MEET ELLEN WESTFELT – SWEDEN’S TOP STREAK RUNNER

By: Ellen Westfelt

I’m a 42-year old mother of two, and I work as an ultrarunning coach in Sweden and internationally at the Ultrarunning Academy (ultrarunningacademy.com). I love big challenges and I’ve finished many tough ultra trail races, e.g. the UTMB, Le Diagonale des Fous and recently a 200-mile race in Sweden called Halland Ultra Beach Trail. I’ve never been keen on fighting for top positions, however, I love the adventure and the personal experience of racing — as well as managing equipment, energy, hydration and mental games in the best way possible. I have been on a consecutive running streak for the past 7 years and, a bit surprisingly, I think that my running streak is an excellent foundation for ultrarunning training.

The reason for why I started my running streak was because I found myself getting performance anxiety around racing. To me, exercise had always been something positive and fun and I didn’t like how my thoughts started to take the fun out of running. So I came up with the idea of limiting myself to only running 20 minutes per day. If I managed to jog for 20 minutes a day, it would mean that I had fulfilled my daily training dose. And for it to work, it was important that I run every day. When running every day, I wouldn’t have the choice not to run, and therefore in a strange way decreasing the risk of getting anxious about missing out on training.

On September 4th 2013 I started my Runstreak. From the beginning, I didn't allow myself to run for more than 20 minutes. 20 minutes slow jog, nothing more. And I celebrated every day, every completed 20-minute session was celebrated with great satisfaction. I had passed the task! I used this strategy for about a month before I allowed myself to run a little longer. What was strange was that as soon as I had set up the framework for what my training would look like — 20 minutes a day — my performance anxiety disappeared. Sure, sometimes it was tough enough to even get that short session in, but once I did, the task was completed and just accomplishing it was enough.

I advocate that you set a goal for 20 minutes of running per day, instead of 1 mile. Of course, you have to complete 1 mile per day during this time as well, but when you run for 20 minutes, you almost always complete 1 mile with ease. The reason for my 20-minute rule is that I want to avoid running too fast — I wouldn't like to be tempted to run my mile as fast as possible, just because I was in a hurry. The time span of 20 minutes is always the same, no matter how fast you run. To me, this is an important aspect since the main reason for my running streak is to feel more relaxed and at peace with myself and my running — without judgement and thoughts about "good or bad."

Since then, I have continued racing every now and then, and I also do some complementary training (e.g. yoga, strength training, hiking etc.), but the foundation for my training is still my running streak. When I started my running streak, I didn't know any other Swedes that were running every day. My husband and I run an ultrarunning community and company called Pace on Earth (www.paceonearth.se), and since we have a rather big following on social media, many runners soon got inspired by my running streak. During the first years, there were a few people that tried the concept, and some of them are still running, but lately the interest for runstreak in Sweden has grown quite a lot. Every January, for the past three years, we've arranged a runstreak challenge on Facebook, where we have invited runners to try out the concept. During this month, I have been the mentor in this group, posting live videos every day and discussing different topics related to running every day. In the challenge we've had 500-800 participants every year and many have kept on running beyond the first month. We sell T-shirts and headovers with the text "I'm on a #runstreak." <https://paceonearth.runon.se/sv/runstreak-klader>

We also manage a big Facebook group called Runstreak Sverige (Runstreak Sweden) <https://www.facebook.com/groups/runstreaksverige/>, which currently has almost 4000 members. Not everyone has an active running streak at the moment, but most of our members do. Many start over again and again after having had to stop for some reason — injury, sickness or just everyday life getting in the way. We advocate that being on a runstreak is an important part of a healthy lifestyle, much more than trying to hit a big number of days in a row. It's better to start over than to risk health. We believe that the concept of runstreak is a great way to get into healthy habits and many people who love being on a runstreak are people who have hated running in the past. The idea of running for a short time every day makes you feel free and happy, and it helps get rid of performance anxiety.

In 2019, one of our Swedish runstreakers Daniel Karlsson published a book about Runstreak, where I have written a chapter about my runstreak as well. The book was very well received. <https://shop.whipmedia.se/produkt/runstreak/>

Both Daniel Karlsson and I have been invited to a lot of podcasts, radio- and tv-shows to talk about our runstreaks and this too has made people aware of the concept. I hope that many more will understand the beauty of running for a short time every day, as the foundation for a healthy lifestyle!

Sole Searching
By: Scott Ludwig

My nature has always been to overdo it; running proved to be no exception. I've been trying to ease up on my running for as long as I can remember. Until recently – 42 years later – I didn't have any success. I failed, too many times to count.

But after all that time, I believe that's finally about to change. In fact, I'm almost certain of it.

My son Josh was in third grade when he said to my good friend Al that when he grew up, he wanted to be 'just like dad.' It was the gift that keeps on giving; I never lost sight of those words spoken from the heart of an eight-year old boy. I remind Al to this day how much I appreciated him for telling me.

Those words inspired me to be the best runner I possibly could. I began training harder than ever before - running further and faster year after year – and became good enough to earn a spot on the prestigious Atlanta Track Club’s Masters Men’s team. Josh, a runner as well, ran his first race at the age of six. Over the years, he and I ran more than 140 races together and I’ll be the first to admit: he made an appearance at the awards’ ceremony considerably more often than his dear old dad.

Although I didn’t have Josh’s natural talent, I found a way to finish every major race on my bucket list – not so much for myself, but rather so that one day Josh would have stories to tell children of his own about their grandfather.

The year I turned 40, I started a tradition I thought would make for an interesting addition to Josh’s repertoire of tales: I would run my age in miles on my birthday every five years. Forty miles at 40, 45 at 45, 50 at 50 and so on. Josh told me he wanted to carry on the tradition, just like dad. Only in his case, he wanted to start his tradition when he turned 35.

Addiction is a terrible thing. I understand addiction, at least a little. Mine has always been running: I could never seem to run enough miles. While it’s not the healthiest addiction in the world, it pales in comparison to the addiction that terrorized my son for years; an addiction he ultimately paid for with his life.

I honestly thought I’d cut back on my running when I reached various milestones: 100 marathons; 100,000 miles; 200 marathons; 150,000 miles. But nothing did the trick; instead, I kept raising the ante. I ran 60 miles when I turned 60; several months later I ran for 60 hours. Straight. I just couldn’t let go of the words spoken a long time ago by an eight-year old boy: ‘I want to be just like dad.’

I’ve always run for the same reasons as most everyone else: health, fitness, camaraderie, competition, peace of mind. But the fact that I truly enjoyed it kept me going more than anything else. Or so I thought.

Recently I noticed I wasn’t looking forward to my runs like I once did. I wasn’t running nearly as well as before. Something had changed, but I didn’t know what. Then one day I looked closely at my running log and it was very clear: my life as a runner ended on March 27, 2020 – the day Josh succumbed to a drug overdose.

After some serious soul searching, it dawned on me that the reason I continued to push myself to the brink of exhaustion – day after day – was to make Josh proud. Josh, a runner himself, understood and appreciated what it took to put in countless hours and endless miles on the road. I always hoped that one day, he would be able to pass along the stories of our running adventures to his children; to keep our memories alive.

But suddenly Josh was gone. There would be no children to hear the stories about a father, a son and the sport they both loved. When Josh died – something I’m not sure I’ll ever be able to say out loud – something inside of me died as well.

It wasn't until October 21, 2020 – Josh's birthday – I did what I felt I had to do to put my life as a runner to rest. Although it had only been seven months since he was gone, it felt like I'd aged 20 years. It was time.

On the day Josh would have turned 35, two close friends joined me in running 35 miles in his memory. I know in my heart that Josh would have run them with us, if only he could. He told me so a long time ago, back when he was still a little boy. When he wanted to be just like dad.

Many others – several friends, many others I've never met - joined us throughout the day and ran a few miles in Josh's memory; many more did so virtually - all over the world. Together, we ran enough miles to get us from one side of the country to the other - and halfway back again. I've written – many times, in fact – that runners are some of the finest people I know.

On Josh's special day, they proved me right.

My wife and I received many wonderful messages of sympathy and support throughout the day. While I would love to be able to present all of them, I only have space for one:

*I carried Josh in my thoughts on this morning's run.
When I got home to my chronically cranky son, I about lost it.
But then we got our first snowflakes of the season – I am taking this as a sign from Josh to lighten up and be grateful, despite how challenging parenthood can be.
Sending love and light.*

I can't thank you enough, Jillian Farland.

I purposely wasn't counting my mileage this year, hoping it would help me to cut back. After running on Josh's 35th birthday, I totaled the daily entries in that running log I mentioned earlier and discovered my lifetime mileage was now up to 157,799. I couldn't help but think that Josh would see the humor in that, because he knew how much I liked round, even numbers. I accepted the number as a sign; a sign that Josh was looking out for me and saying 'It's OK, dad; you can rest now.'

May you rest in peace, son. We'll run together one day; of this I am sure.

RUNNING WITH BILL RODGERS – “THE KING OF THE ROADS”

By: Dave Dial

Since this tale transpired over the course of forty plus years, I feel borrowing an excerpt from the introductory script of the Steve Prefontaine movie 'Without Limits' is appropriate. Namely, "Like Plato and his tale of the world's creation, I won't say absolutely this is the truth but I will say, it is a likely story..."

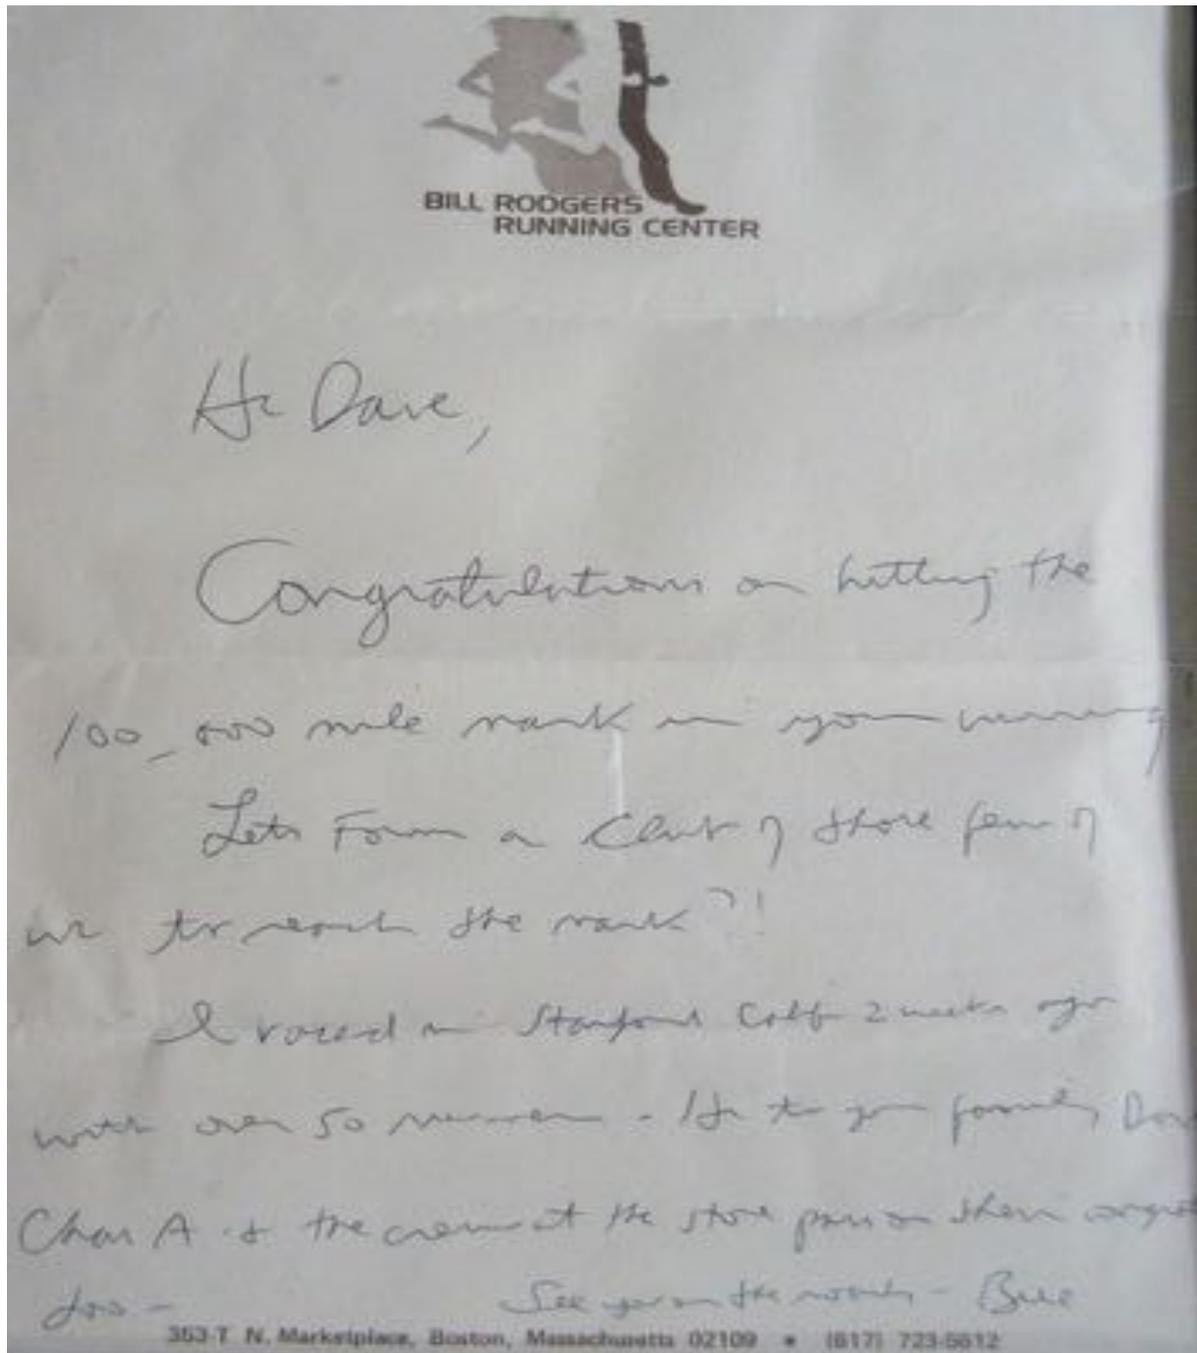

I traded several emails this past summer with the legendary Bill Rodgers that pertained not to my lifetime running mileage total but to his.

Regressing a moment, I first met Bill in 1978 at age 17 when my parents rewarded me with a trip to Boston as my high school graduation present. After having read about the recently opened Bill Rodgers Running Center, on the Boston Marathon course no less, aspiring teen distance runner that I was, my desire to meet my running hero made Beantown my clear choice in terms of a destination.

On June 2, 1978 I walked into Bill Rodgers Running Center for the first time and no more than ten minutes later, the store's namesake arrived. I introduced myself, asked if I could go for a run with him and wound up running with Bill twice daily during the week I was in Boston, logging 153 miles.

Bill and I have stayed in touch over the years and I've even worked at Bill Rodgers Running Center, up to and through the week of the 2012 Boston Marathon, only months prior to the store closing for good.

When I logged my 100,000th mile in April 1998, I let Bill know the good news. He sent me a congratulatory letter, stating we should form a 100k "Club."

During the ensuing years, I learned Bill had a ballpark figure in mind but wasn't sure exactly how many miles he'd run because he hadn't totalled his log books. Then, a decade or so ago I read where someone asked and he responded he'd run about the same amount as Frank Shorter; somewhere around 150,000 at that point.

In 2019, as I approached 200k, each time I'd give Bill an update he'd say that "one of these days" he was going to go through his logs and total his mileage.

I can't tell you how many times he said that to me, so many in fact that I once, knowing how often he travels by plane to running events, suggested he bring a log(s) and do some inflight tallying. His response, avid reader that he is, was that his air travel served as prime reading time!

Early in 2020 when the pandemic began resulting in race cancellations, Bill used his otherwise travel time to begin revisiting his logs and in early June I began receiving emails from him, the first one reading in part:

"I just totaled 102,000 miles for my 1st 21 years or so Dave. I don't think I'll hit 200,000...really dropped off as I got older; am at age 46 or 47 now."

A couple of weeks later, I received an update:

"I'm at 171k Dave and have '17, '18, and '19 to go plus my HS and college running; which wasn't high mileage (never hit 100 miles a week in college). Think I'll be at 180k or...something to aim for!"

I responded that he had me looking over my shoulder which prompted him to write back: "I think it'll be awhile if ever I hit 200k but I won't be too far behind!"

Days after that:

"I ended at 178,000 Dave...but haven't included my 3 years of low key HS running and 4 years in college...maybe those years would add up to 5000 miles..."

Near mid-July he sent the final update:

"I got 185,000 Dave....don't know if I'll get to 200k."

Now I have to see how Joan (Samuelson, '84 Olympic Marathon Gold Medalist) is doing. Of course she's only 63 in May and has had a drawn out marathon career; so must be near me or you!

In late December 2020 Bill Rodgers will turn 73 years young and, in my mind, the once upon a time "King of the Roads" is still just that and I have no doubt about his reaching 200k, and then some, "one of these days!"

*While Bill Rodgers Running Center closed years ago, the store's website is still operational:
www.billrodgersrunningcenter.com*

Among other things, a transcription of Bill's 1974 log can be found on the website. From a historic standpoint, '74 was the buildup year to Bill's emergence as a World Class runner in early 1975 when he placed 3rd in the World Cross Country Championships and shortly thereafter ran an American Record 2:09:55 for the marathon in his first of four Boston wins.

On a personal note, I recently extended my running streak to 13 years and have now logged 205k plus miles.

Traversing the Tundra – Lunar Option Revisited

By: Steve DeBoer

Long-time streak runners have accumulated an impressive number of life time running miles, as can be seen in the Spring 2020 issue of The Streak Registry, entitled “The 70,000 Mile Club” (and will be updated in the Spring 2021 issue). The mention of having run the equivalent of once around the world at the equator (24,902 miles) elicits responses of “Amazing!” or “Incredible!” from our non-runner friends and acquaintances. But to those of us who have been running at least 20 years, a more envied goal is to have traversed 100,000 miles of tundra.

Among the almost 3500 individuals who have certified active and/or retired running streaks, over 90 have run more than 100,000 miles in their lifetime. For those looking for a greater challenge, the next round figure is 200,000 miles. Has anyone in the past run that many miles? Unfortunately, we don't have written records of the mileage of most of the individuals listed below, but here is speculation about their total mileage.

Charles Walter (Charlie) Hart, b. 1866 – d. Sep. 11, 1954. Claims over 750,000 miles. If he ran 40 years at 4,000 miles/year and 15 years at 3,000, he would have run 205,000. He did not run long distance the first 10 years of his career, begun in 1883, so if he did 15,000 those 10 years, total would be about 220,000.

Arthur F H Newton, b. May 20, 1883 – d. Sep. 7, 1959. Claims 102,735 miles by 1935. If he ran 500/month next ten years and 70/week the next 10 years, his total would be about 200,000. But back then, ultra-runners walked a significant amount of their training miles.

Earl Linwood (Lin) Dilks, b. Sep. 20, 1894 – d. Nov. 8, 1982. Claims 195,855 miles by 1977. If he ran 3 more years, he might have done 200,000.

Ken Baily, b. 1911 – d. Dec. 10, 1993. Claims 157,295 miles by 7-9-75. If he ran 10 more years, he might have done 180,000.

Ted Corbitt, b. Jan. 31, 1919 – Dec. 12, 2007. Claims 200,000 miles, but mostly walking mileage the last 20 years, so running total under 175,000.

Bill Emmerton. b. Nov. 12, 1920 – d. Jul. 10, 2010. Claims over 130,000 miles by 1978. If he ran 10 more years, he might have done 160,000. He switched to walking the last 20 years of his life.

Douglas Alistair Gordon Pirie, b. Feb. 10, 1931 – d. Dec. 7, 1991. Claims 216,000 miles by 1981, over 250,000 before he died. But John Bryant, who knew him during his prime, feels that amount is inflated, whereas Jon Sutherland believed he ran 90-100 miles/week most of his adult life. Will go with 200,000, using 90 miles per week, dropping to 70 miles per week his last decade.

Don Ritchie, b. Jul 6, 1944 - d. Jun 16, 2018. Scottish ultra-runner, who set world records in distances from 50K to 24 hours. He did keep records, logging 208,100 miles from 1962 to 2011.

Some of these past distance runners kept records of their running mileage, but I have not been able to find a record anywhere of it being listed for public review. Before anyone gets crowned the all-time running mileage champion, some sort of record review would need to be done by an unbiased group.

Personally, I have a rather optimistic, possibly unattainable mileage goal. Even before I reached 100,000 miles, I asked myself would it be possible to run the distance to the moon?

The distance from the earth to the moon is about 238,000 miles but it varies by 20,000, depending on the time of month. The perigee (closest approach to Earth) occurs 12-13 times per year. For 2020, the nearest perigee was 221,772 miles on April 7th. Keep in mind that runners are only trying to go from surface to surface, so we need to subtract the radius of each sphere (1080 miles for the moon and 3963 miles for Earth). Of course, if you started your run from Mount Everest, it would be about 6 miles shorter. That calculates out to 216,723 miles from Everest to the lunar surface if you happened to reach the moon on that day (April 7, 2020).

As we know, very few human beings have traveled by spaceship to the moon and only 12 have actually walked on the surface, with Neil Armstrong being the first in 1969 and Harrison Schmitt the last in 1972. Based on my incomplete data of past distance runners, only Charlie Hart might have covered enough miles to reach the moon's surface. However, in viewing the videotape of a 20-mile run he did at age 83, it appears he was walking towards the end, so I am a little suspect of the estimate I made of his total running mileage.

So, what are my chances of making it? If, God willing, I can average 3500 miles/yr for the next 10 years, I would have about 207,000 miles at age 76. In looking over the mileage of fellow streak runners, Dr. Herb Fred is the only one who kept over 3500/yr after age 70, so I don't know how good my odds are of duplicating that. If I could average 3000 miles/yr for the following 4 years, I would be at 217,000 before my 80th birthday. My dad stopped running at age 85 ½, so genetics may be in my favor. Then, after achieving that, I could focus on my other long-term goal, completing a marathon at age 90!

Running around the earth at the equator is a goal of many high mileage runners. For me, I probably need to use all the mileage in my legs just to reach the moon, so take note I skipped the equatorial distance warmup and am heading straight to lunacy, I mean the tallest lunar crater.

Streak runners who recently have or are most likely to reach the moon and when:

Carolyn Mather - now 230,000; averages 7000 per year, reached the moon 2019, age 71.

Craig Davison - now 215,200; averages 2500 per year, will reach moon 2021, age 68.

Dave Dial - now 206,000; averages 6000 per year, will reach moon 2022, age 62.

Richard Westbrook - now 211,800; averages 2500 per year, will reach moon 2022, age 75.

Paul Ladniak - now 212,300; averages 1200 per year, will reach moon 2024, age 78.

Roger Urbancsik - now 194,800; averages 5000 per year, will reach moon 2025, age 68.

Based on their average running mileage over the last 3 years, here are other streak runners who should surpass 190,000 miles by the end of 2030:

Don Slusser (will be age 79) - averaging 1500 miles per year.
197,800 end 2020 - 211,100 end 2030.

Jon Sutherland (will be age 80) - averaging 1200 miles per year.
198,700 end 2020 - 210,700 end 2030.

Bruce Mortenson (will be age 87) - averaging 2100 miles per year.
181,800 end 2020 - 202,800 end 2030.

Reno Stirrat (will be age 75) - averaging 3000 miles per year.
171,500 end 2020 - 201,500 end 2030.

Michael Georgi (will be age 78) - averaging 3000 miles per year.
165,600 end 2020 - 195,600 end 2030.

George Brown (will be age 78) - averaging 2800 miles per year.
167,000 end 2020 - 195,000 end 2030.

Scott Ludwig (will be age 76) - averaging 3500 miles per year.
158,500 end 2020 - 193,500 end 2030.

Simon Laporte (will be age 79) - averaging 2500 miles per year.
166,500 end 2020 - 191,500 end 2030.

Steve Morrow (will be age 67) - averaging 3000 miles per year.
161,000 end 2020 - 191,000 end 2030.

Jim Pearson (will be age 86) - averaging 1400 miles per year.
178,000 end 2020 - 190,700 end 2030

Of this group, Reno Stirrat and Steve Morrow are most likely to reach the moon by age 80.

There are three recent/current long-distance runners who have enough running miles to have circled the equator once before going lunar, 2 of whom are NOT streak runners. One, Dallas Robertson of Iowa, age 64, has run 227,400 miles since keeping a record of his mileage, starting in 1980. He estimates having run 20,000-25,000 miles the previous 4 years. Using the lower estimate, that puts him at over 247,000.

Darryl Beardall, age 84, of California, is listed on one website in 2010 as having run nearly 300,000 miles in his lifetime. It mentioned he had averaged 20 miles, 6 days per week from 1959 to 1993, then decreased to 12-15 miles/day with a job change. Amby Burfoot met and interviewed him several years ago. He and Darryl came up with some yearly mileage estimates. Unfortunately, he has not been able to find his training logs before 2007 to verify how close those estimates are to reality. So, it has been agreed to reduce that estimated running mileage before 2007 by 10%, since we tend to estimate up rather than down. This would give Darryl about 294,000 miles, enough to have run around the earth and make it to the moon. Even if he chose to traverse the lunar tundra's circumference once, he is now heading back to earth. After breaking his hip in January 2017, he put in a lot of miles walking/jogging with a walker and by July was back to running again. However, in April 2018, he sustained an L-4 pinched nerve and has not run since.

That brings us to Dr. Fred, who I earlier mentioned. He kept meticulous records of his daily runs, switching to exclusively treadmill running after being hit by a car running outdoors in his mid-50s. He retired from running in October 2016, age 87, with a total running mileage was 253,010. His last daily streak ended when he was 86, the oldest documented active streak runner ever. If he ran once around the Earth before leaving our atmosphere, he would have reached the moon on February 19, 2011 and completed his run around the moon in 2013. Herb was born June 11, 1929 and died December 30, 2018.

Besides the 90 of us who have surpassed 100,000 miles, almost 100 non-streakers on Amby Burfoot's www.100klifetimemiles.com website has covered that distance while running. Broken down by state (with those who lived in more than one state getting credit for each state they lived in), there are only 7 states with at least ten. MN has 34, CA has 19, PA has 13, and MA has 12. Then come FL, NJ & NY with 10 each and OH with 9. MN is a unique outlier in this running realm, possibly because one needs to run more miles there in the winter before being warmed up.

The hobby of running daily continues to grow exponentially. The current number of active and retired streaks are listed elsewhere in this issue of the Streak Registry and are constantly updated on our web site, www.runeveryday.com/ Here are the numbers over the last 20 years, since the organization was incorporated.

Note that CA has had the most active daily runners of any state until 2015, which makes sense since they have the largest population. Though MN was in the top 5 or 6 since the US Running Streak Association was established, their population is much lower than the others at the top, except MD. For example, CA has 7 times and TX has 5 times as many individuals as MN. What makes MN's recent lead even more amazing is the less-than-ideal weather (think WINTER!) in that state. Recently TX doubled their active number in less than 2 1/2 years, being the first state to reach 130 active in August 2020.

When we look at active streak runners per million residents, MN has been #1 for most of the last 40 years. Keep in mind the rates before 2002 included some who never certified they met the 1 mile minimum. Due to their low populations, such states as WY, ND and DE only needed one person running daily to make the top 6.

PS. There are now 20 former streak runners who have passed away. Latest 3 I discovered were:

1. Jim Lindley, b. Dec 3, 1939 IN - d. Oct 3, 2018. Moorhead, MN. He ran daily from Dec 26, 1978 to Feb 3, 2008 in Fargo, ND (first streak runner identified in ND), IA and IN but never registered after the 1-mile minimum was set. He ran 454 races, including over 30 marathons, among them Boston and London. He is survived by wife, Carol, and 2 daughters.
2. Tomas Loughhead, b. Jun 6, 1940 OH - d. Aug 21, 2017. Zanesville, OH. He lived and worked in Huntsville, AL, running daily from Jul 7, 1990 until about 2014.
3. Stanley J Weissman, b. Jul 6, 1940 NY - d. May 30, 2018. Hilton Head, SC. He lived and worked in New York, registering his running streak after he retired to Miami Beach, which went from Sep 30, 1993 until about 2014.

ERIC THOMPSON'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

It's been a difficult year for many reasons. COVID has taken away so much we took for granted, including lives, careers, and businesses for some. Perspective is useful to remember the suffering others are enduring, when as an urgent care physician, I've seen more COVID cases as time goes on, particularly now after the Sturgis Motorcycle Rally where maskless was the norm. Worse yet, every year after school starts, 2-3 weeks later our healthcare business would always boom with more illness. I am hoping IF masks are worn we can cut down on all transmissible respiratory illness. After all there are 10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 types of viruses out there already, making it a wonder that our species is doing as well as we are.

So when I'm disappointed ANOTHER race is cancelled, perspective is my friend. With nothing to train for, and often working 13-hour shifts, it's been hard to keep the streak alive. However, that's the thing about habits, and I will get up at 4:30 to run without fail as that is my HABIT.

One part of the pandemic that has made this habit easier is the lack of travel. I previously would also work in Las Vegas monthly and COVID stopped that job cold. I miss the travel, but my daily routine is now more consistent. Look for the bright spots.

Change is inevitable, and you never know what tomorrow will bring. As runners, we already have more resilience than the average person. Desire and dedication to an essentially nonessential but inevitably beneficial daily activity provides so much to our wellbeing on several levels. Only those who GO can know... Happy Streaking Everyone!!!

AMY WOULFE'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 663 DAYS

A bike crash and shattered elbow joint ended my first ever running streak. Against good sense, I put in three days of running before the surgeon came down with an official "no running" order. I started a new streak on August 10th with his all-clear. I completed over 1,400 miles this go-round.

IAIN HICKMAN'S STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

Delighted in the last week to celebrate running for 6 years or 2193 consecutive days. It's always an enjoyable endeavor to plan ahead to fit in some of my runs when I'm a married father of three children and work full time as a teacher. Much to the chagrin of my wife who finds the mere mention of running a real bore, it's great to share my running journey with like-minded friends via Strava and follow the journeys of fellow runstreakers.

I've managed to get my son involved in running with me as we do a parkrun every Saturday and run at least once another day of the week. I feel so privileged to have a 10-year-old son who wants to run with me every week and in fact he's completed almost 300 parkruns with me, and I have been led to believe that he is the youngest parkrunner worldwide to the 250 milestone - he was 9 1/2 years old when he got there. I always remind myself that getting the youngsters interested and involved in running is of paramount importance as they are the future of running.

Over the pass few years many a friend and colleague have often asked - why do you run every day? Ever thought of taking a day off? You'll run better if you take a day off.

Well in answer to these common japes I've oft responded with words such as - I love running and discovering places is so much easier on the run, you often find wonderful views you often don't come across on a bike or in the car. Some days there has been (usually after a marathon) how am I going to run tomorrow, just one more day but somehow those trainers find a way onto the feet and out I've trotted once again and then the next day has been easier still and then it's just onwards and upwards to the next challenge. And, on running better all my PBs at every distance have been achieved whilst this streak has been alive - in fact as my memory recalls last year I ran my first sub20 5k in over a year the day after I ran a 30k - so who needs rest days. Experiencing the great outdoors during all seasons of the year is another major enjoyment of mine and as it so happens we are hurtling towards my favourite season of the year - Autumn.

I feel my most noteworthy achievement during this streak isn't the number of days run consecutively, nor the vast number of miles I've run during it (22,300+ miles), but the fact that I've managed to run every day despite being a Type 1 diabetic for over 30 years now. This has been a real challenge especially the days when the diabetes hasn't wanted to play ball. For me, I think it shows what you can achieve with perseverance, determination and a willingness to go with the flow. Surgery 2 years ago nearly ended the streak but I managed to run 2 miles a day at a ridiculously slow pace but it was definitely worth it. It seems well documented how we runstreakers manage to find radical ways around life's adversities in order to keep our runstreaks alive. I'm sure there are plenty of other stories out there to add to mine. Here's to many more days and years of running everyday, which for me is probably the greatest adventure I've ever begun.

GALI MEDYNA JOINS SRI AS LIFETIME MEMBER FROM FINLAND

Back in early February 2018 we had a few days of not-too-bad weather (for Helsinki) and so I went to run outside a couple of days in a row and here I am over 900 days later!

I've faced snowstorms, heat waves, deluges, Mistral winds, and the forever dreaded treadmill workouts on a couple of continents. One thing that hasn't changed is my family and friends asking, "so you're still doing your running thing then?"

I came to running by pure chance. The Marseille-Cassis race goes under a bridge close to where I grew up. We went to watch everyone go by in the early 2000s and the rest is history! I started training shortly afterwards and ran my first Marseille-Cassis the next year and have been back almost every year to face those 10km uphill and 10km downhill.

This is not my first attempt at a running streak. All previous attempts died around the 50th day when something started hurting or I developed some kind of mental block. This time around I've discovered the art of being patient with my body and embracing any tough conditions the weather throws my way. I also have specific goals in mind to have something tangible to look forward to - the next one is reaching 1000 days on November 4th.

BRYAN NIEBANCK'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I am still going strong four years later, although the pandemic has hindered my running since I have spent more time trying to figure out what is next than going on longer runs.

I have still made sure to run every day though, and now that my life has settled down again I am beginning to build my miles.

I graduated seminary school in May, and now I have begun a career as a pastor. 2020 will be the only year during my streak without a marathon, because of cancellations. Troublesome is the fact that marathons are usually on Sundays, when I have to preach!!

MICHAEL FRIEDL'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,139 DAYS

Back in 2013 as I approached my 50th birthday, I committed to running every day. The impact of the consistent mileage was huge. My racing improved to times I hadn't seen since my 30s and I felt bulletproof from injury or infirmity. After 1,511 days I missed on 7/7/17 (long story), then resumed the next day. Even with the one missed day, I ran at least 20 miles for 371 consecutive weeks. However, last spring I developed a soreness in my left knee.

Backing off speed and distance didn't seem to help. Neither did my relentless work schedule. By July, I dropped my 2-mile daily minimum and hoped to see some improvement but none came. By mid-August I finally came to the conclusion that I needed to take some time to just rest to try to reduce the inflammation. So I reluctantly ended my second streak on August 19 after 1139 days. When added to my previous streak of 1511 days, I ran 2650 of 2651 days from 5/18/13 to 8/19/20.

Two weeks of rest and the beginning of PT have shown considerable improvement. I'm looking forward to resuming training again soon.

It was really hard to pull the plug, but I started the streak to improve my running, and I ended it for the same reason. I won't rule out another daily streak, but a streak I want to maintain is breaking 20:00 for 5K, which I've done for 40 consecutive years.

I love this group and will continue to celebrate the amazing accomplishments of all of you. Oh and that includes my son, Luke, who is at RSD 666 today. Streak on, friends!

SEBASTIAN SZYJKA'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I am happy to report that my running streak hit 3 years today [5 September 2020]. I first learned about streak running 10 years ago. I want to give credit to Bill Leibfritz (38 year streak as of this year) for giving me the "idea" of streak running. I worked with Bill as a professor during my first year as a faculty member. Ever since then, I have thought about doing one.

In 2015, I attempted doing 100 push-ups a day as a "streak." That lasted a little over 500 days. However, as it turned out, it was not until 9.5.2017 that I decided to give streak running a try. At the time Bill had shared the concept of running every day, he mentioned that he ran about 4 miles per day. That daily distance had somehow become my "standard," one that has been quite elusive to achieve, let alone maintain.

It is amazing how the law of averages can make it very difficult to increase the bottom line number over the course of a thousand or so days. I can only imagine how difficult it might be to increase an average over 5 or 10 or even 20 years.

Well...gotta run.

JEMAL SWOBADA'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

3 years in the books! I remember counting the days the first couple years but this year I just fell into a rhythm with my running and a more balanced life.

The year kicked off right after my 2nd streak anniversary during the Ouray 50 miler in Colorado and included a top 10 finish in the Natchez Trace 50 Miler just south of Nashville, an 11th place finish in a virtual 5K (still got a bit of speed...), a virtual 15-person team run across the US in 18 days 13 hours, and another 12 straight 100-mile months to bring my streak to 36 months in late July.

I didn't keep track of the mile run streak savers this year but there were a few while on the road traveling the country this past summer and while trying to keep my startup business afloat during COVID.

Fun fact is that I was able to enjoy running in 4 separate National Parks with my family this summer and I tracked runs in 10 separate states over 5 weeks.

At this point, it isn't a question of whether or not I will run but whether or not I'll push myself to keep up the 100-mile months, the ultra-marathons, and explore more ways to stay healthy when so many in the world are fighting this awful virus and fighting for their lives. It's a great lesson to be grateful for every mile.

Not much to report except that I'm still running every day! I'm very grateful that I have my running during the pandemic, and that I live in an area where it's easy to get out and run-in wide-open spaces. As always, running every day has kept me sane! I hope you and yours are well and wish you best regards and good health.

KYLYN SWATSENBORG'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Hi! My name is Kylyn, I'm 16 years old and I've been run streaking for a little over 2 years now.

My family and I started doing 5ks when I was around 9 or 10. My mom lost a significant amount of weight around this time and as we started eating healthier and being more active we started running more.

At the age of 13 my mom inspired/challenged me to run my first half marathon with her. In a torrential downpour and wind gusts strong enough to knock over port-a-potties, I finished the red fern half marathon without having to turn back, like several other racers. It was one of the biggest accomplishments in my life. I've run many other races since then, including another half marathon last year.

My run streak began when my brother was training for his black belt in karate and had to do a minimum of 1 mile a day for 40 days. I did it with him, and when my mom mentioned people do run streaks, I decided to see how long I could continue!

Some of the craziest things I have done to maintain my streak include running around inside my house on stormy days, getting dropped off a mile from home, and racing to beat the clock before midnight.

One of the biggest benefits of run streaking is it helps keep me in shape for competitive basketball. Running is a great full body workout. The challenge and commitment of doing at least a mile a day encourages discipline, determination, and perseverance. I plan on continuing my streak as long as I'm physically able. My goal is to run my first marathon at the age of 18 or sooner.

Streak on fellow streakers!!

Hi my name is Anders. I started my streak 12 September 2018. That way 9/11 is my streak celebration day. And I am still going strong. I run minimum one mile every day. It is my first streak. I have run 5666km since the streak started. That is 7.6km every day in average. My longest run was last weekend when I ran 100k here in Denmark.

SAM BAYS' STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

What started out as a month long run streak challenge I saw posted on Instagram turned into so much more. On October 1st, 2020 my runstreak officially hit 2 years! Yay!

Other than just a handful of times due to illness or minor injuries, I've run 3 miles or more (often much more) every day for two years. It boggles my brain every time I think about because I was NOT a runner at all much more than 3 years ago.

I never envisioned it would go this long, but it's turned into such a driving and rewarding part of my life. It's helped give my life focus. It's introduced me to so many new and encouraging people along the way.

My coach and others have asked multiple times how long I want to keep it going, and I honestly don't know. It could last another 10 years, 10 days, or end tomorrow. I can't say. All I know for sure is that I'm sure as hell enjoying the ride.

MONICA JOHANSSON'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I am so proud of my ambition to run every day during 2 years. Going from a marathon runner to an ultra over these two years has been magic. I was a true optimist even before I started my runstreak, but now I become even better (or worse, depending who is reading). I see what I can achieve with positive thinking and it made me come so far, and I know it can be even more.

I do not fear the darkness in the forest, I look forward to use my flash light. I do not fear the pouring rain, I look forward to use my rain jacket. I do not fear to be tired in the morning, I look forward to meet the sunrise. I do not fear running alone, I look forward listening to a pod or book. This is how I can go on with my positive thinking.

I like to see my running as adventures and to explore different things, it can be a new path in the forest, a new lake to swim in (yes, I love to swim during my runs), a new snack to try (I love to eat during my long running races) or to meet a new (or old) couple of friends for a social run.

The shortest distance over these 2 years has been 2 km and minimum 20 minutes and the longest (so far) was my first 100 miles.

When I started I thought, ok let's see if I can manage 100 days and then it just continued. 20 minutes of fresh air and movement gives harmony and energy to other parts of my life (kids, husband, home, job, friends, etc).

Best sport I have started!

GRANT WOODMAN'S STREAK HITS 23 YEARS

I am still running consistently and am averaging about 9 miles a day. Some weeks/days are more, some are less. I should roll over 100,000 lifetime miles in the spring of 2021 and I just recently rolled over 75,000 for the streak. I posted on the FB page for my 23-year streakiversary, so if you haven't seen that, take a look. With my combined streaks (retired and current) I am 133rd on the all-time list. Streak On!

HEINZ KABUTZ'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Last Wednesday [7 October 2020] was a glorious day on the Island of Crete. Warm weather, not a breath of wind. A summer day in October. Kalathas beach has a couple of hundred yards of soft sand. Longer would be better, but it is good enough and the view is breathtaking.

After dropping the kids at school, I headed down for my daily streak. Here I was, dodging sand castles and hopping over small rocks, as I made my way, huffing and puffing, over the soft sand. I thought of Raven.

A tall Greek man wet from the sea broke my day dreaming with "Not running! Swimming! Sea is p-e-r-f-e-c-t!"

I ignored him, and he kept on shouting after me in great frustration that I should rather swim than run.

I had intended to stop at that point and go for a swim, but his shouting spurred me on. Wonder what he would think if he knew that I did this EVERY day? I picked up the pace and carried on.

More shouting as I ran back past him, with drops of saliva shooting from his mouth "No running. Swim!"

Greece has a long history of runners, from Pheidippides all the way to Dean Karnazes. Not this guy. I realized that if I stopped now, he would win.

After about 15 minutes he had skulked off the beach and I got my swim. No one ever shouted at me for exercising before. But I can imagine many wondering "why is this crazy running in this heat?"

JENNIE OSSENTJUK'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS "Streaking Along the X-Axis"

The third year of my running streak was exponentially harder than year 1 or year 2. Plagued by piriformis for the first few months led to lower weekly mileage and more 1-mile "streak-makers" than for which I ever thought I'd have to settle. Then my mother who had been ill for quite some time died and the weeks surrounding her passing limited my running as well due to logistics of time, and mental strength; I was just exhausted.

A few weeks into 2020 I found myself on a run, a song playing whose lyrics were encouraging, telling me that "maybe this year will be better than the last." I remember smiling and feeling more optimistic and ready to become re-energized thinking about Spring and the renewal it generally brings. Suffice it to say, Spring did not bring renewal.

If I graphed the events occurring in my life in 2020 it would look like a scatter chart and as you start to connect the dots a pattern not unlike a roller-coaster would emerge. Rocky climbs leaving me gasping for air marking my job loss, quarantine, deaths of family members and friends from COVID-19, and my husband's job loss were countered by some points of "easy downhills" experienced while exploring our beautiful natural surroundings, more family time with our kids (a positive plot point for me, probably less so for them); and eventually the cadence of "tempo runs" returned with new jobs, the beginnings of socialization, and places we enjoy opening up again. The sadness, fear and hopelessness buffered by faith, love - and a lot of patience.

Graphs have two axes, however. While we measure vertically the points on the Y-axis; the X-axis is a horizontal straight line, something steady that seems to move forward in a slow plodding way compared to the frenzy of the "Y." As streakers know – our daily runs are our X-axis; the dependable base, something we can control when everything else seems to be completely out of control.

As I celebrate the 3rd anniversary of my streak, I have no race PRs to show for it (and only a few "virtual races" at that) but as I think about this unusual year, I had at least one running "high point" for certain – hitting the elusive "Comma Day," and I know whatever the upcoming year brings, the count of running days will continue over time on the travel of the "X-Axis of Life."

"[M]y finishing photo of the 2018 Boston Marathon where I ran 2:57:41, a time helped by my current streak!"

JONATHAN HOWSE'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

My running streak began more as a question to see how many days I could run in a row to support the consistent daily volume needed to do well in my first Boston Marathon in 2017. The result was I requalified for 2018 and ran a sub 3-hour marathon PR in the rain, headwind, and cold that underscored that year's Boston. I then returned in 2019 for my third year and subsequently requalified for my fourth year which was a virtual race for 2020. I am currently qualified for the 2021 Boston Marathon but am uncertain of the race's fate. As such, this fall and winter centers around two half marathons and a full marathon that are all happening locally.

My running streak also contributed to PRs at the other race distances of 5K, 10K, 15K (Gate River), 10 miles, and half marathon!

As to the question of how many days in a row I can run? I'm still finding out! Until then, I'll keep cranking out daily runs of 1 mile to 26.2 miles!

FROM CANADA;
STARTED STREAK IN 1989

I have been running and racing year round since 1982; but I started my streak in 1989 as a way of trying to be more consistent with my running and improve my performances in races. Having followed Ron Hill, and his streak, it intrigued me to see how a streak could help my own running.

My running has always included a lot of trail running, even when I was racing more on the track and roads in my early days. Most of my running now involves trail, mountain, ultra and snowshoe running. Running trails in the Canadian Wilderness is my passion. Not just established routes, but mostly exploring unmarked trails, following deer tracks, bushwhacking and running frozen backcountry lakes in the winter. I am happiest after returning from this type of run totally exhausted with a massive smile on my face.

PROUDEST ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

1. Having run every day since December 26, 1989.

2. Completing an unsupported traverse of running the Akshayuk Pass on Baffin Island in the Canadian Arctic...and yes, I saw 3 polar bears in the wild.

3. Completing the Yukon Arctic Ultra twice, including a second place finish, and the 3rd fastest 100-mile time ever run on the course.

4. Winning the Haliburton Forest 100 miler in my first 100-mile attempt, and then running the second fastest time ever the following year.

5. Building a running adventure business where I can share my passion for trail running through coaching and race directing, and seeing others meet and exceed their goals.

SARAH BERTHAG LJONES' STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I don't really remember how it all started. I had heard about run streak and I think it was my sister that started it. Just a couple of days after her start, I got inspired and started as well. I had now plan for how long I would run. Just to try it out for a while. My sister ended her streak after being sick and ending up at hospital. I kept on running.

Most days I have my dog with me, which is a good motivator to get out.

I have memories from my first year with run streak, before it really turned out to be a routine. I could be in bed, just about to sleep, when I realized I had not run that day. A deep breath and then up, get dressed, run, quick shower and then back to bed. Now a days I do most of my runs first thing in the morning so that I won't forget. It's a good way to start the day.

During these three years I have done my first marathon, and a couple of half marathons. But mostly I just run short rounds between 2,5km to 5km. I have a very busy life with three kids with special needs, two dogs and I'm a business owner. I think that running every day keeps me sane in my insane world.

The big question is: How do you end a run streak or do you run every day for the rest of your life.....?

NATASHA PEOPLES' STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Today [19 October 2020] marks my two year Streak Anniversary! While it comes with a little less fanfare than last year, I'm no less proud of the accomplishment - and perhaps more so, considering the wild and whacky circumstances that 2020 has thrown our way.

As a nurse practitioner, I've worked all through the pandemic and the work has only gotten busier through the year. Thanks to family and friends who support (tolerate?) my running obsession, I've managed to continue the streak.

Virtual running friends in various groups have made the streaking much more fun and motivated me to push myself when all the races were cancelled.

I volunteered with a kids' running club and was rewarded with the only in-person race of my year, helping a 12-year old cross the finish line of my slowest and proudest 10K. Happy running, friends!

The best experiences:

- * Firsts: first marathon, first ultra during that time.
- * Most beautiful: 2Oceans Ultramarathon, KiniTrail, around Chiemsee lake.
- * Warmest / coldest: 40 degrees Porto, -14 degrees Vaterstetten.
- * Hardest: the day after the cervical surgery. Broken toes, blisters, twisted ankle etc. were also included.
- * Slowest: the day after the 2Oceans, in Capetown even uphill. 🏔️

As always with big decision in life (and exactly the same as going vegan), it was only planned for 30 days and then just kept running further and longer, until Christmas, into the next year, and so on. I'm a newly paid up stalker!

RSD 523 was a workout of 10-11 miles @ M-tempo (5:52 min/mi pace +/- 05) a bit hot on that section, and 2-3 miles at threshold (5:30 +/- 5). It wasn't max effort, but it was a confidence builder! I ended up with a unofficial and unintentional half marathon PR of 1:14:50. I'll be hoping to podium the fastest stalkers marathon list once racing becomes a thing!

Check out my activity on Strava: <https://strava.app.link/9e730vZpYab> -- moving time elapsed time! I had to slow down a bit due to some tight cornering in the course. Also, my water bottle was hidden in bushes at mile 8. So, I had to dig it out. I'll definitely achieve faster.

I started running about 35 years ago when I was an aerobic instructor at the local YMCA. Most of the instructors were runners so I felt I had to run also. It was an on/off relationship with running until my friend asked me to start a running streak on November 1, 2017. Three years ago!!

Now running is part of who I am. I run early in the morning when it's peaceful and I thank God for the ability to run and I pray for those who want to run but can't for various reasons.

I'm grateful to the people in my Facebook running groups who motivate me everyday. They are amazing!

JON LEIDING'S NEW STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Three years! Seems like a small block of time compared to other longer streaks but, each day is never a given. Had one streak for over 5 years then injury but these days, I'm back to running well. Just ran a LIVE 5k race over the Halloween weekend and placed Top 3. I'm also training for a LIVE Marathon on November 21st.

In 2013, during my first streak, I was sideswiped by a car and opted to run in bright outfits to be seen. Seems to work. I get more attention from my Running Friends and even share stories from past races as a Pacer for local 1/2 marathons.

2020 has been a struggle for my business. As an Entertainer, we were only allowed 50 people events for a long time and even had been on unemployment for a while. One thing remained constant: my enjoyment of running. It keeps me sane and gives me solitude when I want it. It also allows me chances to interact with people as I run past. You'll never know who you might meet, just by saying "Hi."

How long can I keep my Streak going? No one knows but, I do know I look forward to each day when I get to "Lace 'Em Up!"

TERRENCE TOOLEN'S STREAK HITS 11 YEARS

My Dad has owned a running shoe store in Shiloh, IL for over 22 years. He ran every day for over 19 years before he had to end his streak to have double knee surgery. I live in Texas and have run off and on since high school. Then one day, 11 years ago today [4 November 2020] to be exact, I decided I would start running again. This time when I got back, I wrote it down. Time of day, date, temp, distance and elapsed time. This made me accountable. Since then I have not stopped. I started out running 1.7 miles minimum for the first year or so. Currently do no less than 4 a day, but routinely run 7 or 10 on a regular basis.

I do not run many races as my competitive side is in Disc Golf where I am a professional. I will run more races later. My main goal is to surpass my Dad and stay healthy. I was a smoker when I started running and have quit that 7.5 years ago. Running is my Zen. I have a slogan printed on my RoadID that says "I cant NOT run."

JOHN RENZ'S STREAK HITS 14 YEARS

Originally, I started this streak on 1 January 2005 when I moved from Indiana to Florida. Unfortunately, I ran a few ½-mile days due to a dental illness, and, therefore, did not meet the criteria of this club, I had to adjust my streak date to the present one to meet all club requirements.

I've always been a focused runner believing that running everyday was a good goal to reach. Well, I didn't stay in Florida for long because Hurricane Katrina chased me back to Indiana in 2006. The past 14 years have been easy...I look forward to my normally early morning run of four miles.

At 70, my interest in speed has waned, but I can still run at a fast clip if necessary. In 2015, I bought a camper van, and I must say that traveling in the van has brought me much excitement as each new location provides a new place to run.

I first became interested in streaks when living in England I read about Sir Ron Hill. I'm a retired Air Force Senior Master Sergeant and happily married to my wife Ann for the past 49 years. Running in the military was a big benefit and I was fortunate to run on some of the big tracks in England.

I actually did quite well against the military runners, but the British Athletic Club members were quite a challenge to race with. I usually placed in the top 10 percent and even won a few races in my younger years in the 1980's.

Now, I run for fun, and find my daily run to be the one thing that is so rewarding to do each day. Each year my goal is to always run a minimum of 100 miles a month. Just last month, I was happy to meet that goal for the 100th straight month. I hope to continue to run every day the rest of my life...knowing full well that the ability to run most likely indicates I'm in good health and in good mental condition also. Running is fun, and who doesn't want to have fun!

BARRY SACKETT'S STREAK HITS 11 YEARS

I ran this morning [4 November 2020] for the first day of year 11 of my running streak. This has been one of the strangest for all of the reasons it has been strange for everyone, but I have come to a new appreciation of my ability to push a mental and physical reset button each day. My mileage has been rough since mid-summer when I did an FKT on a new trail:

<https://youtu.be/Z6DXGJMpJ94>

I also did a TedX talk last fall about my running streak and running 100 milers: <https://youtu.be/YN28qmS6xio>

So despite a little YouTube publicity I miss racing and running with others, so I look forward with meeting some new running friends after moving to Sioux Falls, SD and keeping the streak a live one day at a time.

MELISSA OLSEN'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

My passion for running began when I was 5 and watched my dad run marathons. After his death in 1985, my interest in running sparked more. I have completed 7 full marathons and many other road races. After my last marathon in 2017, I decided to begin my streak! I have run though heat, cold, sickness, injuries and much more. My streak has taught me that there is always time to spend on something you love!

The third year of my streak went really well despite the restrictions imposed by the Covid pandemic. With all races off I concentrated on a little known route called the Yorkshire Round, a 83 mile route over the 20 highest peaks in North Yorkshire. My friend Sam and I managed to complete the round in a FKT of 20hrs54min. This was also my longest run of the year and was followed by my shortest of 1 mile the next day. Over the year I managed an average of over 5 miles per day. Looking forward now to the next year when hopefully racing in some form will recommence.

KELLY NELSON'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Hi! I was super excited to hit the five-year mark- feels good to graduate into the next category. Not much for exciting news this year. Mileage was up a little, but honestly pretty consistent. I was unbelievably thankful for the streak this year.

Working from home with kid's distance learning in the middle of a pandemic - let's just say it was so nice to "have" to run away for a while every day. And pretty sure my family was equally as excited to see me leave, and come back with a much better attitude! Anyway- no plans to quit. It's what keeps me sane. Take care!

NICK CAPERNA'S STREAK HITS 13 YEARS

13 years without a miss! Over the past year the challenge has been increased by the pandemic related difficulties that everyone has dealt with. Happy to say that I have managed to keep the miles rolling by each day. And of course, as always, running has provided some solace and distraction from what has otherwise been a rather strange year. Looking forward to 2021 and hopeful that my 14th year will be a little more ordinary.

DAN PEREIRA'S STREAK HITS 30 YEARS

I would like to start by giving my wife Erl "E" Pamesa Pereira a honorable mention. She stepped off a plane from the Philippines two years ago 11/13/2018 standing 5' 3" and weighing 155lbs.

A whole lot of wife lol, when we met she was about 125lbs. Her running streak started the next day on 11/14/2018. Since the 14th she has not missed one day. By the end of her first year she had dropped to 132lbs. She then got a job at a world-wide package delivery company. Her first month there she came home stiff and sore every day from moving so much weight. "E," as I call her, added her work to her running streak having never been late nor missed a day at her job no matter how tired or sore she is. She is now a sexy bundle of sculpted mussel, and at 120lbs looks and feels great.

Thanks for the well wishes on my thirty-year streak, it would be thirty-three years but I missed a day in Japan thirty years ago. A few years ago, I looked ahead and thought reaching the thirty-year mark would be hard, at that time I had no idea we would be dealing with a global Corona pandemic that would threaten my streak. Corona has not found me or anyone I know as yet and, knock on wood, I hope it never does. My mom is eighty-seven years old and still running, I sometimes worry about her age and the virus finding her but so far so good.

I had an extreme bout of sciatica a few years ago when an old back injury flared up but I cured it using my finish sander treatment. This was the closest I have come to missing a day but thankfully never did. Now a days I am just cruising along running about 5k twice a day to keep my heart and lungs strong in case Corona does find me.

On the morning of my thirty-year streak anniversary I thought I would try to roll back time and go for a sub six-minute first mile, I have not done one in years. So without any speed work and weighing 148lbs (138lbs is my racing weight) I set out.

In the first quarter mile I checked my watch and saw a 6:05 pace, feeling good at that point I opened the throttle slightly, checked my watch a bit later and was rewarded with a 5:55. Concentrating on staying relaxed I grabbed another gear, checked my watch again and saw 5:45 pace. With about a quarter to go I knew what was coming as my legs began to tighten, doing my best to stay relaxed my pace slowed and as my watch chimed out the mile I looked and saw a 6:07, oh well I thought. I felt good and it felt good to be gasping for breath from a good hard effort.

In closing, I would like to say E and I are running every day and don't intend to stop. My mom is too but will run in place at home during the snow and ice. She also will take an injury break if one crops up, but that's very rare.

THOMAS COSGROVE'S STREAK ENDS
AFTER 3,248 DAYS

My second running streak ended on October 8, 2020. Every one of 3248 (if my math is correct) runs were done outside - never less than 2 miles and typically slightly over 4 miles. That entailed running in 14 inches of snow a few times and once at around 20 degrees below zero.

This streak spanned time between hernia repair surgeries - right side repaired in November 2011 - and left side on October 8 2020. I did run prior to heading to the hospital for the surgery. I felt pretty good on the morning after surgery and contemplated a slowly paced 1 mile run to keep the streak going. While contemplating, I involuntarily coughed and my priority immediately shifted to not coughing again due to the discomfort.

Running was interrupted for 6 days but my new streak started on October 15, 2020 and I look forward to rejoining the active list in 2021.

KEN BROWN'S STREAK
HITS 35 YEARS

Thirty-five years of daily movement has arrived. Honestly, it has been a wonderful ride. Like all streakers, I have run with injuries, lousy weather, time limits and a million more reasons to stop.

Along the way I have met wonderful people and written 35 years' worth of diaries. My minimum has always been one mile. My maximum has been 50 miles back in 95.

I have completed over 100 marathons. Hosted my own 10-mile winter run - The Farmer Brown Frozen Bun Run. It was a prediction run with no watches. The closest (maybe the slowest) to their predicted time was the winner. We had a real shotgun start and a finish at our barn door. Yes, I am really a farmer.

Our HABIT (as some would say) is mostly a healthy one. My family doc has said for years that without this HABIT I would be diabetic (given my family history).

I even started an annual walk-your-age golf outing with a good friend back when we were 57. We completed 71 holes this past September. And God willing we will continue into the future. To all of us---please keep moving because remember it is far better to wear out than to rust out!! May God bless us all—

ALAN FOULDS' STREAK HITS 5 YEARS "Finally, Proficient"

When my streak began five years ago, I had no thoughts of keeping it going this long. Back then I was looking for a new running challenge. I checked my notes (I, like many runners, keep extensive notes) and found that my longest streak at the time was 32 days. I set out to beat it. When I got there, it was only a few days until the end of the year and I was on vacation, so I thought what the heck, I'll keep going until Dec. 31. Then, of course, 50 days was just around the corner, and then 100. Before you know it, I was bearing down on a year, and I was hooked.

At about the 1,000-day mark I set my sights on five years. After all, who doesn't want to be considered "proficient?" Every few days since then I have checked the list, marking what position I was at in the country, as well as my state, county, and town. All the while I kept track of the person above me and person below me – Christine Jacobs and Matthew Montain. I don't know them - one lives in Tennessee and the other in Minnesota – but I feel as if I do. Fellow travelers on the way to the mountaintop.

Last week it got exciting as I watched Christine hit the five-year mark, getting her new title bestowed upon her. At that point I became the dean of the Neophytes, tops in the bottom category, a position I held for three whole days. Then it was my turn. I enlisted my wife, who is temporarily sidelined from running (although continues to walk six miles per day) to come and run the last 100 yards with me. Then it was time to watch Matthew join the crowd up over the five-year line. Now it's on to "Experienced." Congratulations to my virtual buddies who I have been watching and rooting for from afar.

MICHAEL RAPLES' STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

As I approach my two-year run streak tomorrow [16 November 2020], I never could have imagined what a wild ride it would be.

I decided to start a run shortly after the 2018 New York City Marathon. It was not a great race for me, I struggled the last few miles. I needed some motivation to get back into running. I figured a run streak would help, wasn't sure how long I was going to do it for. The longest streak before that was a 30-day challenge so this current one certainly beyond my expectations.

I have managed to get my mile in every day usually going well beyond the minimum. I have been running about 2500 miles a year. I look forward to many more years of running.

I am also grateful for the running streak because it helps me through the lockdown and without it, I would have just stayed inside.

MERIANN BOXALL'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Wow Three Years! Time has gone so quickly. When I started my streak with a goal of one month to challenge myself, it would have been hard to imagine that I would still be streaking 3 years later.

I have so many great memories from my runs over the years and I have had some great experiences. I have two dogs who have done much of my streak with me, Ralph-a yorkie mix, and Bailey-a golden doodle (Stella my dachshund also ran before she moved on to heaven). Although they don't run over a mile with me they sure love getting out every day and look forward to it.

I also have 2 great kiddos who run, scooter, and bike along with me. They are my favorite to go with. They often help make sure I have run each day because they know it is important to me. My husband is my number one supporter and I don't think I could have done this without him cheering me on.

There has been a lot of changes in our world in the last 3 years and I am grateful that I have committed to something that allows me to get out and make taking care of myself a priority.

As a stay-at-home mom and real estate agent running has been my outlet to make sure that I am in the game for the things that are most important to me at home!

I have had some fun experiences over the years...I have run in multiple states and even in another country, I ran while recovering from surgery, I ran through a couple of sicknesses, I have ran barefoot, I have run in circles and circles and circles around a park while my kids played, have run on vacations, I have run after a few martinis when I had forgotten earlier, I have run in work clothes and just before midnight, I ran on a ferry once (they frowned upon it but I got it done), I have run in the most beautiful of places and I have stopped to take pictures and enjoy the views along the way.

I have shared it with my family (both here at home and even with my nieces and nephews) and I think this has instilled a love of running in all of them.

Will I streak forever? Probably not. I am super inspired by all of the really long streaks that I get to read all about, but ultimately I understand that maybe it has been important for a specific time and place in my life and may not be a forever thing for me, but as for today...I will keep streaking and take a moment to feel thankful for what I have accomplished in the past 3 years and all of the incredible things I have seen and experiences I have had.

Wow, what an honor to be part of such an amazing group of people. I was going to celebrate tomorrow [message dated 20 November 2020], but got the email from SRI/USRSA today. So here's to celebrating today!

I didn't realize how strong I could / would be. This streak has been my constant through so many wins and losses.

My daily runs give me what I call "forced quality alone time" where I am alone with my thoughts, my podcast friends, my music friends, my waving neighbors, my cheering friends, and friends running alongside me. I've cried while running, laughed, and talked on the phone. I thought of #MayIShareYourStory while on a run, and have the honor of a friend bringing its passion to life with me.

I've pushed my daughters in a stroller while running, and now they are riding bikes with me while I run. I've been in the hospital on run days, and I ran a marathon.

This streak means the world to me. I don't run fast, and often don't run far, but my runs are mine. I love being part of this unique group. I know one day my streak will come to an end, but for now, I'm shooting for that COMMA! Love you all. You are the inspiration that keeps me going.

Today [19 November 2020] marks my 3-year streak of running at least 1 mile every day! I have started streaks before, but this is the longest consecutive streak that I have ever kept.

I have run through sick days, international travel, and most recently, pregnancy! I am currently 37.5 weeks pregnant with our first baby, and I'm proud to say that even though some days have been tough, I've continued my streak throughout my pregnancy. I truly believe that it's helped minimize my symptoms and will help me with labor and recovery.

I am going to keep streaking as long as I can; we will see how long this can go!

CHAD SHILDON'S STREAK HITS 10 YEAR

I am still happily running every day, which hit a magical streak number of 10 years, last week.

Being grateful to run each day is an understatement. Life is full but I make sure to pay myself first each day, getting a morning run in. I've run my streak through every type of weather, broken bones, colds, flu, Covid and even a blood clot in my left lung (yikes).

I've done 163 lifetime marathons and ultras and 123 of those during the streak. 2020 is the fourth consecutive year of hitting 3,000 miles or more. I've only ever run one mile twice, and that was during the first year, very early in the streak. Over the past five years, my minimum has been five miles a day, with the exception of three days during the blood clot. I've run 20 marathons or more, during three different years. Last year, I ran 156 miles on a treadmill over a 48 hour span.

Mainly Marathons is an organization that I have run dozens of marathons with and couldn't be more pleased with the events they put on. Within that circle, I'm a beginner, a rookie, an amateur. They often host some of the most prolific marathoners in the US, as well as the world. I've often said, "when you think you're the toughest dog on the block, it's time to find a new block." If you're looking for some fun, hit one of their events up. You won't be disappointed.

My goal is to hit 200 marathons in 2021, whether they be live/in person or virtual. As long as I register, pay my fee, I'm not going to discriminate on the type of marathon. Things are too crazy to allow yourself to get slowed down and life is far too important to not live it. Pre said it best, "to give anything less than your best is to sacrifice the gift."

Stay Hard America.

HITS 3 YEARS

I started my run streak on November 21, 2017 with the goal of completing a Thanksgiving to New Year's Day streak. That then became a 1-year streak and I now find myself at 3 years.

I should add that for 2017 - 2018, I totaled 172 miles from Nov. 21, 2017 to the end of that year; 2140 miles in 2018; 2246 miles in 2019; and, for 2020, I am at 2230 as of the 20th. That is a total of 6788 miles - not bad for being 67 years old!

I must report that I am not sure if I will continue the streak, or at least not be so compulsive that I am on the treadmill at 11:30 PM or, after driving for 15 hours across the country, that I will take the dog out at 10:00pm to get in my one mile for the day. If it happens, fine, but if I really need a complete rest day, I will probably take it. But, as a fellow stalker (the one who got me started) has told me, it may be harder to quit.

DEREK LONG'S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

Since my last streak-a-versary, I was chosen as an ambassador for P3R which is the non-profit that organizes most Pittsburgh road races. As a P3Runner, I ran a bunch of virtual races. I did the Pittsburgh Marathon, the Pittsburgh Marathon 5k, the Liberty Mile, the Pittsburgh 10 Miler, and the Turkey Trot Double Gobble.

I also completed the Great Race Across Tennessee. I had a pretty decent plan to average the 5.5 miles a day, but then life happened. My family and I bought a new house, my mom was diagnosed with cancer which caused her to pass away in September, and my school district moved to all virtual learning. Because I got behind, I had to log 226.2 miles in August - 45 of which came in the last 4 days. The highlight was running a lot of miles being paced by my oldest son on his bike.

I also completed the Great Allegheny Passage race. Normally, it is a relay race from Pittsburgh to Cumberland, MD. Since it was virtual this year, some other P3Runners and I met at North Park just north of Pittsburgh. It is a 5-mile loop, so my team and I each ran laps until we reached 150. I did 6 laps totally 30 miles. It was sunny and hot with almost no shade, but we finished!

TARA HUMBLE'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

It's the second year of my running streak! I have had so many achievements since last year, and I owe it to my running.

I had personal best for one and two-mile, 5 and 10k, and half marathon runs. I also placed 2nd and 3rd in a few runs, along with a 3rd place overall female for a 10k run.

I've done two 26.2-mile challenges, and they meant a lot to me. I had never run that distance before ever, and because of streaking I was able to achieve it.

I've met so many people in the running association that I feel like I've known my whole life. I'm a better runner, athlete, and person because of them. They truly are the best support and encouragement anyone could have in their lives. They are with you through the good, bad, and ugly times. I'm truly blessed to have them in my life, and I've learned so much from them.

I'm still keeping my almost 90lb weight loss off, and feel I'm a stronger, and faster runner than I was last year. I'm so glad I decided to do this.

Coming from 18-minute miles to running a 22:01 5k, running my fastest mile which was a 6:21, and finishing 26.2 run twice in under 5 hours was a huge deal to me.

I can't wait to see what is in store for this year. Running is so many different things for me, and literally has saved my life more than once. Hard work and dedication really do pay off in the end!

Running has always been a part of my life but up until a couple years ago, I ran just for fun and participated in group relay teams like Hood to Coast, local 5-10Ks, and the occasional half marathon but never properly trained, set time goals, or really thought much about placing.

In 2017, something switched and I wanted to challenge myself in new ways so I joined Team Athena, a women’s running group in Portland, Oregon and started setting and achieving a number of goals including running my first marathon (CIM) and ended up a minute and nine seconds shy from qualifying for Boston.

I started my first 5K+ streak in 2018 but on day 57, had a serious fall that led to two surgeries and some time off but was determined to try again.

On January 1, 2019, I started my second streak of running a 5K+ per day and have since had a number of top placements in my age group, multiple PRs, and my first podium placement.

I’m still enjoying running every day especially the days when I’m running faster than my high school splits! Each day, running reminds me to be grateful for my health and that life is a gift and should be celebrated. I’m so thankful for the amazing support I have from my family and all of my running buddies who keep me going.

CARRIE CHISHOLM’S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Four years of running at least two miles a day and still going strong! Only one “official” race in 2020 before Covid hit (Phunt 50K) but I’ve done a few virtuals. I did have an injury (took a tumble and needed 9 stitches to close up my knee), but I managed to keep my streak going with some slow, careful runs while it healed. Looking forward to hitting day 1,500 next month!

ERYN SINCLAIR'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

As I am hitting my 5-year as a streaker, I could not be more grateful. As healthcare worker, I have needed my streak more than ever. This year I accomplished my first trail marathon and 50k. I can't wait to see where my journey goes.

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And---which is more---you'll be a Man, my son!

THE FINISH LINE

By: Mark Washburne

In our last issue of The Streak Registry (TSR), we celebrated the 20th anniversary of the founding of the United States Running Streak Association in August 2000. As indicated by the name, our association initially only included streaks from athletes in the United States. It would not be until early 2012 that we expanded our ranks to include streaks from around the world and Streak Runners International (SRI) was born.

SRI was slow to catch on with runners outside the United States. Our first list of International streak runners was published in the Spring 2012 TSR and included just 5 streaks: 3 from the United Kingdom and 2 from Canada. One year later, our Spring 2013 TSR list had grown to only 10 streaks: 4 from Canada, 3 from the United Kingdom, 2 from Australia, and 1 from New Zealand. In the Winter 2014-2015 TSR, we were proud to include the great Ron Hill's streak on our active list for the first time but even that international list included just 21 streaks: 9 from the United Kingdom, 5 from Canada, 4 from New Zealand, 2 from Australia, and 1 from India.

The first streak we listed from Sweden appeared in the Summer 2015 TSR issue from Ellen Westfelt. Ms. Westfelt, whose streak started on 4 September 2013, still has the longest registered streak from Sweden. She is also the face of our cover and lead story on her country that now has the second most streak runners behind the United States in the world. The Swedish streak explosion appeared slowly on our lists. It would take another year before we would see our next Swedish streak registered. In the Summer 2016 TSR, Frederik Gustafsson's retired streak of 366 days was listed. The third Swedish streak to appear came from Mia Strand and was first listed in the Winter 2016-2017 TSR. Ms. Strand, who started her streak on 29 October 2015 and whose streak now ranks 9th on our Swedish list, was kind enough to help SRI/USRSA with translation when our web designer, Loren Long, created Sweden's streak list in their native language. Thanks again Mia and Loren!

As we end 2020, our International list now has over 600 registered streaks from 47 countries. Sweden has 147 streaks (131 active, 16 retired) listed recently surpassing the United Kingdom with 124 streaks (90 active, 34 retired) and Canada with 101 streaks (82 active, 19 retired) for the number two spot in the world. The rise of Sweden to the second position with streaks listed in the world comes as a bit of a surprise given its population size – about 10 million people – and geographic location that lies partly on the cold Arctic circle. Maybe the reason why we see so many streak runners in Sweden (and for that matter the U.K. and Canada) also explains why Minnesota is the top state in the United States for people who run daily. If you made an excuse every time the weather was challenging in those locations, you would not get many runs in over the year.

Speaking of running in challenging times, the world-wide pandemic has made 2020 one of the most difficult years in modern memory. Like many of you, I have worked from home since my college in New Jersey where I teach American history went virtual in the middle of March. For me, it has been difficult to adapt to a new method of teaching being stuck in front of a computer for hours at a time. On a positive note, I no longer have to commute to work leading to some more free time and an increase in the mileage of my daily runs. I am now on pace to run more miles this year than I have ever done since I first started logging my miles back in 1985.

While my mileage has increased in 2020, my racing has not. I typically run 30 to 40 races a year but in 2020 I have only managed to complete two virtual races. In early September, I ran the virtual Boston Marathon around loops around my neighborhood so I could keep my other streak alive at 16 consecutive Bostons (2005-2020). The next week I ran a virtual 5K from a race that I signed up for in March that was postponed. Both the virtual marathon and 5K were P.W.s (Personal Worst) for me so I am waiting for real races to return again. Until then and as always, I want to wish everyone good luck as we each run the roads and trails – every day!
