aspect.

Masters - I liked that my husband wanted to stay in shape and admired his dedication, often encouraging him to "just run a couple miles" on days he thought he might not run, whether due to weather or an illness or the birth of one of our five children. I knew he would be upset about breaking his streak.

Washburne - There are many! It enables us to spend our free time together doing what we both love. It encourages us to enjoy and explore the great outdoors. Our travels have allowed us to run in new places, cities, states and countries together. In less than favorable conditions (storms, snow, heat, frigid weather), we push each other to "get out there."

PS> Through 10/18/19, MN has had 184 streak runners (73 females!), compared to 171 (48 females) for CA and 163 (59 females) for TX. FL is a distant 4th with 133 (44 females). On the active list MN now has 107 (49 women), compared to TX (they passed CA) with 104 (44 women), and CA with 101 (37 women). MN holds on to their slim lead despite having much lower population (5.6 million in 2018, vs. 28.7 million TX and 39.6 million in CA (with 5 and 7 times as many residents). FL is 4th with 83 active (26 woman), the only other state with 80 or more.

MICHAEL NEFF'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 4,187 DAYS

My Streak came to an end on June 18th after 4,187 days (11.5 years) and 11,273 miles. This has been a tough year as I suffered through some foot issues and many days of 1 mile "streak savers." The foot finally healed and I was getting back into shape when I was hit by a fever in early June. I was told it was the flu and continued to get out daily while the fever persisted on and off for weeks.

My doctor sent me to the ER on June 18th (after my mile!) and I wound up in the ICU overnight followed by 4 days/nights in the hospital. It turns out I was bit by a tick while trail running during a Memorial Day visit to Maine.

I'm going to start running daily again, but I won't call it a streak. I'll skip the days that are inconvenient - like running in the JFK Parking Garage, or running at 11:45PM after my son's wedding because I was summoned for some family photos early in the morning when I planned my run, or like the time I ran for 15 minutes on a wooded island campsite that offered only a 50-foot trail. I could go on and on. It was a great adventure!

I am going to continue my half-marathon-a-month streak. I haven't missed a month since I started in January 2012. The count is now 80 consecutive monthly half marathons (108 lifetime). Streak On!

I'm still at it although my miles per week are less than last year. I have a new job working 12 hour shifts with at least an hour a day commute. SO... Getting up at 4 AM to get a run done, drive in, work 7 to 7, and drive home to repeat does not leave a lot of time for race training.

I may have to continue this for another year but not any longer if my schedule doesn't change. I don't mention this to complain, but to illustrate the possibility of finding time to keep the streak alive. Seize the morning (as most of us do) or the temptation to gravitate towards the couch becomes strong. Keep on streaking everyone!!!

Today, August 20, marks my 8-year running streak. I have had a calf issue the last few days but have managed a slow two miles each day. Probably shouldn't have tried to run an interval workout at age 75 with high school kids.

I have averaged about six miles per day during the streak and am on pace to hit at least 2000 miles for the year; something I have been able to do every year since 1960. I feel very fortunate to be able to still run as I enter my 61st year of running!

Year three has been good to me. I ran my first 50k race, the Burning Man Ultra Marathon. I moved to a new city and though I was unable to go home for Thanksgiving I found a local Turkey Trot, the Gobble Gobble Gobble, ran a PR for 4 miles and was invited to Thanksgiving dinner with new running friends. I spent my birthday weekend running the Disney Fairytale Challenge and PR'd in the Enchanted 10k. I celebrated my 1,000th streak day by running the Brooklyn Half marathon. The next week I PR'd at the Vermont Marathon and came one minute and thirty-nine seconds short of having taken a full hour off my first marathon time.

I am so fortunate to have been injury free and relatively healthy these last three years. I'm grateful for everyone who has shared a mile with me along the way or cheered me on. I appreciate that I am privileged to be able to organize my life in a way that has allowed me to complete another year and I'm looking forward to more days of running ahead.

During Hurricane Harvey (August 26-28, 2017), I read an article in RunnersWorld(dot)com with the title, "What I Learned From Running One Mile a Day for 250 Days." I was intrigued. I said to myself that I could run one mile a day. So, on August 29, 2017, the day after Harvey left Houston (our area of Houston was not flooded), I started my streak. My first run was for 2.5 miles (22:53 with an 8:57 pace).

I've run when sick, in the cold, cold rain, heavy down pours and more. In September 2018, I got an Apple Watch and became obsessed with closing my rings (which requires exercising 30 minutes a day). Today, I average 3.25 miles a day.

I love running. I can't believe it's been two years already.

I ran my third marathon this year in April, and I am preparing for my fourth marathon this year in October. I have not managed to break the four hours barrier yet. My first marathon was 90 plus degrees, the second only 30, and the third was raining.

The picture is from my most recent marathon, crossing the finish with a time of 4:14. I hope for better conditions for the fourth, but I have run through the wind, rain, or snow. The weather cannot stop my streak.

I ran my one thousandth consecutive day in a row while on vacation in Cairns, Australia on May 28th 2019. It was neat to reach that milestone while on vacation with my best friend for life. Now I have taken my streak through two countries (United States and Australia) and New York, Connecticut, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, North Carolina, and Washington D.C.

I ran a thousand miles per year over the first two full years of the streak and I am well on my way to passing that mark this year (over 700 miles in 2019 so far). I look forward to the next thousand days and many, many more miles to come as I continue the streak.

I started running about 9 years ago. Not much later my friend asked me to join him on his first marathon. We started to train for the NYC 2011 Marathon. Since then I have run 6 more, but I have to say that nothing beats the NYC marathon. We were back to run it a second time in 2012 but it got cancelled that year due to the storm. Instead of running we helped out in a local community center.

After 7 marathons I wanted to keep running, but I did not want to run such long distances any more. What started with a "run-5K-every-day for 10 days" challenge, morphed into a 30-day challenge, then a 60 day challenge, then a 100 day challenge and then a 365 day challenge. I am approaching day 400. With my every day running I was getting curious to how many other daily runners there are out there.more than I thought :-)

Me and my running buddies have yet to make our joint goal, namely: start, run and finish a marathon with the 3 of us, faster than any of us ran a marathon before. We currently have to beat 3:27:00. They went on to participate in tri-athlons, but the plan is now to give our joint marathon goal one more chance. Next March in our home town of Amstelveen, we'll be attempting our goal one more time. In the meantime, I aim to continue with my 5K a day.

I'm a novice at distance running. I was a sprinter in secondary school but had no experience with anything beyond 800 m. I was an avid walker and walked briskly for around two hours each morning.

One morning this past April, I was underdressed for the cold temperatures that worsened about half way through my walk, so I began to run just to keep warm. By the time I had stopped running, I had gone 4.5 km. I realized it was a fun and invigorating experience and I was instantly hooked.

I quickly began advancing my distances. I ran my first 5 km race about one month later. An article online educated me about run streaking and I decided this was a movement I wanted to be a part of.

I always run early in the morning before I eat. I'm usually awake before 4 AM. This is a routine I completely cherish. I try to exceed 100 km per week. Marathons are in my future and perhaps even ultras.

My streak took me through my husband getting his doctorate and our son through his entire high school career and his college sendoff. I'm grateful for every day and every mile. It's been one week since surgery. When I came home I was non-weight bearing and using my hands to lift my leg onto the couch. Today I walked one mile. DAVID SHANNON'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 657 DAYS

I broke my streak today [9 September 2019]. On Friday and Saturday I ran in the Sawtooth 100 Trail Race on the Superior Hiking Trail on the north shore of Lake Superior. The race is billed as "Remote, Rugged and Relentless." It lives up to that billing.

I got injured early in the race and kept running. I made it to mile 90.7 before deciding to pull myself. Looks like either a high ankle sprain or stress fracture.

I met with the race medical staff when I dropped from the race and an RN this morning with vast experience in (trail) running injuries. I will meet with a doctor tomorrow.

So I made it to RSD #657 this time for my second longest streak. I averaged 6.3 miles per day or 4150 miles for the streak. I hope to heal and be back again soon.

Running is something I never thought I would or could do. When growing up, I was told to sit out from PE because of a heart murmur. But, after my parents died, it was a wakeup call for me to take better care of myself. I huffed and puffed my way from running 30 second increments up to a mile.

I continued to add new challenges and eventually ran my first 5k. Once I got to a half marathon, I decided it was too much work to retrain, so I figured I should sign up for a marathon to check it off my bucket list.

After an amazing first marathon experience (Pittsburgh - great race!), I immediately put my name in the hat for the NYC marathon, and got in on my first try! What an experience that was! Since then, I've completed 14 marathons and about 80 races.

I am pretty hooked on running and on runcations, and I tend to like the larger races. I've been super fortunate to be able to run in some really amazing places, like my most recent races in Prague and Belgrade.

During a bout with post-concussion syndrome last year, my therapist recommended that I keep up with my running to help with my recovery. That's when I decided it would be a perfect time to finally start that run streak I always talked about.

After one month, I saw some big improvements and was slowly feeling somewhat back to normal again. So, I decided to keep it going.

Right after I was released from therapy, someone challenged me to keep streaking for a year (a non-runner, of course), so I accepted. Streaking was a positive experience for me and I never felt like I wished it was over. In fact, I had a hard time ending it.

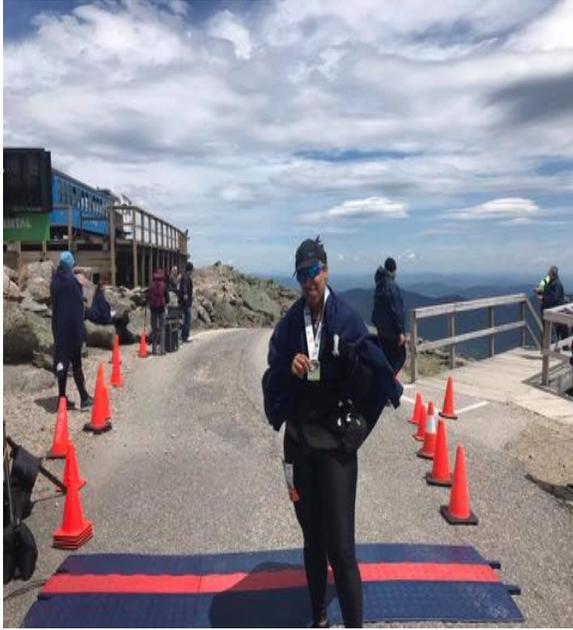

To up the challenge, I decided that my minimum would be 2 miles per day. It never seemed like a burden, my legs actually felt better and my running was improving. I contemplated whether I should keep going, but ultimately, I knew that it was time for me to find some new and different challenges. I am grateful that I was able to complete the challenge and for how much it helped me.

My recent streak years have been low in miles. Between a pretty demanding full-time job and my part-time doctoral program at Syracuse University, I have not had time to register for a lot of races or do many long runs.

I reunited with some high school track friends that I haven't seen in decades and we did a 5k in Newport, R.I. Was well worth the long trip from upstate New York even though the race was in the pouring rain.

The other race I did I half-jokingly say was probably one of the worst decisions of my life! I did the Mt. Washington Road Race in June.

For those not familiar, Mt. Washington is the highest point on the east coast. The race up the mountain is advertised as 'just one hill.' I knew it would be challenging but almost instantly I knew I was underprepared and struggled.

I played mind games with letters and animals and tried to count how many things I've done in life HARDER than the run. The list was not that long. By mile 7 and about 5,000 feet I was in tears but was determined to finish.

On a lighter note, did some international travel so had to do a run in London Heathrow and Madrid airports to keep the streak alive. Four airports are now a part of my streak.

Otherwise, it has been an uneventful year but I am looking forward to more running adventures in the years to come.

As many who have been doing the streak know, doing one mile a day can often be easy, but can also be challenging. I was recently faced with this challenge while riding a four-day charity bicycle ride. Getting off the bike and running a mile after riding 70 or 80 miles isn't the first thing that you want to do. All the other riders also thought that I was nuts!

It can also be challenging with the most challenging being the day after a marathon. Working through injuries can also be challenging, as I'm sure we all know. A recent bout of plantar fasciitis had me cutting down to just my one mile a day. At least my chiropractor understood my need to keep the streak going!

Also, after a recent bicycle crash, I wanted to run my mile before going to the emergency room to get 6 stitches for a cut over my eye brow. It can also be challenging when working a long day. I have found myself more than once running at midnight to get my run in for the following day before going to bed!

As challenging as it can be, I am proud to have hit the fifth year of my streak, and hope to be back writing to all of you again for year ten! I have enclosed a recent picture from the New England Green River Marathon that I ran on September 1.

It's actually an amazing accomplishment and yet I still sometimes feel like a noob. Especially compared to some of you guys who have been doing it for so much longer than me, and you probably go further than I do every day.

This streak is something I do for myself, to make me feel better. People sometimes question me and tell me that it can't be healthy to run every day, through bad weather and every cold or fever that can hit me. But I don't care about that since this is actually something that makes me feel good, both physically and mentally. Everyone has to find their own way. This is my way!

Yesterday [message dated 21 September 2019] I completed 11 years in my streak. It is amazing to see the growth over the years and widespread diversity among members of this unique little registry.

In retiring from medicine three years ago, I thought perhaps I would run more but it actually has been quite unchanged in miles/week averaging 35. I have concluded that my time allocation to the running life has been about right. The added hours of not seeing patients has been readily filled with travel and other interests. My wife Coleen and I just returned from a trip to London where I found an especially nice place to run: St. James Park, near Trafalgar Square.

Congratulations to all the Floridian and other streakers! I somehow believe I'm in very good company.

The last year has been hectic with work, travel, family, etc. but I am lucky to still be running and fortunate enough to be forced to run in some unique locations.

In July I knocked off a mile at 9,000 feet on the patio of a Swiss mountain hut overlooking a glacier; those were a lot of tight small circles! I had the unfortunate pleasure of running many miles in both Singapore and the Philippines; I loved the locations but not the heat and humidity.

As of right now, I've streaked on five of seven continents - I still need to log streak miles in Africa and Antarctica - but I think I'll get there if I'm patient.

Although I was definitely disappointed when I ended the streak, I never thought that it would last that long when I started.

I managed to keep the streak going despite, among other things: (1) a broken toe; (2) a broken rib; (3) a broken wrist that required a cast for 6 weeks after I tripped on sidewalk crack while running; and (4) a simultaneous bout of double pneumonia and influenza B.

I'm sure you've heard other stories, not to mention having your own, more interesting than mine about what streakers have run through, but I thought that I'd share mine.

I am still on my streak. It has been a struggle but I am always happy that I push myself to run every day. I have dealt with anxiety and depression for a long time. I have been occupied with being a mother and I was not experiencing any of the anxiety.

Thanks for the congratulations. I probably would have forgotten about the 9-year anniversary had you not reminded me. To be honest I don't really think about it. I just remember that I started on 10/10/2010 because it related to a great discovery I made at my work as a Remedial Massage Therapist, which allowed me to start running everyday, as I was chronically injured before that.

I must say that the last 9 years has been a transformative journey. I was not a sporty child, unfit, and quite overweight most of my life.

I have mostly run 5k each day, and mostly indoors on a treadmill (although I prefer to run outdoors).

I think my best time was 22mins, but generally 30mins has been a good pace for me. I weigh about 250lbs so I'm not by any means fast.

Almost all of it has either been barefoot or in minimalist shoes.

I guess it just became part of my daily routine to get up have a coffee or two and go for a run. I used to have a treadmill in my office at work so I'd usually have a run at work before seeing my first client.

I've recently been thinking about what has compelled me to keep running everyday as it has been a struggle at times. I guess I always felt that I was on a righteous path, and I often said to myself, "you can't give up now, you've put in way too much work to let it all go down the drain."

Great FB group, by the way, I love posting and reading other peoples posts.

The streak now stands at eight years. I never expected it would last as long as it has.

The past year was another decent one although I continue to slow down in regards to my pace (now averaging between 10- & 10.5-minute miles). Age has become a factor (I turned 66 in August) & I battle arthritis on a daily basis (especially in my knees & hips). However, my mileage increased for the second year in a row & I set a personal best for annual mileage in 2018 logging 2515 miles.

My daily average mileage for the duration of my streak now stands at 6.39 (last year at this point it was 6.16). Over all I've logged 20,732 miles since I ran my first mile in August of 2010. My goal is to run enough miles to equal the distance around the world (24,500 at the equator).

I've given up racing for the most part having run my last 5K in May of 2018 (always been a 5K kind of guy). In that race I came in at 29:42 & that was close enough to the thirty minute mark for me.

I continue to run my lion's share of miles on a treadmill, but of course much prefer running outside when I can (when time & weather permit). Although I've averaged well over six miles a day for the past eight years, I've never run more than 8 miles in a day. I truly admire marathon runners & honestly can't imagine running that kind of distance without hitting the wall.

KEN JOHNSON'S STREAK HITS 10 YEARS

Ken Johnson's streak hit 10 years on October 18, 2019. Ken, now 78, had 4 previous streaks. 600 days, ending in 1993 for foot surgery; 1,811 days ending in 2002 for an appendectomy and 2,483 days ending in 2009 for a knee issue.

During his current 10-year streak, he has competed in 673 races, including 1-50 miler, 7-50K's, 50 marathons, 75 half marathons and 45-10 milers. Also, during the last 10 years, he ran in 16 states and 69 Texas cities. He made it through torn hamstrings, several surgeries, a bunch of sinus infections and other ailments.

Now, he is going for 20. Thanks for all you do for the streaking community.

PATRICIA HENGEL'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

This is the third time I've had a running streak; the first two ended in injuries. I was recovering from an injury when I decided to try a third time. I started my third streak on October 16, 2016, and took it slow.

I have run over 5,337 miles, completed three triathlons, ran various local races, several half marathons, and qualified well enough to get into Boston!!!

I've run through all sorts of weather - snow, rain, unbearable heat and humidity, but not hail (thank goodness!!). I ran in socks around my neighborhood once when I was too lazy to put on shoes.

I am well supported by my friends and family; it's become a way of life at this point, and I don't feel right until I have gotten a run for the day. I have gotten up long before work, at 3:30 in the morning, so I could run, have run after work, and have run more miles between night shifts than I ever thought I could.

Running has seen me through joy, heartbreak, gotten me out of bed when all I wanted to do was stay under the covers, has calmed my anger and let me pet more dogs than I can remember.

I don't know what I would do if I couldn't run every day anymore. I've talked to people who said that they should run, that I have inspired them to run, even had a woman who said I'd see her out running within a few weeks of us talking. It's an honor to be able to get out and talk to people who I'd never get to meet if I didn't run.

Rise. Rejoice. Run. 9 More Miles. Today [30 October 2019] marks 4 years for my run streak of at least a mile a day. Over that time, I have run 9,194 miles with an average of 6.30 miles a day. I am thankful for the strong support of my family and friends. This year is really special as God brought Dennene Huntley Pangle into my life. The best miles this year have been when we have been side by side and when I am chasing her down a hill or trail.

KAITLYN GUNDLACH'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I've just reached my two years of streak running. While my first year had some close calls and adventures (running a mile at 11:30pm in London after a delayed train station pick up is one highlight), my second year was much calmer. The only craziness was just a few weeks ago, when I ran a 17:30 mile at the height of a stomach virus. No one, including me, thought I could get out the door.

Streak running has given me a stronger relationship with running, and I couldn't be happier with my decision two years ago to start streaking. The picture attached is of me, as Forrest Gump, during a Halloween 5k. Happy running!

STAN ROBERTS' STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

My name is Stan Roberts. I started running 6.5 years ago at age 47. I ran my first half marathon 10/20/13 and have been hooked ever since. I had been following a few friends running their streak and decided then that I would probably never get fast enough to qualify for Boston but I could run at least 1 mile everyday. I remember watching Cal Ripken play day in and day out and thought yes this is for me. I had no idea that I would make it 6 years but here I am. Not stopping, just keeping moving forward.

So today's run completed my 6th year of running at least 1 mile every day. I have run 10448.91 miles in that time. 17-5k's, 2-7k's, 4-10k's, 1-15k, 12-half marathons, 1-25k, 11-marathons, 8 ultras with 100k being longest.

The last 2 1/2 years have been very challenging for many reasons, job change, divorce to name the biggies. I've also fought injury and plain fatigue. I may or may not have arthritis in my knee, but I'm not letting this deter me.

I was waiting to this point to decide to end it or not. I guess that for now it will continue and I will try to back to a better routine and get my mileage back up.

I need to thank all of you, so many have encouraged me over the years. Amy Lynn has been a rock in keeping me going when those passing moments of wanting to quit cross my mind.

So here's to many more miles to come.

I began my streak 2 years ago after completing my 7th marathon. I wanted to challenge myself but was burnt out on training for races. Streaking has been a perfect motivator to my love for running. No matter what is going on in my life my running is there for me. I have no plans on ending my streak... going to just continue until I can't. BILL SHIRES' STREAK HITS 33 YEAR

As this year winds down, I couldn't be happier with where my running is going. I have completed numerous trail 10ks, 1/2 marathons, marathons, 50Ks, 50 milers, and in just a few weeks, I will be attempting my first 100 miler.

Running consistently every day has been the key to making this happen. I have already crested over 3200 miles this year, and I still have 2 more months to complete.

Crossing my fingers, my running streak never ends, because I don't know what I would do with all the extra time.

I have had a sports hernia and bilateral adductor strain since June. DAN PEREIRA'S STREAK HITS 29 YEARS

I am running two times a day now. Between 3-5 miles in the morning with hills and up tempo, then a easy 5k at night. I did a 3k race a few weeks ago in 11:17.

I was a fluffy 152lbs a few months ago, 135lbs in HS, 140lbs most of my adult life. Now 142lbs.

My Philippine wife stepped off the plane November 14, 2018 at 5'3" and 152lbs. Her idea of running was get tired, stop, and take pictures, rest, then trot a little bit, rest, pics - you get what I am saying. I introduced her to her first club 5k race. Now she has not missed a day since stepping off the plane, can't stand being passed, is 125lbs, won her 45-year old age group in the 3k and is about ready to be one year without a missed day. What a wife.

Well I hope you are feeling well. My aches and pains are there. I don't sleep much but keep good fresh shoes on my feet when I run. I figure I'll last at least past my 30 year streak mark but one never knows.

Alan Foulds

ALAN FOULDS' STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

As I'm sure is true with many of the folks on the list, I did not plan to become a streak runner.

I have been at this sport since 1989, and I set many goals along the way: My first race, my first half, first marathon, first BOSTON Marathon, and so forth.

Throughout this time, I was a fairly disciplined person, hitting the roads three to five times a week, depending on what I had coming up.

One warm day in November 2015, with no immediate and obvious milestones ahead and my times slowing down a bit, I scouted around for some motivation. I pored over my meticulous running logs (something most of you can relate to) and found that my longest stretch of continued running was 32 days. I didn't consider it a streak at the time. It was just the way it had worked out, but it gave me a new goal.

I set out to run 33 days uninterrupted by weather, family and work obligations, or anything else life could throw in the way. On Dec. 10 that mission was accomplished, but I thought I might as well keep going until Christmas, which I was sure would stop the streak. But it didn't.

An unexpected change in a family holiday tradition left me with a lot of free time that Dec. 25th. By chance the temperature was a very nice 72 degrees F (a rarity in my north of Boston town) so I kept going. Since I was on vacation from work, there was no reason not to finish out the year.

Then on Jan. 1, I thought, "why not enter my third calendar year?" Then, of course, the 100-day mark was on the horizon, then six months, then one year, 1,000 days, and, before you know it, the streak is now four years long.

I never would have thought it possible. When I was first asked how I keep it up I did some deep reflection. Then I answered "It's become like brushing my teeth or shaving. It's now just automatic."

Actually, I find it easier to run every single day than, say, three or four times a week. All the excuses are gone. It's never too cold or too hot or too rainy or snowy, or too nice out.

At my age I realize that I'll never catch the Ron Hills or Jon Sutherlands of the world, but my streak is just that - my streak. Someday life will get in the way, but for now, I see no stopping.

ANTONIO CIPOLLONE'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Before I ever knew about Running Streak USA, what started out as a goal on February 23, 2014 to run 7 straight days, soon turned into 14 days, then a month, and my goal kept moving up. After 7 months I wanted to see if others had daily streaks and after doing some research I discovered this website with many dedicated runners that have been doing it for years.

Even though I had been running every day for 7 months, by the time I discovered Running Streak USA, there were days I did not have a continuous 1-mile run. So on Oct 3, 2014 I decided to start the required continuous mile run every day so I could complete a full year, and get on the list. Since 2010, I have done several half marathons and 2 full marathons, but running every day and starting a long-term streak was never a goal. Now I have made it 5 years never missing a day!!

A long daily running streak is not easy and takes commitment but so worth it when you accomplish something so difficult. Over the years there were many times I felt the urge to stop when sick, in pain, or dealing with sciatica, but still I pushed through and learned that often I felt better while running! So...I run. I am a Clydesdale runner (a nice way of referring to a 200+ pound runner) and this streak is totally surreal, especially since I was never the typical running type. When people hear how long I have been running they always ask, "How are your knees?"....and would say "I feel great and that it's a good thing" because as a Clydesdale, one would think there would be issues with all the pounding on my legs and feet and running so many miles every day. Running daily is now just something I do as part of my morning routine.

I must credit Mark Washburne for helping me keep the streak alive. On my 2-year anniversary, it had been one of those days when life happens, and I wasn't thinking about running, so I forgot and that evening I was checking my emails and there was a message from Mark congratulating me on my anniversary. That reminded me to run, and kept the streak alive. Thanks Mark!

Another time I went to bed only to wake up at 11:50 pm realizing I had not run! So, still sleepy, I hit the treadmill to get my run in before midnight...a close call. I also would like to thank my wonderful fiancé' Toni for all the support she provides during my streak!

I initially wanted to run for 7 straight days, and never dreamed I would (or could) run for over 5 years never missing a day! But here I am, still....running.

NICK CAPERNA'S STREAK HITS 12 YEARS

Yes, the streak remains intact. A dozen years seems like a long time. But, of course, compared to some of the legendary streaks on the list 12yrs is like a long weekend. ;)

The last couple of years have been a bit more challenging only because my life has expanded a bit. We have a son now (18m) and as any parent knows, priorities shift. A good thing. A full life is a Happy One!

My long term goal is to extend the streak another 10 years or so until he's able to run with me occasionally. (Helps fight off the impending "dad-bod" as well.)

Thanks again for checking in. This group has been a terrific influence on my own personal dedication to this particular dogma. Keep moving forward.

I've been running for many years, on and off since 1993. My only marathon was Chicago in 2008. The race that got me into distance running was the River Bank Run in Grand Rapids, MI, the largest 25K race in the country. I ran it for the first time in 2008 (and decided if I could complete 25K, I could train for a marathon...).

My running has had its highs and lows since then. After completing the River Bank 25K in May 2018, I knew I needed something to keep me motivated over the summer (my running buddy had plans to be out of town for multiple weeks that year). By chance, I came across an article about the Runner's World Summer Run Streak and decided to give it a go.

I started my first streak on Memorial Day 2018, with the goal to run at least one mile every day until Labor Day. Friends and family thought me a little bit crazy, but I found that it worked for me! I continued that streak through the month of September 2018 during the Million Mile Challenge, raising money for Alex's Lemonade Stand Fund.

In early October, I came down with a bad cold, and decided to let the streak go at 136 days, thinking I had accomplished my goal but that I'd surely continue running "most" days. After no runs for almost 2 weeks, I decided streaking works well for me and started a new streak on October 20, 2018. This time, with the goal of making it to 365!

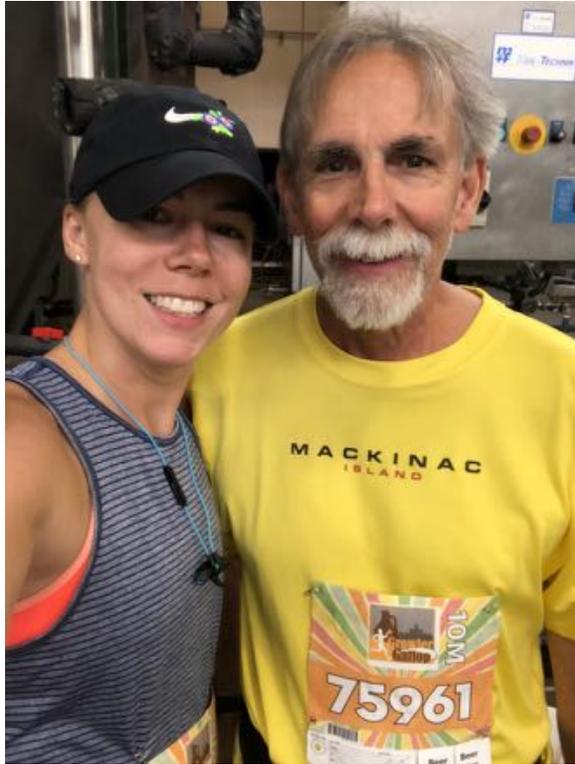

Last winter had its moments of brutal cold running here in Michigan (I occasionally resorted to the treadmill), but I love the adventure of running outside in almost any kind of weather. I'm fortunate to live in a little beach town on Lake Michigan, where there is always something to see and lots of great routes to mix it up.

Now that I've met my initial goal of 365, my next goal is to see how long I can keep this streak going...

BILL HOWES' STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

Yes, my streak is still intact. It's hard to believe it's been 8 years.

I made it over the last year without any major injuries or illnesses. Very fortunate.

I ran a few races over the last year and just most recently ran the Atwater Growler Gallop 10 miler in Detroit with my daughter Lauren (pictured with me). We had a great run and the beers went down well!!

I also visited the 3 national parks in Florida with my wife Beth in January during the polar vortex.

A little over a year ago while running with my Tuesday night run group wearing my usrs singlet with the Streak anniversary on the back I was approached by someone who turned out to be a fellow streaker Patrick Foley from Grand Rapids, Michigan. That was pretty neat. I had never met a fellow streaker before up until that point.

During January's visit south I had the pleasure of running with Robert (The Raven) Kraft and completed his daily 8 miler with him and others. What a blast!! If you complete the run with him (all on the beach I might add), he gives you a nickname. I am now the dubbed the "Electrical Connection!" In my opinion, his streak is the most awesome of all streaks and I told him that. It's one thing to run every day but to run 8 miles every day for almost 45 years - wow!!

When I started my 1st streak in June 2010 (lasted a little over a year), Thomas Watkins of Virginia Beach was the last name that was just added to the list at 245th place. Now, in a little over 9 years it has skyrocketed to over 1600 (US only) - Incredible!!

I still feel really fortunate to be able to do this and wish the best of luck to you and all of the running streakers. I truly enjoy reading their stories.

Hello everyone! My 5k a day run streak is 4 years old...and I couldn't be prouder. During my streak I have lost nearly 90 lbs. I have also completed 24 full marathons in 24 different states, and 23 half marathons, and lots of other races.

I have become the self-proclaimed Forrest Gump of Concord NC. The mayor of my town has even proclaimed the anniversary of my run streak as Jeff Thomas run Forrest run day!!

I love running so much that I quit my factory job of 23 years and opened my own running store named "Streakers." You can find it on Facebook.

I have used the streak to promote group runs and 5ks to raise money for charities. Runners World Magazine did a story on me for their website, and the local news did too.

The best part of it all are the amazing people and friends that I have met along the way. My journey is just beginning. I will continue my 5k a day run streak as long as these legs will carry me. If any of my fellow Streakers are ever in Concord NC stop by Streakers and say hello.

HEATHER BENZ'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 449 DAYS

I had a terrible fail yesterday [9 November 2019] and forgot to run. Not the whole day - I planned to run before my daughter's travel hockey game or in between her game and her birthday celebration which was her request to go to watch the Princeton women's hockey game, but ran out of time to run both times and then planned to go that evening. We took a few friends to the Princeton game and everyone came back to our house after. By the time everyone left, we all went to bed and I simply forgot that I hadn't run.

So I have to retire my streak at 449 and I am starting today with day 1 of a new streak.

I am still streaking but don't have any accomplishments to report. I have rheumatoid arthritis, and after ten years of it being dormant, it's slowly flared back up. I'm so pleased to have completed the third year of my running streak. When I started this as an early Thanksgiving to New Year's challenge, I had no plans to extend it beyond that period. But like so many of our best habits, my daily running has grown into something I both love and need to do every day.

I've been blessed to avoid major illness and injury. I've had some lowlights--running the day after completing the Marine Corp Marathon--and some highlights--running around the international terminal in the Toronto airport before a flight to Japan as my work colleagues gaped. And I've tried to keep challenging myself: this year, I've averaged a 5k on my runs. I'm not sure what next year will bring...but I'm confident it will include the continuation of my streak.

According to my spreadsheets, I've run 2314 streak miles. My hardest run was this year - when I ran while suffering from the flu- luckily either the flu vaccine or the Tamiflu probably lightened the illness because although hard it wasn't totally unbearable. I hope to keep streaking as long as possible.

LISA CRANDALL'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

As of today [20 November 2019], I have been running everyday for 2 years. At first it was minimum of 1 mile. But this year it's a minimum of 1 mile and a minimum of 15 minutes, because the coach challenged me further.

Ironically, I am feeling under the weather today but I did not let that stop me from getting up at 3:30 am and getting my 15 minutes. Streaking has taught me so many things about what we can do versus what we refuse to do. It is kept me active even during injury / illness times. "Maintain the base."

It has also brought me some great friendships. Those who gave me moral /motivation support, came out to run with me, had to wait for me, or even offered to do something for me, so I could get my run in (like carry my backpack so I can run in the woods).

Streaking has also taught me doing it takes less effort to do than making excuses for not doing it. This is about me, not about anyone else. Only you can decide what works for you. Streaking definitely works for me. Thank you Coach for challenging me.

I hit my 2-year anniversary today [21 November 2019] and what a great 2 years it has been. I am so excited to hit this milestone, but my feet are also really tired. Struggling with heel bursitis has made some days difficult, but the benefits outweigh the pain.

Running everyday has really helped me maintain my mental health. I deal with health anxiety issues and a daily run has really solidified that my body is stronger than my health fears cause me to believe.

I am an ambassador for an organization named Still I Run. It is a group focused on using running as a tool to cope with mental health issues such as depression and anxiety. Discussing my streak running and mental health on social media and in our Facebook group has been a valuable tool in breaking the stigma surrounding mental health.

DIANE PETERSON'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

My streak began on Nov. 21, 2017, so I will reach my 2-year anniversary when I run today [21 November 2019]. I also plan to continue for at least one more year, assuming I have no injuries or other potential disruptions. I usually run at least 4 miles a day, but will average between 35 and 40 miles per week.

The toughest times are usually due to winter weather, so I purchased a treadmill to allow me to more easily continue my streak. Before I had the treadmill, I did run one 1-mile run in 6" of snow, running back and forth across my property with my dog and keeping track with my Garmin watch. The dog loves to run, but I'm sure the back and forth was somewhat confusing for him.

Another difficult time is during the summer when we make a 3-day drive (2000 miles) across the country, and then back again a few weeks later. We generally drive 14 - 16 hours per day. If I do not run early in the morning, I end up running 1 mile late at night (10 - 11pm) in a strange town. So I will take the dog, which helps us both stretch our legs after a day in the car.

I think the hardest days to maintain the streak were after running the 2019 Revel Mt. Hood Marathon which has a 5000' elevation drop, so my quads were trashed for at least a week. This race was also the day before our annual long drive. I still managed 1 mile a day the days of driving and also a few days after, but at a very slow pace.

Running has always been a part of my life, though I didn't really come to love it until I was an adult. Most of my original running goals were based on how "fast I could go," but in 2018 I realized that looking at it that way was giving me anxiety. I wanted to revamp my relationship with running so I wrote down the goal to run streak for 365 days. That mark has recently come and gone, and I don't plan on stopping any time soon! KRISTA FREITAG'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

4 Years. 12 countries. 3 continents. 26 states (I think). At least 4375 miles (plus some more as I didn't count every day in 2016). 1461 days of at least a mile a day.

I can't lie and tell you it's easy. There are some days that I don't want to do it. I definitely haven't always run it all straight (sometimes there are running/walking intervals).

It's become one of my favorite ways to explore a new city and see what amazing things I get to come upon!

I know that people think I'm crazy - that's a common thing that even my own mother tells me, but it's something that helps keep me moving and going. We are so blessed with the bodies that God has given us, and running is one way that I am able to keep myself not only physically happy, but mentally as well.

When I wasn't able to log the miles that I normally do while I was concussed, I struggled majorly - to the point of having to be put back on anti-depressants because that is the power of exercise. It does the same thing that medication can do.

It doesn't have to be running, but find something that's going to help you get by and can be your release when life gets difficult. God has given us so much, and it is our job to take care of our bodies to continue to be able to serve Him!

PERRY ROMANOWSKI'S STREAK HITS 11 YEARS

On November 18, I completed my 11th year of my running streak. All of the runs have been done outside in any weather (and I live in Chicago so this has been super challenging at times).

My runs have also featured juggling which means whenever I run, I'm also juggling.

During the streak I've had my fastest marathon (3:21) and put on over 15,000 miles. I've run on 4 continents and in nearly 2 dozen countries. I also listen to books while running and have finished >300 books during my runs.

I originally was only going to go for 1001 days but when I got there, I didn't feel like stopping. I have no plans to stop now.

Thanks for all the support this community has given!

JEANETTE WESTRUP'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,079 DAYS

I had to have micro fracture knee surgery and am not able to run for 6-9 months. I ran right to the end. I ran my last mile the morning of surgery.

CARRIE CHISHOLM'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

My 3-year streak anniversary snuck up on me! I'm still going strong running at least 2 miles a day. Since I started my streak in November 2016, I've moved up from running marathons to ultras, and have completed 8-50Ks, 2-40 milers and 2-50 milers in that time. I'm also doing more trail running, and thanks in part to my streak, I ran 2,018 miles in 2018 and I am on track to run 2,019 miles this year!

JUSTIN SPENCER-YOUNG'S STREAK HITS A YEAR

Today, 24th November 2019, is my runaversary. 1 year complete and I have just registered my streak on the website.

A running friend of mine challenged me a year ago to "run every day 'till Christmas." I did that and then thought, "I wonder if I could do another month." Before long I was 90 days in. One morning on a run with Paul Theron (a registered streak runner), he inspired me to keep going and running every day for a year became my target. When I looked forward at the challenge that I has set myself it seemed overwhelming. When I look back it feels somewhat arbitrary. I just got out and ran, each day. Just like I'm going to run tomorrow. No big deal. A lot of small achievements compound. Just like compound interest, compound running is a thing.

ELLEN KENDALL'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

My streak continues. One huge highlight of my year was having the opportunity to run the Athens Marathon-The Authentic. I won a trip through work and spent the weekend with 68 colleagues from all over the world that share my same passion for running. Many ran the marathon, it was such an amazing opportunity.

I continue to share many miles with fellow streakers Ann Davenport and Lisa Millam. Here's to many more miles.

THE FINISH LINE

By: Mark Washburne

The big news from your running streak association this quarter is that we have added a “Statistics” page to our website. The new page was the work of Loren Long, the owner of LL Digital Design and Development, who also designed our new updated website. Through Loren’s efforts, our members can now see on a single page various statistics including the current total streaks in the world, the athletes with the longest streaks, the oldest streak runners by age, breakdown of streak runners by gender, athletes with the most certified streaks, total streaks using our 5-year categories, total number of streaks by state in the United States, and total number of streaks by country. Please click here to see our new SRI/USRSA statistics page: <https://www.runeveryday.com/statistics.php>

As our running streak association was founded in the United States in 2000 and did not begin listing streaks outside the U.S.A. until 2011, it is not surprising that the vast majority of registered streaks still come from America. Looking at our new statistics page, we have now registered nearly 2,550 streaks from the U.S.A., including nearly 1,650 active streaks, and nearly 900 retired streaks. Despite the late start, the exciting news is that our international contingent continues to grow with each quarterly newsletter. Looking again at our new statistics page, we now list streaks from 44 different countries, including over 370 running streaks outside the U.S.A., that breaks down to over 280 active international streaks and nearly 90 retired streaks. The top country on our international list is the United Kingdom with 99 streaks (68 active, 31 retired), followed by Canada with 68 streaks (52 active, 16 retired), and Sweden with 49 streaks (44 active, 5 retired).

Further down on our international list, we have now registered 7 streaks (5 active, 2 retired) from the Republic of Ireland. With a population of little less than 5 million, Ireland is tied for 11th place on our country list with the Republic of India, who also has 7 registered streaks (5 active, 2 retired) and whose population is over 1.3 billion people. In our Winter 2013-2014 TSR, we featured on our cover Ketan Salamon Nadar, who was the first athlete to register a streak from India. It is only fitting in this Winter 2019-2020 TSR issue, therefore, that we celebrate Ireland’s top streak runners, Mairead and Tom Blennerhasset, with a cover story.

Before this year’s (2019) Boston Marathon, I had the pleasure to meet Mairead and Tom Blennerhasset. Expecting rain for the marathon, my wife Diane and I made a last-minute stop at a running store near the finish line to buy rain gear when I was stopped by Tom, Ireland’s top male streak runner, who noticed the streak association sweatshirt I was wearing. Tom then introduced Diane and me to his wife, Mairead, Ireland’s top women streak runner. You can read about the Blennerhassets’ story on page 5 of this issue.

Speaking of the Boston Marathon, I squeaked out a qualifying time to enter Boston in 2021 at the 2019 Marine Corp Marathon by a mere 55 seconds on a very rainy day in Washington, DC. As I move into a new age group by April 2021, my Boston qualifying time is 4:05:00 and my time at Marine Corp was 4:04:05. Last year, I had a similar close call trying to qualify for Boston by needing a time of 3:50:00 and finishing the 2018 Philadelphia Marathon in 3:48:08 – a difference of 112 seconds. My closest almost misses from making my Boston time, however, still remain the 2006 New York City Marathon and the 2008 Chicago Marathon where I had to sprint to the finish at both and was under my BQ time by a mere 7 seconds in NYC and 3 seconds in Chicago. As it turned out, those 7 and 3 seconds ended up being the reason why I was accepted into both the 2008 and 2009 Boston Marathons and why my streak of running Boston now stands at 15 in-a-row with the possibility of adding both 2020 and now 2021 to the list.

Looking ahead, both Diane and I plan to be in Miami at the end of December to celebrate Robert “Raven” Kraft’s streak reaching 45 years on New Year’s Eve. My own running streak hits 30 years the day before Raven’s big event. If available, please join us in Florida for both running celebrations.

As always, I want to wish everyone good luck as we each run the roads and trails – every day!
